So the sunflowers were planted. Now the hedge grew very high and very thick, so that no sun shone through it at all, And the golden rod grew very fast and very tall and the poor little sunflower roots down in between didn't have any chance at all.

They spread out roots and sent up green stalks and leaves, but they couldn't get enough sun. Finally, one day, the sunflower resolved to ask the sun about it.

"Oh, Mr. Sun," she called, "what is the matter; why don't you shine on me all day as you used to in the spring?"

the kind old Sun smiled down

"Shine on you!" exclaimed the sun, "I surely am trying to, but you see with the tall thick hedge at your back and the tall golden rod in front of you, I can't even see you most of the day. But I'll tell you what to do; you keep on growing the best you can and I I keep on shining the best I can,

So the cheerful little Japanese sunflower smiled and set to growing. Every day, from 10 till 2, the sun shone on the plant, and every day the roots grew stronger and the stems grew taller.

But the golden rod grew, toonever was there such tall golden rod! And the poor little sunflower was completely hidden.

One day in late September the gardener went round behind the golden rod to hunt for weeds, "Well, well," he exclaimed, "if here isn't that sunflower plant-I'd forgot-ten all about it. It's had a hard time back here in the shade. I guess I'll move it next year, for it won't bloom before frost at this rate."

"Oh, dear," shivered the sunflow-er," "is it time for frost? I wanted so much to open my buds-they are nearly ready now."

The kind old sun heard the sun-flower and said, "Don't you worry a minute. I'm going to shine warmly for a few days yet and you can open flower buds." So the sun shone warm and cheerful, the warm winds blew the frost away and the sunflower worked very At last, on a warm October day, the first sunny bloom opened. And then another and another, till the whole bush was covered with miniature And the kind old sun smiled down and said, "Now just look at those blooms—we did that by working to-gether."

HERCHANT ACCUSED OF BEATING WOMAN WHO FOLLOWED HIM

Westmont Man Declares Persistent Annoyance Provoked Him—Old Intimacy Aired at Hearing.

COLLINGSWOOD, N. J., Sept. 25.-Joseph Pedrick, a Philadelphia commission merchant, residing in Westmont, is under $1000 ball to appear before the Grand Jury Banes, of Toledo avenue, within a few squares of the Pedrick home.

At the hearing before Squire Dorn it developed that Pedrick and Mrs. Banes have been intimate for several years. Of late, it is alleged, the woman became jealous because Pedrick showed preference for another young woman, who is unmarried. Pedrick stated that Mrs. Banes often followed and annoyed him. He then became provoked.

Mrs. Banes declared Pedrick best her so badly that she was placed under a Lieutenant Commander Roper Transphysician's care. She also stated she had right to follow the man, but did not give her reason. Her husband was prenent at the trial.

Pedrick is married and has resided in Westmont for years. Mrs. Banes has a son aged 19 and a daughter 16. The case will come before Prosecutor William Kraft this week.

PEDRICK DENIES CHARGE When interviewed this morning Mr.

Pedrick said: The little that I did was in self-defense. I was returning home later than usual when Mrs. Banes approached me from the shadow of a hodge and asked to speak to me. I was late, and as a was walking with another lady, I refused. She immediately began talking excitedly and attempted to scratch my face and I selzed her and tried to prevent her from making a public spectacle, and she held on to my coat and followed me to my home. I tried to keep her quiet until I could send for her husband, but my wife ordered her from the house. my wife ordered her from the house. Even then she would not go and raged at my wife. She received no injury at my hands and said as much when the case was heard before Justice Dorn."

Mr. Pedrick has known Mrs. Banes Mr. Pedrick has known Mrs. Banes since childhood, but says he can give no reason for her annoyances. She has been in the habit lately of visiting his office, although Pedrick and his wife have repeatedly protested.
