me always all summer. He always put out the nicest crumbs! Three times a day!"

"But has he forgotten you now?" asked the mother sparrow.

"No, not really forgotten me," the little sparrow admitted, "but he don't pay attention to me as he used to. He just throws out some crumbs in the morning and then hastily slams the window shut and runs off to school."

The mother sparrow laughed. "Well, if that's all the ill treatment you get I shouldn't think you'd worry—I wouldn't."

"But I don't like it," said the little sparrow. "I liked to talk to him and I know he likes to talk to me, but I really believe he likes school better."

THE PASSING OF LEEBIE

BY MALCOLM S. JOHNSON.

If I'm kept in the house when it's snowing or wet, it's hard to be sunny and not frown or fret; But mother will cuddle me up in her chair, And tinkle me laughing, and play with my hair, And say she will read (and the book I may hold), The stories a boy, Louis Stevenson, told.

She reads of his shadow as 'fraid as can be; And the things that he saw when he climbed in a tree; And his playmate so nice whom he never could see; And the boat that he sailed in all day until tea; And the man who would gallop and gallop all night; And Leebie who nodded while lighting the light.

RECITER'S SHRIEK JARS NOVELIST IN ENFORCED RECITAL

William Dean Howells Tells His Experience With Elocutionist Who Wanted a Trial Hearing.

In his memoirs of youthful days William Dean Howells, in Harper's Magazine, tells of one of his early ventures in poetry, and of his interview with an elocutionist who came to see him in regard to reciting this masterpiece.

"Journalism was not my ideal, but it was my passion, and I was passionately a journalist well after I became an author. I tried to make my newspaper work literary, to give it form and distinction, and it seems to me that I did not always try in vain. But I had also the instinct of actuality, of making my poetry speak for its time and place.

"For the most part, I made it speak for the times and places I had read of; but while Lowell was keeping my Hesperus verse among his treasures, until he could make sure that they were not translations from Heine, I was working at a piece of realism which, when he printed it in the magazine, our exchange newspapers lavishly reprinted.

"In that simple time the copyright law hung loosely upon the journalistic consciousness, and it was thought a friendly thing to reproduce what pleased the editorial fancy in the periodicals which would now frowningly forbid it, but with less wisdom than they then allowed it, as I think. At any rate, its author, the prevaricator 'The Philistene' in our exchanges gave me a joy which I tried to hide from myself and from my senior in the next room; and I bore heroically the hurt I felt when some of the Mississippi gibes and the flings of their fonts of type, printed my long, overrunning hexameters as prose.

"I had studied the verse, not in Longfellow alone, but in King Lear and 'Andromeda' and Goethe's Hermann and Dorothea, but my story I had taken from a potentiality of the slave girl whose master gambles her away as a memento of his Mississippi triumph, and who flings herself into the river. I was at home with scene and circumstances.

"The popularity of the piece had its part as well as pleasure, but the sharpest anguish I suffered was from an elocutionist who was proposing to recite it on the platform, and who came to me with it, to have me hear him read it. He not only gave it with the music of my inner sense, but I praised him as well as I could until he came to the point where the slave girl accuses her master with the cry of 'Sold me! Sold me! Sold!' And you promised to give me my freedom!" when he said, 'And here I think I will introduce a shriek.'

"Yes," I faltered, "I feel that the shriek that comes at the last word 'Sold!' Something like that," and he gave a cry that my blood rushed, not from the accessibility of the auditor, but the agony of the author.

"Oh, no!" I implored him, and he really seemed to imagine my suffering. He said, 'I will not read it, but I will have the self-denial to keep his word I never had the courage to inquire.'

PERSONS PROMINENT SOCIALLY RECEIVE BEQUESTS IN WILL

Testament of Jane Norris Gives $5000 to Anita, Princes de Braganza, Margaretta Maidstone and Others.

Bequests of $5000 have been paid Anita, Princess de Braganza and Margaretta Maidstone from the estate of Jane Norris, who died in July, 1913. Other individuals prominent in Philadelphia society are beneficiaries under the will.

The first account of the estate of $530,237.67 has been filed by W. Barkley Henry, executor, for audit by the Orphans' Court.

Disbursements made in settling the estate amount to $14,250.55. From the balance of $515,987.12 there has been $122,059 distributed in compliance with the terms of the will as follows: Presbyterian Hospital, $50,000; Home of the Merciful Saviour, $5,000; Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Hospital, $5,000; the Female Association, $5,000.

Bequests to individuals are: Reta Armstrong Drexel, $50,000; Mary White, $15,000; Fanny Norris, $10,000; Dorothea Norris, $10,000; Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., $5,000; Ema Thompson, $5,000; Sophie R. Haughton, $5,000; Maud Haughton, $15,000; Rebecca A. Henry, $10,000; Mary White, $4,000; Margaretta Maidstone, $5,000; John A. Drexel, $5,000; W. Barkley Henry, $5,000; Annie A. Smith, $5,000; Sutherland, $5,000; Anita, Princess de Braganza, $5,000; Louis C. N. Drexel, $5,000; Morton A. Henry, $5,000; Alice Ellen Henry, $5,000; Barkley McKee Henry, $5,000.

The will of Helen V. Summers, 3245 North Fifteenth street, was admitted to probate today, disposing of $500 in real estate bequests. Personal property of William Allen has been appraised at $20,387.25; Hannah F. Friedenbergs, $38,500.

EGGS CHEAP IN SHANTUNG

360 May Be Purchased by a Single Dollar.

Fifteen years ago the price of eggs in the province of Shantung, China, was a dollar for 900 eggs. Now the price has risen to a dollar for 360. Twenty-seven million eggs were exported from this province in 1913, most of which went to England.

Few Chinese poultry raisers possess more than a dozen or so hens. They hatch most of their chickens in earthenware incubators which are heated by the fire which warm the living rooms and the beds—thus all the heat is saved. We have the word of our Consul at Chefoo that old women frequently incubate eggs by carrying them strapped about their waists under their outer garments. This is carrying economy to the limit, it would seem.

Most Chinese families are too poor to afford eggs even at the low prices mentioned, and therefore the entire product, except that portion used for hatching, is sold. On the average ten Chinese eggs weigh a pound.

"DRIVES" BRING IN RABBITS

Bounties Paid in Extermination Crusade in Texas.

Down in the Texas panhandle, sometimes referred to as the "plains" country, the farmers have started a movement to exterminate the jack rabbit in the interest of the grain crops. The county commissioners of Hale County have placed a bounty of 3 cents each on the rabbits' scalps. Several rabbit "drives" have been held near Plainview, the county seat of Hale County, and up to last New Year's day there had been 800 rabbits brought in for the sake of the bounty.

The choicest ones are sold upon their heads. The producers of the rabbits have done a big business shipping the rabbits away for food, and hundreds of those not suited for such use have been bought by farmers for hog feed.

Plainview is in the heart of what is known as the "shallow water belt" of the plains country, where for several years past such wonderful development has been taking place.

NEW WARSHIPS WILL FILL GAPS IN FORCES OF KAISER ON SEAS

German Admiralty Has Vessels of Latest Design Nearing Completion—Armament Supply Is Weak Point.

LONDON, Sept. 28. The measures which it has been reported the German Admiralty is taking to replace ships already lost in the war directs attention to their building program. Indeed, among the reasons put forward to explain why the High Sea Fleet has not yet come from behind the shelter of its fortified bases, it may be as well to recall reinforcements from the vessels now in an advanced stage of construction. Not only are these ships of all classes, and by no means few in number, but they are naturally of newer and more efficient types, more powerful, better protected, or faster, than the last ships passed into commission. It may be pointed out, however, that the German navy has nothing to lose from a material standpoint, by such a period of waiting. Whatever may be the number of vessels turned out by the German shipyards within the next few months, we have the assurance of Mr. Churchill, in his speech at the London Opera House on September 11, that English establishments will turn out more than double the number.

In regard to battleships, the next vessels to be added to the German Navy are the three of the 1911 program, the Koenigs, Markgraf, and Grosser Kurfuerst. They are understood to be fitting out at Wilhelmshaven dockyard, the Weser yard, Bremen, and the Vulkan yard, Hamburg, respectively. They were all launched during 1913. The Koenig on March 1, the Markgraf on June 4, and the Grosser Kurfuerst on May 5. At the launch of the last-named vessel, the baptismal oration, which is a prominent feature of such functions in Germany, was delivered by Prince Oscar of Prussia, the Kaiser's fifth son, who made reference to the inheritance which the Great Elector, after whom the ship had been named, had left to the Fatherland. The Prince continued:

"The new German Empire has assumed this inheritance of the Great Elector with understanding, and has cherished it faithfully. Through the initiative of our imperial master, supported by the patriotic, patriotic, and self-sacrificing attitude of the German people, princes and representatives, the war flag has followed trade on its peaceful ways, and the German eagle now spreads its wings over the world, and the German lands on far seas and foreign shores."

This has a curious ring at the present time, when, owing to the capacity of the German navy, nearly all the ships which formerly carried children of German lands on far seas have been either captured or driven into neutral ports. As to the German possessions on foreign shores, the German navy has already been removed from the protecting pinions of the same eagle, and it can only be a matter of time before the rest will follow.

THE NEW ARMY OF SHIPS

The three battleships referred to are now due for commissioning, and may be already under the pennant. The next in the line of the 1912 program, which was launched on February 21 last, and was due to join the fleet next summer. With a little speeding up, however, it might be possible to take the three months off her commissioning, in which case Germany could add by next spring four new dreadnought battleships to the 13 she had in commission before the war broke out.

Other battleships in the program are the two battle cruisers Derfflinger (1911) and Luetow (1912). The former was launched on July 1, 1913, at the Blohm and Noertmann yard, Hamburg, and is now probably in service. The latter was launched on November 21 last at the Schichau yard, Danzig, and it seems likely that efforts will be made to get her completed before the end of the year. There is a chance, of course, that the Russians may interfere with shipbuilding at Danzig and Elbing in pushing their armies into East Prussia. Another ship, the Salamis, a 10,000-ton vessel, was laid down by the Vulkan Company in January, 1913, for the Greek navy. This vessel had not been launched at the end of the year, and it is not probable that it will be launched before the end of July. She was to have received an American armament of eight 14-inch guns, manufactured by the Bethlehem Steel Company, of Pennsylvania, but it is doubtful if they have been delivered.

CRUISERS AND TORPEDO CRAFT. Turning to light cruisers, it is this class which has been most affected by such operations of the war as have yet taken place. The Magdeburg, Mainz, Koeln and Arcona have been destroyed, and in which line others are being hunted down by European waters and are consequently not available for service in the North Sea. Of the six in hand, the Graustein and Reck were launched in October and April last respectively, and should be in commission by the end of the year, but the other four cannot be delivered until the end of this year.

It is in regard to torpedo craft, both destroyers and submarines, that Germany will probably be able to strengthen her fleet materially and rapidly. There is no doubt that at least a score of destroyers and the same number of submarines when war broke out, a large number of which may have since been completed. If it has been determined to concentrate the energies of the German yards upon torpedo craft construction, as may well be the case, the output monthly may be considerable. There are four yards in Germany which have been practically in the building of torpedo vessels, and before the war the period of construction at these yards was on an average from 10 to 15 months. As they built for foreign orders as well as for their own fleet, it is probable that the full capacity is probably three or four times the 12 destroyers and six submarines provided for annually under the German navy law. It is known from our own experience, yards which have not been mainly employed in torpedo craft construction can in an emergency undertake such work, and no doubt if it is desired desirable to least 12 yards in Germany may at the present time be engaged in this branch of naval construction.

THE ARMAMENT SUPPLY. The weak spot in Germany's arrangements for warship construction is undoubtedly the Krupp monopoly. When some years ago Count von Reventlow made inquiry into the resources of the country for rapid construction several of the yards made their estimates of output conditional on the prompt delivery by Krupp of the armor and armament. In spite of the enormous additions made in recent years to the works of the great firm at Essen, it is certain that if a serious proposal has been made to increase the annual shipbuilding capacity will be strained to the utmost.

It may also be remarked that Essen is on the direct route of the allied armies to Berlin, and if they only succeed in making headway at the same rate as the month should show an end of the only source of German armament supply.

OBITUARIES

HUGO REISINGER

Art Collector Strove to Promote Friendship of U. S. and Germany.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Word has been received here of the death last Saturday night of Hugo Reisinger, of this city, at Langen Schwabach, Germany.

Mr. Reisinger was well known as an art collector and for his efforts during many years to create a better understanding between the United States and Germany.

He left New York last April as commissioner to the Anglo-American Exposition in London. From London he went to Germany, intending to return to New York early in the present month, but was delayed by the war. The body will be brought home for burial.

Hugo Reisinger was a native of Wiesbaden, Germany, where he was born on January 23, 1856. He was educated in the Royal Gymnasium, and in early life came to this country and became a merchant in the general import trade. He was an honorary commissioner to Europe for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis in 1904.

Many years ago he began purchasing choice modern works of art until he had one of the finest collections in this country. He married, in 1894, Miss Edme Busch, daughter of Adolphus Busch, of St. Louis.

REV. M. J. GERAGHTY

Rector of the Church of Our Mother of Consolation.

The Rev. Martin J. Geraghty, rector of the Church of Our Mother of Consolation, Chestnut Hill, and for 12 years provincial of the Augustinian Fathers of the United States and Cuba, died last night in the rectory of the church.

Father Geraghty was a graduate of Villanova College and the Novitiate of the Augustinian Fathers at Villanova College. His first mission was at the Church of Our Mother of Consolation, Chestnut Hill. In 1903 he was elected superior of the Augustinians, which position he held for 12 years.

The funeral will be on Thursday from the Church of Our Mother of Consolation.

JOSEPH E. GAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Joseph E. Gay, a mining man, died yesterday at the Touraine Hotel, at the age of 82 years. Until two months ago he kept in touch with his interests. Informally, he was the director of the American Enterprise and Irving Building and Loan Associations, and was president of the Union League Club, where he had lived for years, to the hotel where he died. In 1906 John Stanton, with whom Mr. Gay had been associated many years, died, and Mr. Gay became president of the Michigan Copper Mining, Mohawk Mining and Wolverine Copper Mining Companies. He had been president for 25 years of the Atlantic Mining Company, John R. Stanton, son of his former associate, succeeded him in the direction of the companies.

EUGENE BARNES

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Eugene Barnes, one of the pioneer business men of Tarrytown, died yesterday afternoon from apoplexy. He was 55 years old and leaves a wife and daughter. Mr. Barnes was born in Peekskill and went to Tarrytown when a boy. For 40 years he conducted a drug store, but retired five years ago. He was an assessor of the town of Tarrytown, a director in the Westchester County Savings Bank and a former village trustee and water commissioner.

THOMAS D. WALSH

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Thomas D. Walsh, superintendent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, died yesterday afternoon at the Memorial Hospital. He was 23 years old and entered the employ of the society in 1885. During his service Mr. Walsh wrote numerous papers on the subject of child protection, and for several years was associate editor of the Juvenile Record. He was a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science and the City Club.

R. W. SEARS

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—R. W. Sears, founder of Sears, Roebuck & Co., died yesterday at Waukegan, Wis. He was born in Minneapolis in 1863. He began his business career in a humble capacity at St. Paul. He organized Sears, Roebuck & Co. at Minneapolis in 1890 and transferred the business to Chicago in 1895. In that year he retired from active business and devoted himself to his family. He leaves, it is believed, a large fortune.

GEORGE C. DOSTER

George C. Doster, a clerk engaged in the offices of the General Chemical Company in the Lafayette Building, died yesterday at his home, 124 North 26th street. He was 23 years old and a graduate of Girard College, Philadelphia. He had been in poor health since last July. His death was due to Addison's disease.

JAMES LAVERTY

James Laverty, for many years a machinist in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad, died yesterday at the Masonic Home, Broad and Ontario streets, following an attack of heart disease. He was 71 years old and had been in feeble health for many months.

MRS. ANNA MARY CASSEL. Mrs. Anna Mary Cassel, wife of Clifford K. Cassel, a notary public, died yesterday at her home, 242 Glenwood avenue. The funeral services will be held from her home on Thursday. Interment will be in New Britain, Pa.

Funeral of Miss E. F. Gordon

Miss Elizabeth Frances Gordon, who founded the Gordon School at 412 Spruce street, Philadelphia, was buried in the Biddle-Gordon family plot at Laurelton yesterday. She was 51 years old and had retired from the school, which was her principal lifework, about six years ago. She was a member of the St. Philip's Protestant Episcopal Church and was active in educational, charitable and philanthropic work up to within short time of her death. A nephew and five nieces survive.

Funeral of Charles R. Green

The funeral services of Charles R. Green, assistant of the S. S. White Dental Manufacturing Company, Twelfth and Chestnut streets, will be held tomorrow from his home, 272 North Twelfth street. Mr. Green was 34 years old. He entered the employ of the Dental Manufacturing Company as an office boy more than 20 years ago, and was promoted with rapidity until he was made superintendent.

Funeral of Mrs. H. L. Caldwell

The funeral services of Mrs. Helen Lafayette Caldwell will be held tomorrow from St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and Locust streets. Mrs. Caldwell died from appendicitis on Sunday at her home, 243 Spruce street. She was widely known in society circles in Philadelphia.
