WHAT MILADY WEARS

Dance Frocks and Afternoon Gowns Worn By Women of Fashion Attract the Artistic Eye. With the audden changes from cold to heat and back to cold again, which have been the order of the day in the weather these past weeks, every style of frock may be seen, The evening gown is, of course, much in evidence at the many dances which are held in the clubs and hotels of the suburbs, which form so important a part in the life of Philadelphia's maids and matrons, Miss Katharine A. Bowie, a debutante of this year, wears a girlish gown of creamy lace, the skirt of which is made in a three-tier effect. The dainty bodice is cut in a surplice shape, and is joined to the skirt by a wide girdle of shirred satin. Another dainty white frock is worn by Miss Pauline Disston, who is a settle. and dainty type of young girl. The little gown is of cobwebby lace, and is trimmed here and there with tiny bunches of resebuds,

Another attractive evening gown is that worn by Mrs. Gilbert Harvey. The skirt is made of soft folds of white satin, while the bodice has a jacket effect and pannier of old rose cut velvet. Soft lace is used about the neck and

Mrs. Harold Roberts, of Haverford, wears a carmingly simple and effective evening frock at the club dances. The foundation of the skirt is soft white satin, over which falls three flounces of shadow lace; the top flounce is outlined by heading of tiny rosebuds. A kimona bodice of soft lace is also trimmed with resobuds. A chic white straw hat, the crown of which is encircled with small darkblue velvet flowers and a large pink rose at the side, completes the costume.

White and black-and-white costumes are extremely popular for the street for early fall. Mrs. Robert Learning Montgomery has chosen a becoming costume in white. The skirt is rather plain, and over it is worn a cape-coat, which falls almost to the knees in back and shortens at the front. The white is relieved by a small, close-fitting hat of black velvet. with upstanding gours feathers. Miss Hope Beale, who is tall and statuesque, has selected an outdoor costume which is charming for its simplicity. Her frock is of white cross-barred crepe, devoid of trimming; with it she wears a small black velvet hat with a single huge scarlet flower at the front. A smart gown of black chiffon taffeta has been selected by Mrs. Mahlon Hutchinson. The short jacket is worn over a blouse of black chiffon, and Mrs. Hutchinson's hat is of black velvet. Mrs. George R. Yarrow appeared recently in a becoming gown of pale gray taffets. with a small black hat,

Miss Elsie Morris Brinton wears a good-looking blue serge coat-sult. The skirt is narrow and has a short tunic. A short rounded coat, trimmed with a smart black satin collar reveres and cuffs stitched in a lighter shade of blue, completes the costume. With this Miss Brinton wears a large black velvet sailor-shape hat, with a single feather lying close to the brim, the ends of which cross on one side.

Mrs. William J. Clothier, who has been a conspicuous figure every day at the horse show in Bryn Mawr this week, has chosen an extremely chic gown of white lace, which is made with a gathered skirt and wide soft girdle. The hat, which seemed as if specially chosen for this frock, had a rather full crown of black velvet and a wide brim of shadow lace, which was wired and gave an upstanding halo effect.

Another levely creation which was seen at the horse show was that worn by Mrs. Robert Kelse Cassatt, who returned last week from a summer spent in Newport. The frock was fashioned of garlands of lace, which were outlined at the top with bands of French blueshaded ribbon. The bodice was open at the neck and finished with a de Medici collar. Mrs. Cassett's hat was large, and was made of cream-colored lace, and was trimmed with small bunches of gay flowers.
