THE DRAMA

JOHN MASON "Drugged." Broad Street Theatre A millionaire haunted with a past.

THEATRICAL FORECAST

While only one new drama opens tonight, and but one other is scheduled for next week, the managers promise a brilliant season for Philadelphia play-goers. Of the productions booked, comedies seem to predominate, and of these the majority proved their merits as mirth-stimulants on Broadway last season. Later on we shall, however, see Mrs. Fisks in a new comedy, and such established favorites as Maud Adams, Ethel Barrymore and John Drew in new dramas.

Helen Ware, whose appearances during the last few years have increasingly captivated the public, and whose presentations are always marked by an exceptional personal charm, will appear as the star in a new three-act play, "The Revolt," by Edward Locks, at the Adelphi Theatre next Monday evening, September 21. Miss Ware was last seen in this city in "Within the Law," playing the part of Mary Turner.

"The Revolt" is announced as a play of today. It was produced last season in New York, and of all the various dramas dealing with the "social problem," sponsored by vice committees and killed or suppressed, "The Revolt" alone has survived. Miss Ware's supporting company includes Sara Enright, Beth Franklin, Susanne Willa, Annette Tyler, Rosana Logan, Jessie Ralph, Alphons Ethier, Van Renssler Townsend, John Walsh, Howard Gould, Sam Edwards, Fred W. Peters, Edwin Mordant and Frank

Following John Mason in "Drugged" at the Broad Street Theatre, Margaret Anglin will open a two weeks' engagement in "Lady Windemere's Fan." After this Philadelphians will be enabled to see Mrs. Fiske in a new comedy by John Luther Long, the celebrated creator of "Madam Butterfly." Mr. Long's comedy is located in London, about 1750, during the Garrick and Peg Woffington period, and is announced as a play of rippling humor.

At the Broad, in succession during the season, will appear Fanny Ward in "Madam President," Billie Burke John Drew. Maud Adams and Ethel Barrymore, each in a new play; Frances of those ripping, stirring, pulse-tingling master-Starr in "The Secret," by Henri Bernstein; the Lyceum Players in repertoire, a three-star combination, including William Gillette, Marie Doro and Blanche Bates, in Charles Frohman's revival of "Diplomacy." Subsequently each of these stars will appear in a new production. "The Passing Show of 1914," Messrs. Shubert's third annual musical revue, will open at the Lyric Theatre October 4. The cast includes such favorites as Jose Collins, Ethel Amorita Kelly, Marilynn Miller, Frances Demarest, George W. Monroe, Robert Emmett Keane, T. Roy Barnes, Harry Fisher and Artle Mehlinger. At the Lyric will also later appear Mesers. Shubert's "The Whirl of the World," which is announced as the New York Winter Garden's greatest musical success. The producers, taking advantage of the dancing craze, have made this entertainment replete with novelty dances.

Among the attractions booked to appear at the Adelphi Theatre after Miss Ware's appearance n "The Revolt" are "The Things That Count." a romantic drama produced by W. A. Brady; "Kitty Mackay," a delightful Scotch comedy which ran eight months at the Comedy Theatre. New York, with Melly McIntyre in the principal role; "Peg O' My Heart," Hartley Manners phenomenally successful comedy; "High Jinks," musical comedy: Grace George, in "The Truth." and Guy Bates Post in "Omar, the Tentmaker." The Ziegfeld Follies will remain at the Forrest Theatre until September 26. On the 25th Mont. comery and Stone will open a new musical comedy, the engagement lasting two weeks. Other attractions to follow are Henry W. Savage's Hungarian operetta "Sur"; "Around the Block," a musical comedy: Who Little Cara Klaw and Erlanger's spectacular production of "Ben-Hur," how on its 18th amount tour, and Julia Sanderson, Donald Brian and Joseph Cawthorne in "The Girl from Utalia" a new Frannan production. The Mask and Wiz will give their annual entertainment at the Porrest during

The next attraction at the Corrick Theatre will be "Nearly Married." the Cohan and Harris comedy, with Bruce Meline in the title role This will open September 10. It will be surreeded by 'The Yellow Tielet." on Chrober D. with Florence Baed, a Philadelphia girl, and Michael Morton leading the cast There will follow Julian Efficies, in "The Committee Cirps: "Potash and Perlimitter" and "Seven Keya to Baldpate," with Wellace Edlinger and Gall Kane leading the original New York company.

"Pilate's Daughton" a modern minute may will oven at the Chestnut Stort (two Moune September 28 with Constance Meline us feeding the cast. Miss Molineaux was a member of the Continues Players' Stock Constant at the Crieds. nut Street Theatre during 1910 and 1914, and

SERIOUS MELODRAMA OF FINANCIER WITH PAST

John Mason in High-Class Play By Owen Davis, of "Nellie, the Beautiful

Cloak Model," Fame. Reformation is never without its fascination. Whether municipalities or men turn from the broad road of a dubiously profitable or pleasant past, the halo of regeneration is thenoeforth worn with unique distinction. We have all our secret admiration for the hero with a mysterious and ambiguous career left behind. Therefore the greater interest attaches to the appearance of John Mason, one of the ablest American actors, in a rarefled melodrama, entitled "Drugged," at the Broad Street Theatre tonight.

The author of "Drugged," Owen Davis, has confessedly put his "past" behind him. With the production of "Drugged" Mr. Davis assumes the laurel-wreath of the serious melodramatist. Be it known, however, that Mr. Davis is by ne means a tyro. He has been, for a period of a dozen years, one of the most financially successful writers of plays. None of these plays, it is quite certain, ever has been the subject of discussions at ethical culture societies nor of sage and profound studies on the drama. Mr. Davis has not moved in the same circles as Ber-

Among Mr. Davis' best known and successful melodramas were "Convict 999," "The Lighthouse by the Sea," "Chinatown Charlie," "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," and "Shorty McCabe." In all, his plays of this type numbered a hundred. We have Mr. Davis' word for it that 70 per cant, were hugely successful, his income averaging upward of $20,000 a year, Mr. Davis personally has not been as well known as his plays. Now, however, that he had put aside a tidy sum, and the begging of a good play outside the Broadway offices will not neces itate ejections from Sixth avenue lodgings and c des . and rolls, Mr. Davis intends to devote his the to high-class drama. To be quite fair to Mr. Davis, whose confession is naively sincere, we must admit that many of us who assume highbrow attitudes are not immune to the thrills pieces of the "Power of Money" and "Her Mar-ringe Vow" order. Thrills add to the joy of life, and if Mr. Davis cannot be classed with Ibsen and the darkbrown Danish-Norwegian classicists he has made an amusement-loving world his debtor. Consequently, with mingled anticipations and hope, we look forward to seeing his play this

"Drugged," in which Mr. Davis says he "has put the result of his highest and sincerest endeavor," is laid in California. The hero, John Dexter, is a self-made man, prosperous, an influential railroad official, ideal husband, impeccable father. The family here type. He, too. however, like his creator, has reformed from a past-dark, atclater, threatening. It rises and dogs his footstops, haunts and terrifles him. Exposure, we are told, comes early in the play. Action and thrills follow fast, with the eternal play of romance, and a leavening of humor. Typically American, the drama is designed to bear its message in the movement of general
