ELLEN ADAIR STARTS IN STEERAGE ACROSS OCEAN FOR AMERICA

English Girl, Alone but Hopeful, Departs From Southampton After Morning Ride on Boat Train.

The next morning I awoke early in a wild excitement. For all was ready, and I was ready to set sail for America.

I ate a hurried breakfast, my last typically English breakfast for many a long day. The frying eggs and bacon smelled so good, but were too substantial for my excited mood.

Then out to the waiting taxi my luggage was carried. I climbed inside, directed the man to drive to Waterloo Station, and I was ready off. How expensive a ride in these London taxis is—our three-mile trip was only 20 cents—and how splendidly that smartly uniformed chauffeur did drive.

Two cases of white trousseaus were wed inside the baggage car on either side of the narrow strip of mirror opposite me. I leaned forward and sniffed their faint perfume. No perfume, however, had been given me. I almost took one slender gown from its case and fastened its fresh whiteness in the folds of my cheap little black frock.

On the platform at Waterloo Station beside the early morning departure was a strange and motley crowd. English Gallians were slinging desperately to someone-looking packages, while queer, excited Italians showed their way around the crowd, dark and handsome with picturesque red curls around their dusky hair.

FAREWELL FOR BRIDE AND GROOM Each carriage was a little compartment into itself, completely shut off from every other one, for it was not a corridor train. I soon found a window seat in a third-class carriage and watched a small and most interesting group outside.

The little bride, the merriest child I ever looked, hung half way out of the carriage window next to mine, while the lanky husband, obviously of the eastern-monger class, hovered uncertainly in the rear.

At the blowing maiden and her new-made groom, but she responded to the battle call in true Cockney spirit. From her head was perched a white and wonderful confection, Parisian in intent, but gruesome in effect.

More than $25 was contributed this year through the individual efforts of Miss McNulty. She told tickets and presided over the silk society's social dancing last April. A diamond ring will be presented to her by the Rev. Dalton after the coronation.

GREAT VESSEL LEAVES DOCK The carriage had only two other occupants besides myself—an elderly lady of uncertain years and of very severe countenance, and a merry-faced young man, who immediately announced that he was going out prospecting and gold-digging in the wilds of northern Canada.

"My dad is a person," said he cheerfully, "and I'm the kind of the fellow. And the poor old dad, although he means well, hasn't learned to suffer fools gladly, although it says in the bible that the stoups are to be filled with them."

The young lady in the corner faced him with an icy stare. "The subject is surely a painful one to any young man of right feeling," said she frigidly. "Do me a favor, please, and let the subject be dropped."

DAINTY FOOT SAVES SUSPECT A charming little story-halls from Paris. One day just lately a fascinating little Swedish actress was charged on the public street with being a German spy.

THE CIRCULAR SKIRT The circular skirt after many vicissitudes, such as depending from a cork and being abbreviated by a point that made it merely an overskirt, has come into its legitimate rights, and hangs now from the waist to the floor and even beyond.

MONKEY FUR Monkey fur is fashionable again. It is seen here, there and everywhere around the town of hats and on the trim, as trimming for collar and cuffs and even as a lining for tunics. Minkes for combing with satin makes very attractive neck pieces and muffs.

BEFORE THE SANDMAN COMES Green Apple Dolls

OF COURSE you have all heard about green apples; about the trouble they make and that they are fit for nothing but pie!

Now, as a matter of fact, green apples are good for many things besides pie and one of the very best of those many things is dolls.

"Dolls of apples! such a foolish idea, did you say? Not foolish at all, but full of fun, as you will see when you know all about it."

The first thing to do in order to have some handsome green apple dolls is to collect your apples.

If you have an apple tree in your yard that is easy. Or, if you happen to know of an apple tree near your home you can beg for some of the "windfall apples"—they make the very best dolls, but are not good for much else.

Sort out your apples into two lots—the smallest are the dolls' heads, the bigger ones make the bodies. Pair them off the way they fit together best—the smallest heads with the lightest bodies, then the biggest heads with the big fat bodies.

Fasten the heads into the bodies by thrusting a two-inch stick into the "head" apple and then pressing the "head" apple down into the stick.

Now stick a pair of the three-inch sticks in for arms and a pair of the four-inch sticks for legs. Isn't he a handsome fellow?

And some of the faces must be snifty, and some sober, some jolly and some teasy.

But you haven't used the leaves you say? Don't worry, you are coming to those right now. Those are for clothes!

You can make beautiful little hats, frocks and coats by shaping different sized leaves together and pinning them in place with leaf stems.

Then when you are all through, line your dolls up and have a parade—perhaps they will march straight out to the kitchen and into the pie—who knows?

THE QUESTION BOY

WHERE did the fishes come from? And why don't they play with me? And what makes the leaves turn pretty? And who put them on the tree? And what makes the clouds grow blacker? And why does the thunder shout? And where is the fire—please tell me. When I blow the matches out?

Most every one thinks it's funny. Because I say quick, "What for?" Whenever they tell me something. They never have told before. Such a lot of things I think of. I want to know all about it. But say! What becomes of the fire. When I blow the matches out?

Photos of War Action and Peace Maneuvers in Sunday's Intaglio

Just now it's interesting to compare American preparedness with European fighting efficiency. You will see examples of both in Sunday's Intaglio—scenes on foreign battlefields and the serious business of putting our own house in order as shown by camera shots of the recent maneuvers at League Island.

You'll be interested, too, in the Intaglio's portrait studies of Ambassadors, prominent political candidates and other national figures, society men and women at the Newport Horse Show and familiar faces that smile upon you as the curtain goes up this season.
