MELANCHOLY DAYS ARE COME, SADDEST FOR CITY BEGGARS

Hard Times for Mendicant Army, Due to the Police. Jimmy Conners in Correction, "Slats" Despondent, "Shoestring Mary" Gone.

Hard times have befallen the beggar and the profession is not what it used to be. Men who once "made" $5 to $8 day have been either driven from the streets or are serving sentences in the House of Correction.

Even Jimmy Connors, who was the life of a saloon near Eighth and Callowhill streets, is in the House of Correction. and what grieves James most is that he cannot get out, although he hired two nevers to accomplish the object.

ames got out of the "Correction" in just for brief breathing spells. ne his attorneys argued writs in the courts, but each time James was returned. He is mourned by his valet and his companions. Yes-James, the beggar. has a valet. In some manner Connors lost both bis arms. It happened when he was a child and he does not know exactly how the celdent occurred, but it was a lucky accident, he thinks, for since then James has not worked. He had a valet and the nds to keep more or less in state of drunkenness.

Connors is only one of nearly 300 beggars who in the last few months have been driven from the streets or sent to the House of Correction. He it was who openly boasted that he never had been openly boasted that he never had been locked up for more than an hour or so. He always had an attorney whom he paid to keep him out of jail. The attor-ney, generally one who could draw a pathetic picture of Connors' affliction. so pathetic indeed that Connors himself believed him when he was arraigned in court, but Connors afterward boasted to William von Bevern, an agent for the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Chartles, that he would not change positions with a man who was whole.

WHERE CONNORS RULED HIS KIND. Near Eighth and Callowhill streets is a barroom. It is dirty and dingy, but it harbors the men who never work. Here they assemble to drink "scats," a fivecent whisky, when times are bad; to drink a better grade of whisky when fortune is more kind. Times are now ad-never were worse.

It is here that James Connors met his tions, for they say that they like family cronies. It was here he carried the tin box which hung about his neck during "working" hours into which money flowed life and their homes will be broken up if they are driven from the streets. from charitably inclined persons. James would empty the box on the bar, and he and his companions would drink until Kline, who formerly played a small organ long after daybreak. They would not stop until the money from kind hearts had gone in a debauch. Then James would mark an unsteady course toward his room on Callowhill street, accompanied by his man. The man would undress Connors and see him bed. If Connors happened to be in that frame of mind that he did not remember or care how much money he had, the man would return to the saloon. If Connors was peevleh and could re-member to a nickel how much he had in the box fastened about his neck, the man would not return. He would dance at-tendance upon James, and James was no easy master.

The colored woman once in a while would catch her helpmate so stupefied that he could not help himself. She would ob Schmidt is known to the police as "Slats." ### INQUISITIVE PITTSBURGHER.

A few weeks ago the Society for Organizing Charities received a telephone measage from a young man. He said that he would like to make a call at the society's rooms if he was sure that he would not be arrested. He was guaranteed immunity if he visited the rooms A day later a well-dressed young man entered the office and introduced himself. He gave a fictitious name at first and later said that he was known as Myers was from Pittsburgh. He lost a foot and a hand through falling from a freight

He was perturbed by the crusade made against beganrs. He wanted to know just what the object of the crusade was and how long it would last. At first he was not taken for a beggar, but he did not keep Von Bevern in ignorance long. "I am from Pittsburgh. My people live there. I have been in Philadelphia for two months. I want to know just how long this foolishness of the society and the police is going to continue. I had expected to make Philadelphia my home, but I can't if this thing keeps up. Questioned, Myers said that he never forked. When a boy he had learned stenography. He could take dictation and was fairly fast at shorthand. Von Beven listened to Myers, and then offered to get him a position if he would stop begging

Then Myers said that he had a few habits that would make steady employ-ment something of a hardship. He drank whisky and to a certain extent he used morphine. He did not want work; he just desired no police interference with his plans. He was informed that such assurance could not be given to him. Myers thanked Yon Hovern for the information, and said that he would leave town. As he has avoided arrest here, it is believed when the police began to arrest the beggars in the central part of the city. opponents of work shifted their access of endcavor to West Philadelphia and Germantown, although they contin-ued to live in the Tenderioin. In the picturesque language of the Tenderioin, the woman "peddied" out the house when she learned that her husband would be safely away for many long days. She spent the money she received for the furniture on whisky, and when the money was gone, she also disappeared,

There are but few of the beggars on the street today. The action of the po-lice and charitable organization has made the life a miserable one. A "panhand-ler" is seen occasionally at night on Arch street. He does not linger long. When he has obtained the price for a big beef stew and a what he styles a kind#.
