

WAR'S BARBARITIES GERMAN CHARGE TO BELGIANS' CRUELTY

Newspaper Reporter Says Teutons Acted Moderately in Presence of Enemy's Frightful Atrocities.

"A cry of indignation has been called forth throughout the world," writes W. Scheurmann, a correspondent of several German newspapers who accompanies the German General Staff...

"I have spent days in the worst frontier regions of Belgium and France. My first impressions of the horrors of war were obtained at Batteries on the road from Aachen to Liege, where fighting had been going on for days...

"I saw things there that I shall remember as long as I live. I passed through a village that was quite burnt out, where only a few German Landwehr soldiers were standing guard...

"In a front garden, which had been scorched by the flames, a woman in a black dress was crouching and weeping. I have stood at many an open grave in the churchyard, but I have never heard anybody weep like that woman."

"But a curse and three a curse upon those who caused all this misery. For there is no punishment in this world sufficient to atone for their evil deed."

"MURDERED GERMAN AVENGED." "Now that happened in Battery, Clement, Herve, Ploton and other Belgian places, was, with singular similarity, as follows: The inhabitants of the German trenches, received them with cringing friendliness, offered them wine in superfluous quantities, and then fell upon them at night...

"The reader should know what was the character of this mutilation. The eyes of our wounded men, lying helpless in their pain upon the battlefield were cut out with knives..."

"In Hallel, between Arien and Sedan the great was caught in the net of distributing arms and ammunition to his parishioners. In Hallel, on the other hand, the priest tried in vain to dissuade the citizens from taking arms..."

NAME OF GERMAN ARMY'S HEAD THE SYNONYM FOR INVINCIBILITY IN WAR—QUALITIES NOT DAZZLING.

For nine years another Moltke-Teutonic synonym for invincibility in war has been chief of the great General Staff of the German Army. The decisive arbitration of the present campaign will be necessary to determine whether Lieutenant General Helmuth von Moltke, nephew of the "Organizer of Victory," is entitled to his celebrated uncle's other sobriquet of "The Battle Winner." His supreme war lord, the Kaiser, and the tremendous organization of 8,000,000 officers and men which Lieutenant General von Moltke heads at any rate have unqualified confidence in his ability to vindicate the traditions entrusted to his keeping...

"Detractors were destined to have their skepticism dramatically undermined. Having scoffed at von Moltke as a decorative figure, they rubbed their eyes over the first 'Kaiser maneuvers' held under his auspices before he had been at the General Staff ten months. The great autumn mimic campaign for years past had been distinguished by operations which that oft-quoted marshal of France would have called unaccomplished but not unskilled."

General von Moltke, born in Mecklenburg-Western Pommern in 1814, was 65 years old in May, 1914. He is a von Moltke, a name called "Count" von Moltke, for the title of count, conferred on his great ancestor in 1876 on the day Metz fell, was inherited by the older brother of the present General, General Count Wilhelm von Moltke, and ceased with the latter's death a few years ago. The "organizer of victory," whose name has been immortalized by Helmuth von Moltke, had no children. General Helmuth von Moltke served as adjutant to his distinguished uncle at the General Staff from 1847 to 1854. While escorting the latter to the grave Emperor William informed the then Major von Moltke that he had decided to have the older brother of the present Emperor take the name of the Kaiser's father-in-law as a mark of respect for the Emperor's father-in-law. Five years of service in the Kaiser's entourage were succeeded by regimental and divisional commands in the guards until 1891, when he was promoted to general. His present position as Chief of the General Staff, hitherto filled only in war time, and designated Lieutenant General von Moltke, is a post of great responsibility. A remarkable intellectuality and capacity more distinguished for mental than for physical brilliancy. He cares far less for show than a guard lieutenant.

"My hired man," said the old farmer, "was cleaning out an old shed when he inadvertently poked a rake or something into a nest of bees. One or two of the bees started a preliminary stinging and he was stung. He went out and got a hornet's nest and in an instant the ever-increasing army of bees was joined by the maddened hornet."

"It was this way, we figured. The bee stung was very dangerous in the quantity of it. He would undoubtedly have died had it not been for the hornet's nest. You see we don't live far from the Naugatuck chemical plant and the vats. It is so near that I didn't think the bees had been eating last Thursday night the antitoxin for bee poison, and so the little incident he wasn't had a bit of chemicals in his right shoulder, which was bothering him since 1912."
