"Where do these go?" he asked. "Oh, let me see," said the other gardener, "we can put those here in front of the hedge and behind the golden rod-that's just the place for them.

So the sunflowers were planted. Now the hedge grew very high and very thick, so that no sun shone through it at all. And the golden rod grew very fast and very tall and the poor little sunflower roots down in between didn't have any chance at all.

They spread out roots and sent up green stalks and leaves, but they couldn't get enough sun.

Finally, one day, the sunflower resolved to ask the sun about it.

"Oh, Mr. Sun," she called, "what is the matter; why don't you shine on me all day as you used to in the spring?" ful, the warm winds blew the frost

"Shine on you!" exclaimed the sun, "I surely am trying to, but you see with the tall thick hedge at your back and the tall golden rod in front of you, I can't even see you most of the day. But I'll tell you what to do; you keep on growing the best you can and I'll keep on shining the best I can, I

MERCHANT ACCUSED OF BEATING WOMAN WHO FOLLOWED HIM

Westmont Man Declares Persistent Annoyance Provoked Him-Old Intimacy Aired at Hearing.

COLLINGSWOOD, N. J., Sept. 25 .- Joseph Pedrick, a Philadelphia commission merchant, residing in Westmont, is under $1000 bail to appear before the Grand Jury on a charge of attacking Mrs. Walter Banes, of Toledo avenue, within a few equares of the Pedrick home.

At the hearing before Squire Dorn it developed that Pedrick and Mrs. Banes have been intimate for several years. Of late, it is alleged, the woman became jealous because Pedrick showed preference for another young woman, who is unmarried. Pedrick stated that Mrs. Banes often followed and annoyed him-He then became provoked.

Mrs. Banes declared Pedrick heat her so badly that she was placed under a physician's care. She also stated she had a right to follow the man, but did not give her reason. Her husband was present at the trial.

Pedrick is married and has resided in Westmont for years. Mrs. Banes has a son aged 19 and a daughter 16. The case will come before Prosecutor William Kraft this week.

PEDRICK DENIES CHARGE When interviewed this morning Mr.

"The little that I did was in self-defense. I was returning home later than usual when Mrs. Banes approached me from the shadow of a hedge and asked to speak to me. I was tate, and as a was walking with another lady. I refused. She immediately began talking excitedly and attempted to scratch my face and arms. I scized her and tried to prevent her from making a public spectacle, and she held on to my coat and followed

So the cheerful little Japanese sunflower smiled and set to growing. Every day, from 10 till 2, the sun shone on the plant, and every day the roots grew stronger and the stems grew taller. But the golden rod grew, toonever was there such tall golden rod! And the poor little sunflower was completely hidden.

One day in late September the gardener went round behind the golden rod to hunt for weeds.

"Well, well," he exclaimed, "if here isn't that sunflower plant-I'd forgotten all about it. It's had a hard time back here in the shade. I guess I'll move it next year, for it won't bloom always used odds and ends rugs, and the
