NEW YORK REGAINS VIRGIN TIMBER LAND WORTH $25,000,000

37,000 Acres in Adirondacks Won After Long Litigation-Rights of the State Date Back to Revolutionary War.

ALBANY, Sept. 23 .- Tracts of virgin ferest, comprising altogether about 37,-000 acres situated in various parts of the Adirendacks Forest Preserve, have been recovered for the State through the ef-forts of James A. Parsons, Attorney General. With the determination of the title of some 5000 acres, additional litigaover property in the preserve will been settled.

Estimates made of the value of the land in the State preserve, some of which has never been touched with an axe, range from $25,000,000 to $35,000,000. A large part of this valuable territory has been recovered in the past year by the con-servation department of the Attorney General's office. Expert title searchers General's office. Expert title searchers under the direction of Mr. Parsons and Benjamin McClung, Deputy Attorney General, have been pressing vigorously investigations of the titles of persons who have taken over tracts within the preserve, and wherever the facts have fustified the bringing of legal proceedings they have been instituted, with the result that before the end of the present year ome 40,000 acres will have been turned back to the State. New York State's right to a greater part of the lands in the forest preserve dates back to the Revolutionary War, after which a large tract was taken over from Joseph Totten and Stephen Cross-field, probably the earliest real estate speculators in State history. The allegi-ance of Totten and Crossfield to England prompted the confiscation of the lands by the State. More than two-thirds of what now known as the Adirondack Park, within which the forest preserve is located, was purchased by Totten and Crossfield from the Mohawk Indians for the sum of $5000. The records of the Attorney General's office recite how the tribal chiefs accompanied a surveyor to a spot on the boundary of Herkimer and Lewis countles and from a mountain top agreed to turn over to Totten and Crossfield lands to the eastward "far beyond. The Totten and Crossfield tract was then "chained" or surveyed almost to Lake Champlain.

EXTENT OF PRESERVE. At the present time the State preserve

nprises over 1,600,000 acres of forest n the primeval state. A constitutional prohibition against lumbering or cutting down of trees within the preserve has had the effect of keeping intact practically all of this forest area. Mr. Parsons declared today that the investigations conducted by his office show that the State's interests in the past have been shamefully neglected. "In the absence of common vigilance on the part of the State," said Mr. Parvaluable portions of the Adirondacks, have cut timber and have built camps, and have appropriated the most beautiful and desirable portions of this park for private purposes. The proceedings instituted by this office have been effective in displacing the squatters and establishing beyond question the State's right to possess these lands.

policy at present in force will be followed up with the end in view of putting a stop for all time to this vandalism and to this high-handed confiscal appropriation of the State's valuable property."
Valuable tracts in what is known as Township No. 40 in the vicinity of Raquette Lake have been recently recovered by the State. Here the land is valued at $1000 an acre—several private owners who hold lands along the shores of the lake to which their title has been upheld by the courts recently offered the lands at this price. The forest land in Township No. 40 is valued at $3,000,000.

MADE HARD FIGHT.

The lands now comprised in the for-est preserve cost New York State about $3,500,000. The Totten and Crossfield tracts were taken over after the Revolution, and held intact until 1871, when the State began to purchase additional lands. Through tax sales and purchases at times when the land was offered for very reasonable prices, the State almost doubled the area of its Adirondack holdings. Some of this additional land was purchased for as little as $3.40 an acre. Some of the cases of confiscal appropriation which the Attorney General has handled were bitterly contested in the courts. In some instances the persons who appropriated the property for their wn use had constructed valuable homes in the preserve, and maintained they Mad an inalienable right until the courts deermined the title in the State's favor.

"I predict," said Mr. Parsons, "that rithin the next few months the State's claims over the 1,600,000 odd acres, which make up the forest preserve, will have been determined in the State's favor. After that careful vigilance on the part of the State will be necessary if it is to protect its lands from appropriation by private individuals."

The Adirondack preserve embraces forest lands in the counties of Clinton, Essex, Franklin, Fulton, Hamilton, Herki-mer, Lewis, Oneida, St. Lawrence, Saratoga, Warren and Washington.

WEEPS SIX YEARS, THEN GOES

Husband Vanishes After Lugubrious Battle With Secret Sorrow.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 23.-As a weeper, George Hughson was a success which made him a distinct failure as a husband, his wife told Judge Mandell, when her suit for divorce was tried. He wept and sobbed and talked about a secret sorrow during six years of married life, but he never would tell what it was that weighed down his hears

"He was from the first a lugubrious an," said Mrs. Hughson. "He seemed to be thrusting a gnawing heartache into the background all the time he courted me, I thought, and he said that the happiness of being my husband would direct by metangles.

"But the morning after we were married he began to cry at the breakfast table. Great big tears rolled down his cheeks and he nearly choked with violent sobs."

As time wore on George grew more and more addicted to weeping. A melancholy strain of music or a lively one—the sight of a hearse or an underdone steak were equally efficacious in starting him off on a mad career of sobs and tears that would continue by the hour. Mrs. Hughson said there was a certain awful fascingtion in watching that man

Many a time did Mrs. Hughson ask George to unburden his heart. George hever took the hint.

But one day his sorrow became an exhaugting drain on his well-developed weeping abilities, and he just up and left home. SERVIAN WAR LEADER AGED, BUT POWERFUL

General Radumil Putnik, 65 Years Old, Self-Made Man.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Servian Army, General Radumil Putnik, is a selfmade man about 63 years of age, who, according to the World's Work, has worked himself up through the Servian wars and revolutions until today he stand a conspicuous figure before the world. He was born about 1849 in a small place near Belgrate in the southsmall place near Belgrade in the southern part of Austria. He is a thorough-born Servian despite this fact. He is a small man, of large, round head, chest-training in a military academy which then existed in Servia. He joined the army voluntarily. Later he went to France to study the military tactics of Napoleon. These experiences merely gave him satisfaction, as he has not succumbed to any other method but his own. He is practically a self-taught man.

In the recent war between the Balkan Allies he was Chief of Staff for the Servian army.

As a general he strips his uniform of As a general he strips his uniform or all its trappings and tinsel and appears in plain regimental apparel with the two straps on his shoulders as insignla of his rank. He has every opportunity to make large sums of money, but as his wants are simple he used his funds to conday schools. During the Balkan endow schools. During the Balkan troubles he directed his forces from a small shanty by the use of the telephone.

SCIENTISTS DOUBT DARWIN'S THEORY OF LIFE'S EVOLUTION

President's Address Before British Association Casts Doubt Upon Natural Selection Teaching on Varia-

The whole trend of scientific thought since Darwin has been to demonstrate how the simple elements with which life began have developed from that simplicity into the complex forms we know. the Congregationalist: The Darwinian hypothesis of evolution by natural selection has recently been subjected to fierce criticism and has been rejected by many students of biology, at least as a competent explanation of the varieties and complexities we find in the animate

The feeling has been growing that Darwin's vast and invaluable accumulation of facts and observations have but attempted to explain variety by variation and that, as he himself hinted, there may be gaps in the argument which might prove fatal to its validity. Now comes Prof. Bateson, the famous English botanish and student of heredity, and assures us that we must make a complete volte face in regard to the method of development, and instead of proceeding from the simple to the complex, proceed from the complex to the simple.

ADDRESS ON HEREDITY The presidential address at the annual meetings of the British Associa-tion has usually been full of interest for the students of scientific thought, and often of philosophy, and Prof. Bateson's first address, given in Melbourne, Australia, is no exception to this rule. He is working in the fruitful field of observation in heredity, first opened by Men-so reacted on our conception of varia-tion that very competent men are even denying that variation in the old sense is a genuine occurence at all. Varia-tion is postulated as the basis of evolu-tionary change. Do we, then, as a mat-ter of fact, find in the world about us variations occurring of such a kind as to warrant faith in a contemporary pro-gressive evolution? Until lately most of us would have said, Yes, without misgiving. We would have pointed out, as Darwin did, to the immense range of divergity seen in many wild species so commonly that the difficulty is to define the types themselves.

"The appearance of contemporary variability proves to be an illusion. Variation from step to step in the series must occur either by the addition or by loss of a factor. Now, of the origin of new forms by loss there seems to me to be fairly clear evidence, but of the contem? porary acquisition of any new factor I see no satisfactory proof, though I admit there are rare examples which may be so interpreted. We are left with a picture of variation utterly different from that which we saw at first. Variation now stands out as a definite psychological

FORMS REALLY SIMPLE.

We cannot follow this elaborate tech-nical discussion of the fundamental basis of biological thought. The revolutionary element in Professor Bateson's thinking is that he postulates complexity with potential unfolding of all that we have seen in the variations and possibilities of life toward simplicity. The method, so or life toward simplicity. The method, so far as he suggests it, is by the removal of inhibitions. What has happened is not that the simple has grown into the complex by addition, little by little, of qualities from without, but that an initially complex organism has by the removal of one limitation after enother. moval of one limitation after another been brought to its present condition of simplicity.

"The hypothesis is full of suggestions for thought in many fields. It will be certain to prove a moot point of conflict for scientific hypothesis builders for a long time to come. The battle between the Darwinians and the Mendellans, as Professor Bateson would no doubt call the followers of his thought of evolu-tionary method, will be fierce at every point of contact. Since neither Darwin-ism nor the contradictory hypothesis which Professor Bateson offers as a suggestion directly affects the Christian faith, which rests upon personal relations with God, we disciples of Christ may watch with interest but without concern the progress of the battle.

HYPNOTIZED BY NECKTIE

Window Display Puts Man in Frame That Puzzles Policeman. LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—Rigid as a mummy, Louis A. Albright, a visitor from Canton, O., was found gazing into a necktie shop at Fourth and Spring streets by the police. He was apparently held n a hypnotic trance by an electric globe evolving before a reflector of many clors and many facets. It was only after colors and many lacets. It was only after hours of work by surgeons at the re-ceiving hospital that Albright was re-stored to full consciousness. Walking his beat, Patrolman Watson saw the man gazing intently into the window. Returning that way half an hour later Mr. Albright held the same

"Pretty ties, sir," he suggested with due respect.

He might have been talking to a rock.
"Nice night, sir," ventured the patrolman once more Again there was no response. Watson touched the window gazer. There was no movement.

CHAMPION FISH STORY

Californian Hooks Biggest Thing That Ever Got Away, He Says. SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 23.— Honors for hooking the biggest fish that ever got away go to Martin Ulrich a salesman of Oakland, who is himself authority for the story. Ulrich and a party of friends were out fishing for big fish in Ulrich's launch Germany off Angel Island in San Francisco Bay. Suddenly his line gave a violent tug. He grasped it with all his might, and so strong was the pull that the launch began to plunge wildly through the waves.

After a few minutes of excited uncertainty something strange and shape-less rose from a swiri of foam ahead. It was submarine K127, taking a practice spin. Ulrich's hook had fouled a ring on the exterior of the submarine. He cut the line.
