ROMANCE, TRAGEDY AND COMEDY IN THE THEATRE OF WAR

The French papers are recalling an interesting reply which General Pau made a year ago, when his admirers proposed to present him a sword of honor upon the occasion of his giving up command of the 29th Army Corps.

"I certainly should not accept the sword."

worker in times of peace, enemy to pub-licity and popularity, it is sufficient that I have the confidence of those who have served under my orders, and the suffrages of good people such as you."

At the village of Lourches, in northern France, a wounded French sergeant, out-raged by German brutality, shot a Prus-sian officer. Before being shot he was given water by a dauntless lad. Emile Despres, who thereupon was also con-demned to immediate execution. Just as the soldiers were bandaging the boy's eyes preparatory to firing the German captain, with a cruel smile, cried cynic-ally, "I give you life on condition that you act as executioner of this sergeant. He asked for water, you'll give him lead." After a moment's hesitation the boy agreed, to the horror of his comrades. Seizing a rifle, he aimed at the sergeant's breast. Then, suddenly turning, he blew emargonist many historic fights, but hardly any will a hole through the sneering German. He was backed to pieces with bayonets.

He says he lost his regiment wandering in a wood, when he saw a wounded German standard bearer trying to hide his flag. Calling a com-rade, Turcot attacked the German and seized the flag. Then came the hardest part, the withdrawal carrying the trophy amidst a storm of bullets. His knapsack was pierced ten times and his rifle broken in his hands.

> A correspondent writes that between Chateau de Casteau and Lobbes, a par-ticularly desolated neighborhood, from whence the inhabitants had fied the Germans found a hungry canary in an abandoned farmhouse. Without having experienced the genuine, almost womanly, tenderness of the German soldiers, one would have called their feeding of the canary an affectation, or at best a passing whim, but it was typical.

> A story has reached Paris of the courageous action of Mme. Macherez, of Soissons. When the Germans arrived there they demanded to see the Mayor, who was absent. None of the officials responded to the call, whereupon Mme. Macherez went to the Germans and said: "There is no Mayor here, but I answer for every one and everything—as you will have to do if depredations are com-

A story is told in Brussels of a bit of "Yankee" genius. When the Germans reached there they entered the cattle market to buy up everything in sight and found the entire market had been bought up, not by the energetic burgo-master, but (so the story goes) by the American Ambassador. The corner in beef was complete and the officers went away empty.
