ON THEIR WAY TO CHURCH

With the opening of the horse show today and the coming October days, society is fast returning from the various summer resorts, and yesterday quite a number of fashionable persons wended their way up and down Walnut street toward the various churches.

Miss Phoebe Williams Adams, who has lately returned from a trip in the mountains, was seen yesterday with her fiancé, George J. Harding. Miss Adams was wearing a tailored suit of navy blue serge, which was made with a narrow skirt and double circular ruffle overskirt. The coat was cut slightly shorter than hip length and was hung in a square effect. The sleeves were in a three-quarter length and were finished with cuffs covered with a collar and reverse of white piping. Miss Adams' hat was a high-crowned sailor model with a narrow turned brim, and was trimmed with a one-inch band of black grosgrain ribbon.

Dark navy blue was also selected by Miss Charlotte Hare, whose suit was the plainer style of tailor-made and very smart and stylish in cut. The skirt was plain and narrow and the coat was fastened with large black buttons. Miss Hare's hat was a wide-brimmed straight-brimmed model of a dove shade of brown; the crown was entirely surrounded by a handsome ostrich feather of the same shade, one end of which stood high up at the side of the front.

Mrs. George J. Harding has chosen a stunning suit which is a combination of black and white. It is made with a two-piece skirt of black-and-white shepherd's plaid. The skirt cut, which is fastened at the back with a rounded flare, is composed entirely of black and is fastened at the front with a large black button. A small tuque of black lustrous straw, which is trimmed about the top of the crown with tiny mercury-wing feathers, completes this good-looking costume, which is worn with a blouse of white crepe de chine.

THE DRAMA

THEATRICAL BAEDEKER

ADRIENNE—"The Revolt," by Edward Locke, starring Helen Ware. A wife driven desperate by the neglect of her husband, decides to seek equal liberty, but retreats in time. Review tomorrow.

BROAD—"Dressed," melodrama by Owen Davis, with John Mason as railroad magnate with a penitentiary past. As like real life as the novels of Harold Bell Wright, but more thrilling than actual life, even under approximate circumstances.

CHESTNUT STREET OPERA HOUSE—"Cabrera," moving-picture drama by Gabriella T'Amour, of the third century B. C. A truly marvelous feat on the reel, with a convincing volcanic eruption.

FORREST—"Ziegfeld Follies," a potpourri of songs, jokes and spectacular effects; entertaining without consuming brain-phosphorus.

GARRICK—"Adele," French operetta, with captivating music. Reversals in love, with a husband falling in love with his wife.

KEITH'S—Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle in their original dances.

WALNUT—"Teleoca of Sunnybrook Farm," by Kate Lougans Wiggin. Return of this popular, unpretentious but appealing play.

HONOR YOUR CHILDREN SAYS HELEN WARE

Evils of Modern Life, Deceit and Dishonesty, Due to Parents' Tyrannous Training of Children.

"Honor your father and your mother—this has been the injunction that parents have too often and too long held as a threat over their offspring. Honor your children—such a reversal of the Fourth Commandment observed by parents would do more good in the world, in my opinion, than a tyrannical assertion of parental authority. It is well for children to honor their parents—when they deserve such honor. But parents should first seek to merit this by their treatment of their children. We may talk about the evils of modern life, of deceit and dishonesty in business, politics and the domestic relations; but these evils can't be eradicated until the source is removed, and the source is in the home. Men are what their parents have made them. Cowardice, treachery and dishonesty in life invariably develop from seed sown in the child life."

Miss Helen Ware, who has distinguished herself by her characterizations in dramas of modern life, was sitting in the reception room of her suite in the Vendig last evening. Miss Ware had been discussing the problems of modern life as affording material for drama, and the conversation turned from marriage to the relation of parent and child. Miss Ware, whose personality is as magnetic as it is emphatic, is trenchantly direct in her opinions. Life, to Miss Ware, is a serious thing.

"In life," she declared, "the absolutely greatest things are truth and justice. All our evils, all our problems, exist in the lack of truth and justice. To get down to fundamentals, this applies to business, politics, the relations of men and women, the inequalities, oppressions and wrongs of our social and economic life. And to get to the cause of untruth, injustice, dishonesty, lying and deceit we must go right to the home where the child is reared. 'Spare the rod and spoil the child' is the very command which has spoiled character and spoiled life. If we want to correct abuse we must correct the cause, and we must, therefore, correct parents."

"Fear is the fundamental evil, the original sin, in human life. Now children are taught to fear their parents, and later to fear their teachers. Fear makes cowards. Punishment is the cause of misdoing and crime. If, instead of threatening children, parents encouraged them always to tell the truth without fear of punishment there would be less wrongdoing in the world today. If parents honored their children there would be more honor among men."

"What is the condition in the average home? A child is reared by rigid rules. It is trained to see only the parents' point of view. The father and mother never consider the child's point of view. The child, in playing, accidentally breaks a vase or has some misadventure. It is then scolded or rebuked. The result is that the child, instead of admitting trivial accidents, begins to lie. It blames whatever accidents happen on the servant, the dog or the cat. That child continues to lie through life. Into the plastic nature of the immature being, the element of fear has been implanted, and with fear, deceit and cowardice. All the later kindnesses of life will not eliminate that poison in the character."

"A child should never be punished. A word must stand a child. Now if you don't stop that lie, speak you—how often do we hear that? A child should never be threatened. A child should never be visited with outbursts of temper. Scolded and whipped, an average child as it cannot but develop a bullying and untruthful nature."

"Parents are not more responsibility on themselves—either in political affairs or in human lives. We are all what we have grown to be, and our children will be what we train them to be. The great reform to be accomplished is, surely, life is that of unliking, untruthfulness, ignorant parents. Let them learn to be considerate of their own, to respect their children, to be able to put themselves in their children's place and see as their children see. They must lose that title role, and not frighten and intimidate. They should make children feel that, even if they do wrong, they can frankly admit it without harsh censure or punishment. When parents do this at that point the greater evil and difficulties will solve themselves. Society is no greater than its weakest member, and the colossal misfeasances of financiers are no more egregious than the criminal inconsiderateness and unkindness of the parents that start children wrong by making them selfish, fearful and untruthful.

"Husbands and wives generally lack full sympathy and understanding, and in nine out of ten cases the husband is not absolutely honest and frank with his wife. This results in antagonism, suspicion, lack of respect and unhappiness. Then these very couples, when they become parents, bring up their children in such a way as to make it inevitable that they enter similar conditions. Truth, and absolute truth, should be observed in human relations, and married people should religiously realize their responsibility to the lives they bring into the world, and the veneration and love due those lives. Let parents first apply the command of honor and respect on their part. This would do more good than civic campaigns, woman suffrage propaganda and anti-trust legislation. The reform of incompetent, unloving, irresponsible, misunderstanding parents would mean the reform of the race."

FLASHES FROM "STARS"

Miss Georgia Caine, playing with "Adele," at the Garrick Theatre, owns one of the finest kennels on Long Island. In this kennel is a spaniel named Sherlock Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes," said Miss Caine, "is the champion burglar router of the world. Why, he can detect a burglar a mile off, and is so bitter against them that he cannot bear to see a burglar even in moving pictures. Recently, before 'Adele' started on a tour, I took Holmes to a moving-picture show in Elmhurst, where I reside. During the action of one of the plays a robber appeared upon the screen. Well, I wish you could have heard Sherlock—he set up a howling that startled the house, and not until an officer appeared in the picture and threw the thief into a cell did my dear Sherlock cease his barking. Clever, eh?"

Eva Davenport, bounding and buxom, spent the past summer at Mount Clemens, where she observed a painfully restricted diet, taking only the baths on the program, sat packed in ice an hour each day after a steam bath, and went through various forms of exercise guaranteed to reduce weight.

"I was feeling highly elated and thinking my old friends would notice my loss," she said the other day, "until I came back to the vicinity of Broadway and 42d street. The very first day of my appearance my conceit was given a crushing blow by the policeman who helped me across the street back of the Times Building. 'Why, how'd-you-do, Miss Davenport,' he said 'I am glad to see you.' 'And I'm glad to see you,' I returned, for I have a special fondness for policemen—they have helped me over many a rough place. 'I notice that you have gotten thin,' said I. 'Yes,' he answered, 'but I see you haven't.' And they talk about the gallantry of men!"

Alice Gale, who has scored a pronounced success in "Twain," which will be seen at the Adelphi Theatre, does not believe in being pessimistic about anything and is very optimistic as to the prospects for general prosperity in this country, despite the European war. "If we let the European war discourage us, what would we do if the world should come to an end?" she asks pointedly. "Let us be cheerful. Nothing is so bad it might not be worse."

"There's a good deal of talk about how easy you can fool the farmer," said Raymond Hitchcock, "but they are right there with their answer, just the same."

"This summer I spent a few weeks in a little country town. I only saw three or four children during the entire length of my stay there. One morning, quite early, as I was taking my constitutional, I met a weakened old man who was evidently a native."

"How often," I inquired, "are children born in this town?"

"Only once," he answered, and proceeded on his way."
