

ELLEN ADAIR MEETS A TALKATIVE LADY ON THE DOORSTEP

She Wonders What the Future Now Will Bring. A Little Widow Is a Dangerous Thing.

CHAPTER XI.

The world seemed such a wide and desolate place when I stood quite alone outside my uncle's house, that first sad night in Philadelphia.

"Gone off to Europe!" rang through my stunned brain. The house shut up for three long months! Where was I now to turn.

I remember noticing how the little children raced along the pavement, each on one roller skate. In the light of the street lamp—how very early it grows dark in Philadelphia—their little faces shone with happiness. I think our little English boys and girls have rosier cheeks, but these Americans had pretty little sun-burnt faces.

Where was I now to turn? I did not know. One cannot live for long on 85! How foolish I had been to come this long way on mere surmise! I saw that clearly now it was too late. "Gone off to Europe" and the house was closed! A woman from the next-door house now came upon the scene. She may have wanted to be kind, I do not know. I thought she had the shrillest, harshest voice.

"Yes, he has gone," said she, "are you his niece? From England, do you say? Dear, dear, I thought you had a foreign look! In mourning, too! What friend of yours has died? I guess it's a real nasty of your uncle going off like this, just when he was expecting you! Ain't you the meanest thing?"

"He did not know that I was coming here," I said dully. "You see, I only wrote three days before I sailed—I sailed a week ago. It's no one's fault except my own."

A FLATTERING CRITICISM.

"Yes, you've acted real foolish," said this strange individual, staring intently at me, arms akimbo. "There ain't much style to you either. The way you fix your hair went out three years ago! It sort of suits your face, though, all the same, that queer old-fashioned way. I guess you need a bit of make-up on these pale cheeks—I'll give you some, it's real cute stuff! You'll never get a beau here unless you smarten up a bit!"

"Can you give me my uncle's present address?" I stammered, for her strange speeches made me feel confused.

"And that I can't!" said she. "Your uncle came to rather haughty over me! After that alling wife of his died, three years ago, I tried to be real sociable, over the back yard fence of nights. I pulled three lathes of wood out, so's I could keep a cheery eye on him—for I'm a widow, and can't count on no man here! You ought to get another wife, says I. 'It ain't natural-like, for a man like you to live alone.' He'd be sitting there on an evening, smoking his pipe in his little back yard, a real good-looking man he is! But whenever I'd come out, and try a bit of conversation with him, why, he'd act real stiff and haughty, and then make some excuse and go up and into the house. 'I see the fence is broken,' he would say, always very polite, 'I'll send a man here tomorrow to see that it is repaired.' 'I'll be right there, and the fence, never guessing I had made the hole on purpose!' She sighed, with a reminiscent look in her hard eye. 'I guess your uncle's fixed real elegant!" said she real prettily.

"What could she mean! 'Fixed up real elegant!' I did not know, and did not care. Where was I now to turn?"

A PLEASANT PROPOSITION.

"I guess you have a goodish bit of money with you, and would make it worth my while if I took you here to-night?" continued the hard-eyed widow, craftily. "I'm expecting two gentlemen friends, and they're bringing some bottles of beer along, so we might have a party, and be real sociable. I guess I could fix up that hair of yours for once, and make you look real cute. You ain't at all a bad-looking girl, if you only perked up a bit and stepped around more lively! The chaps here like a bit of fun!"

The prospect did not sound alluring. I shuddered at the very idea of what her particular conception of "a bit of fun" might be!

"I think I'd better go to an hotel," I faintly said. I felt so tired, and yet I could not, would not enter that unknown widow's house.

The brewing storm then broke upon my head. Month after month, I had seen my uncle's part had sown the wind—and now I, his unfortunate niece, reaped the whirlwind. The widow had a large vocabulary and one great gift of matches. "That buried talent was unearthed until it grew tenfold."

A crowd of little unchins strayed round. "Just listen to her!" cried the little boy. "It's better than the movies, ain't it, sister?"

"What were the movies?" I had never heard the name. I sat upon my trunk on that top step in sheerest weariness, while the gentle lady on her step next door harranged me in a ringing tone. The little crowd was growing larger. The betrothed me of a Punch and Judy show at home!

A LADY IN DISTRESS.

At length a gallant knight came to my rescue. I saw his broad form push that crowd aside. No Juliet in a thrilling balcony scene welcomed her Romeo with a gladder heart than I upon those steps. He was the local ice man, it is true, but still a Romeo to me!

"Gee-whizz!" said he, in no uncertain tones, fixing the widow with a wrathful eye. "Maybe you ain't the nicest, peakest woman on this street. I'd hate to tell you what I think of you!" He turned around to me and his voice changed. "Come right along with me. I'll see you right in where you want to go," said he.

MOTHERS' PENSIONS PAID

City Treasurer McCoach Gives $28 Beneficiaries $1583.50 for Sept.

Widows and deserted wives, nearly all accompanied by small children, called at the office of City Treasurer McCoach today to receive the pensions for September granted them from the Mothers' Pension Fund.

From the appropriation for September made to the fund by City Council, City Treasurer McCoach paid out $28,350.

There are 13 mothers and deserted wives, beneficiaries of the fund, in the city. In those families are 42 children less than 14 years of age.

THE LETTER, NOT THE SPIRIT.

A certain landlord had a great objection to renting his houses out to tenants with children.

"Have you any children?" he demanded fiercely of a would-be tenant.

"Yes," replied the latter solemnly, "six—all in the cemetery."

"Better there than here," said the landlord consolingly, and proceeded to execute the desired agreement.

In due time the children returned from the cemetery, whither they had been sent to play.

OLD STYLES IN NEW MATERIALS AGAIN BECOME FAVORITES

Black Velvet Basque Was Worn by Former Generations, With Hoop Skirts and Waterfalls.

Any one who makes a study of fashions soon reaches the conclusion that there are certain modes that recur from time to time, modified or varied, but not too changed for recognition.

The black velvet basque that has come into prominence again as one of the present-day fashions was worn by our mothers or grandmothers, according to the generation to which we belong.

It was worn with hoopskirts and the waterfall of the period, and it is being worn again today, very little changed and lending to the wearer more of the feminine appeal of a dead and gone day.

The velvet basque inaugurates the separate skirt inevitably. And this, too, is a return of an old style. Pettis and fur-below must have a place somewhere in the make-up of the majority of costumes and the plain basque seems to call for either plaited or ruffled skirts that will furnish an effective contrast.

The illustration shows the black velvet basque almost severe in design, but modernized by the collar. This particular style of collar seems to be a compromise between fashion as originally planned by the modiste and the comfort demanded by the woman who must wear it.

It is very high in the back, but open to a generous degree in front above the square-cut neck.

The white facing to the collar and the white cuffs are made of silk and count a point as a fashion asset.

The skirt worn with the basque scores several points in up-to-date modernness. It is in tiers, or sections, and it is full—that is, full according to the present standard.

Each section of the skirt is finely plaited, though the fulness is greatest in the topmost flounce.

While both basque and skirt are conventionalized, they have distinct prestige among the styles especially created for autumn wear.

The toque or turban which completes the costume is of black velvet, trimmed with sours placed at an angle that we might be inclined to call rakish if we were not determined to reflect the spirit of war in our every-day vocabularies.

The military air has been given deliberately to many coats and capes and hats and bonnets, and where there is a certain kind of dash the term is sure to be used for the sake of its present day popularity.

FILIPINOS SHOW EAGERNESS TO GET SCHOOL TEACHERS

Winfred T. Denison Shows That Natives Prefer the Schools to Feasts—Amusing Incidents Witnessed.

The Hon. Winfred T. Denison, secretary of the Interior of the Philippine Islands, has been called the "White Hope" of the islands. The exact applicability of this term is not perfectly clear at this distance. Mr. Denison himself is on record as declaring his belief that it is meant to imply a "white interest" in the Philippines as distinguished from a Filipino interest. He is also on record as saying: "I suppose I was called the 'White Hope' because I used to belong to the Republican party."

Denison, as is well-known, is the Bull Moose member of the present Philippine Administration, and as such his experiences of the last few months in the islands are of considerable interest, indicating to a degree the hopefulness or hopelessness of the Philippine situation.

Mr. Denison has sent to friends in this country copies of a speech delivered by him at the City Club, Manila, on June 30 last. The speech is entitled "Democracy's Mission in the Philippines." The speech does not give its author's opinion on the question of Philippine independence, but merely discusses some of the questions which daily come before the Secretary of the Interior through the administration of his own department.

One of the typical questions, Mr. Denison says, which come before him continually, cropped up in the proposition whether he should authorize the expenditure of 500 pesos for the photographing of mollusks. "Now, it happens that I have just returned from the Mountain Province," declared the Secretary, "where I found the deep necessity and a great demand for school teachers, and no money to provide them. I had this choice: Should I spend 500 pesos for photographing those mollusks, or should I spend it for school teachers? I could pay the whole share of the Insular Government to one teacher, and a half of the share of the Insular Government to another teacher for the cost of these photographs. I am not unaware that the world outside the Philippines may possibly prefer the photographs of the mollusks to teachers in the Mountain Province, but can there be any doubt in the mind of any one that my duty is to spend the money for the interest of the Philippines, rather than to further what may be considered the interest of the scientific world at large?"

On another occasion Mr. Denison reports that he had been to Palawan and had found there 40,000 people without a doctor. He discovered the same thing on a still larger scale in the Mountain Province. He learned that the Moros in the southern end of Palawan were eager for a school teacher—"even grown men were petitioning for leave themselves to go to school."

At the Cullion Leprosy colony he was petitioned by six sisters of the church, who were doing all the nursing for 200 hospital patients to send them two more nurses and some money for their work. "Upon returning to Manila from this trip the first thing that was put up to the secretary was an application for leave to spend 14,000 pesos for printing the results of ethnological research into the habits of the Bukidnons and other non-Christian tribes!

"For 14,000 pesos," declared Denison, "I could either cover the Mountain Province with school teachers or cover Palawan with doctors, or fill Cullion with nurses; while the outside world, if it finds itself in preeminent need of this knowledge, may possibly be able to find the money some way except in the pockets of the Filipino people."

FOOD PRICES STILL MOUNT, WITH BEEF LEADING THE LIST

Housewives Find Advance 20 Per Cent. Over Last Year—Dealers Advise Cheaper Beef Cuts.

A canvass of the Philadelphia retail centers reveals the fact that prices generally asked now for meats, fish, sea food, poultry and staple reasonable vegetables, are virtually 20 per cent. higher now than they were a year ago, and the thrifty housewife whose cash has not increased during the past twelvemonth has but two courses open to her: She must carry a smaller market basket, or else must be content to buy cheaper cuts of meat, and inferior grades of food.

Beef is, as usual, the source of a lot of argument and as beef goes so must other foods allow and prices rise in proportion. Butchers report a scarcity of beef, but call attention to the fact that if marketeers could be educated to the real value of the cheaper cuts, such as briskets, high-price meat troubles would be relieved. In New York city the hip loins are cut and sold as porterhouse and tenderloin at 28 cents a pound, while the Philadelphia consumer is benefited to the extent that local butchers cut and sell all sirloin cuts at 35 cents a pound. The present prices are about the same as two months ago: Round, 30 cents; rump, 30 cents; rib roast, 25 cents; bolar roast, 22 cents; cross-cut roast, 22 cents; cornbeef, 18 to 25 cents; pork chops, 23 cents; lamb chops, 25 cents; leg of lamb, 25 cents; shoulder of lamb, 18 cents; stewing lamb, 8 cents; veal chops, 28 cents; veal cutlets, 35 cents; while calves' liver is high at 40 cents a pound.

POULTRY DEAR AS WELL.

The woman who turns to poultry for relief finds high prices here as well. Poultry are scarce now, due largely to the demands of the Jewish holidays. Jersey brooding and broiling chicken brings 50c; stewing is 25 to 30c; roasting, 25c, and the prime Jersey chicken is 25c. While the delicate squab is quoted from 50 to 60c a pound, according to the size and quality. It is early to consider turkeys yet, but ducks are offered at from 25 to 35 cents per pound.

The housewife with the lean pocketbook will find some relief from the high meat and poultry prices in vegetables, but even here prices are as a rule about 20 per cent. higher than this time a year ago. Nutritious vegetables, such as eggplants, lima beans, etc., are about above normal. Eggplants bring 5 and 10 cents; lima beans, 15 cents quarter peck; string beans, 20 cents quarter peck; fancy California cauliflower, small, 15 to 18 cents; large, 25 cents; Brussels sprouts, 20 cents a quart box. New peas are scarce and sell at 40 cents a quarter peck. Potatoes bring 60 cents the half bushel basket.

Fruits generally remain about the same price, with Jersey peaches, however, plentiful and hanging on well at low prices. Fresh or nearby eggs are scarce and bring 38 cents a dozen, while the western eggs are coming in faster and bring as much. Butter ranges from 35 to 45 cents a pound, special fancies running even higher.

SEA FOOD HIGH, TOO.

Even in the matter of fish and seafoods is there little encouragement for a saving, as prices are a lot above a year ago.

Soft crabs bring $1.25 a dozen; crab meat, regular, 40 cents; lump, 50 cents. Lobsters, 35 cents; hard-shell crabs, 10 cents a dozen; while oysters and clams are about 25 per cent. higher than last September. Bluefish bring 18 cents; brook trout, 75 cents; butterfish, 12 cents; catfish, 18 cents; cod (steak), 15 cents; flounders, 15 cents; haddock, 19 cents; halibut, 25 cents; mackerel (fresh), 35 cents each; Spanish, 25 cents a pound; white perch, 18 cents; rockfish, 15 to 25 cents; fresh salmon, 40 cents; sea bass, 15 cents; snappers, 18 cents; weakfish, 15 cents; while scallops are priced at $1 a quart.

Country sausage and scrapple begin to arrive from October 5 on, and cranberries, turkey, chestnuts, etc., will be on sale almost any day now. Already some chestnuts have arrived from points that have experienced frost, and bring 35 cents a quart.
