

ATTORNEY, A GREEK, SAYS U. S. SHOULD PROTEST TO TURKEY

Friend of Consul Tsakonias Here Declares Abrogation of Treaties Concerns Safety of Americans.

Soterios Nicholson, of Washington, D. C., a Greek attorney and student of international law, who is visiting in Philadelphia, today told how the abrogation of the treaties by Turkey was of vital concern to the United States since by that action the safety of every foreign resident in that country was threatened, including thousands of missionaries and other Americans who make their permanent home there.

Mr. Nicholson was at the office of Aristide Tsakonias, the Greek Consul here. He is a personal friend of Consul Tsakonias, and on his way to New York stopped off here to visit the official. "I do not think," he said, "that the significance of the capitulations made years ago by Turkey and now abrogated is generally appreciated. Under them foreign residents in Turkey have had the right to be judged by their own respective consulates exclusively; secondly, they have possessed special civil privileges such that in all questions of criminal procedure and in fact of general deportment, they have been liable solely to their own governments. Thus, no Turkish official has had the right to enter into the dwelling of a foreigner or arrest one, unless equipped with a special permit from the consulate concerned. Thirdly, the native government was not allowed to levy professional taxes upon the foreign residents; and fourthly, it could not regulate the amount of its customs duties without the consent of the foreign powers. In general, the above privileges may be regarded as constituting extra territorial rights, and it is chiefly the ones coming under the first two headings that will affect the status of the Americans living in Turkey.

"First there is the legal aspect to be considered. As others are already pointed out, it is rather astonishing that treaties which have constituted the very condition of Turkey's existence as a State should be abrogated without consulting and without negotiation. Such a violation of mutual agreement is a very serious matter indeed, but Turkey knows that now the American people are hardly pleased with their own troubles at home and hopes that they will be unable to resort to effective measures in denouncing the violation.

"Foreign statesmen of the preceding generations had forced the above concessions from the Turkish Government because it was evident to them that under ordinary circumstances the said Government could not guarantee security and freedom to their nationals. The country had simply not reached that stage in the evolution of political organization which would render it capable of supervising the affairs of the citizens of foreign countries. But with the advent of the new regime in 1908, the Turkish Government has been continuously and insistently clamoring for the abrogation of the capitulations, claiming that conditions had been reached since freedom had been declared and just government had been established. Nevertheless, the Powers refused to consent.

"Facts justified their course; the Armenian massacres, troubles in Syria, oppression in Arabia, the insurrection in Albania and the maladministration of affairs in Macedonia following immediately after the granting of the constitution, proved that much had yet to be done in the line of political evolution.

"The Ottoman Government has not an effective guarantee of the safety of foreign lives and interests, and has violated treaties that insure the safety. In which case I think that it is the duty of the United States, at present the greatest neutral State, to declare to Turkey that this country will own its own responsibility to its own citizens as well as to those of the European countries, and that it cannot allow the unwarranted breaking of treaties and its refusal to comply with the Ottoman Government that this government is determined to make use of all proper means to the end of securing proper observance of the treaties by the Ottoman Government."

QUALIFY ON MOTORCYCLES

Examination Produces Three Eligibles for Lieutenant in Police Service. Three police candidates qualified in the recent examination of the civil service commission for Lieutenant in the motorcycle service. The salary is $190 a year. The eligible list includes William J. CAPTURES FUGITIVE GIRL

Patrolman Overtakes One Who Fleed From Social Service Home. One of the three girls who escaped Saturday night from the Court of Social Service Home, 139 Summer street, was captured at 1 o'clock this morning at Sixth and Walnut streets by Patrolman Warren, of the Third and De Lancey streets station. The policeman noticed a girl trying to shield herself from the glare of the electric arc lamps as she walked very cautiously across the street. When the policeman approached the girl started to run, but was soon overtaken by the policeman. Being unable to give a satisfactory explanation of her actions, she was taken to the Central police station. Her girl gave her name as Josephine Holman, 4 years old, married, and said her home was in Mt. Carmel, Pa. On further questioning the prisoner told her escape from the home Saturday night by hiding behind a door and using a rope to descend from a second-story window. One of her names is still at large. The other girls to Helen Gallagher, 17 years old.

ARSENAL READY TO AUGMENT OUTPUT OF WAR'S MESSENGERS

Arrangements Made at Frankford Plant to Take Care of Emergency in Case of Rush Order. Arrangements were made today at the Frankford Arsenal to place that institution in condition to take care of any emergency in case of a rush order for materials. This was announced by Lieutenant Colonel George Montgomery, commanding officer of the plant. Colonel Montgomery has just returned from Europe. The work of readjustment from now on will be pushed as rapidly as possible. "By January 1," he said, "we expect to have things so arranged at the arsenal that should the Government at Washington feel so disposed, or called upon to increase our appropriation, enabling us to augment the output of the plant, we will be in a position to do what is required."

Colonel Montgomery said he was at work collecting the names of all old employees of the arsenal. This is being done, he added, so that they can be located and put to work at the quickest possible notice. By the first of the year it is expected that, if called upon, officials at the plant will be able to place two shifts of men at work one week after notice, and to be running three shifts every 24 hours before the expiration of a month. Colonel Montgomery returned from Europe last Saturday on the Cunard liner Campania. He went abroad on August 13 for a rest. He said he was warmly impressed by the state of preparedness which existed in nearly every country in Europe prior to the war, enabling them
