

ELLEN ADAIR SEES MOVING PICTURES AND ROMANCE

She Drops Into a Nickel "Movies" Show and Sees a Famous Actress in Sad Play.

XIV.

The turn of Fortune's wheel is such a curious thing! My second day in Philadelphia was a dreary day, until the evening came, when hope returned to me.

I walked through many crowded streets, with my sad thoughts for my only company. Gone, all were gone, the old familiar faces, I was alone, and life was something real and something desperately hard.

I do not think I have a social gift for making friends. I seem to care so much, my feelings go so deep, that words do not come easily to me.

Yet I am lonely, and I want, I want some friends; just a few friends whom I can care for, who will care a little bit for me.

Hears Adrift. The evening of my second day I passed a moving picture house, where for one nickel one could go inside. I hesitated, and was lost for a moment.

In the dim, shadowy twilight was a restful scene. All twilight was glorified in that dim, shaded light to a vague beauty that appealed to me.

At the end of the picture, the doors swung open, and I was inside.

More than a year ago in England, when wild roses bloomed upon the Sussex Downs, I saw the prettiest, freshest courtship scene.

Each morning early, while the dew was on the grass and everything was fresh and clean and young, I stepped on her bare feet across the meadow.

After a time I saw her at an escort on these early morning rides. He was a handsome, distinguished young man, and in his courtship bearing one could trace the finest line of noble ancestry from whom he sprang.

A great hush of will roses grew on the moor outside our garden, and one morning I saw my father's young daughter and the boy.

He pressed his white hands just one moment to his lips, then bowed his hat, and with the courtliest air presented it to her.

"A roselike smile with little white teeth. And sweet as a rose in the bud."

"I heard the girl laugh merrily, then, on a sudden smile. 'Why, Jim, your hand is terrible! It is just like your own,'" she said.

"Oh, Jim, if only you were not so poor, I think I should have married you!" I heard her say, with tears in her young voice.

"I think they married, and then they rode away. I imagined, such as there, so young and happy, and in the love, would surely be made in Heaven, I thought."

"Then came the following summer, and the scene was changed. The young girl, speculated badly, and as badly lost. An older, wealthier suitor, now arrived, with money, lands, position and a mansion in the heart of the city."

"I do not know what happened, but I know that she was young and feared her stern old father. Then I think she felt her duty lay in helping him retrieve the fifty thousand he had lost."

"I stood outside the church gate, and I saw her pass. Beneath a canopy of glittering diamonds, and a costly veil, she smiled at me—but in her pretty eyes a certain young, young light had died, I think forever."

After the gay wedding crowd had passed, I saw a man appear. He stopped and picked up one white rose that had fallen from the altar, and he looked at it. He pressed it to his lips and then I saw a thorn had hurt his hand. This time he did not smile. It was the Boy come back again, green as in a year. The look on that young handsome face made my heart ache! Could such a face be so sad?

"What," that spring should "kiss" the lips of the sweet-voiced, sweet-voiced, sweet-voiced?

WIVES DISCUSS HOUSEHOLD CARES AND PLEASURES

Diversity of Sentiment and a Mild Protest From a Husband.

In reply to yesterday's article dealing with Wife's Dull Round of Household Duties, the following letters have been received.

Madam—I am quite in sympathy with your article on Woman's Household Care. I am a woman close on to 40, and younger than I did ten years ago.

Her Husband Most Selfish. To the Editor of the Woman's Page, Evening Ledger.

Madam—Having read your article in tonight's paper, I must write at once to assure you that I heartily agree with every word of it.

A HARD-WORKING WIFE. Philadelphia, September 28, 1914.

Contented Wife Stays at Home. To the Editor of the Woman's Page, Evening Ledger.

Madam—I read with interest the sentiment of the housewives as expressed in your article on the Household Duties of Women.

Top-sided Logic Husband Asserts. To the Editor of the Woman's Page, Evening Ledger.

Madam—Your last evening's article on a wife's dull round of household duty strikes me as a piece of top-sided logic.

A WOMAN'S WEAPON. A revolver which has been designed for the previous woman to carry in her vanity case is probably the smallest weapon of her kind in the world.

HOW TO FINISH GILT FRAMES. Here is a hint which will be found useful at cleaning time.

SMILES THAT CHEER. Have you ever given this a thought? Have you any idea what tremendous value there is in a smile?

THE CARE OF TOILET BOTTLES. To clean glass toilet bottles, put a little vinegar and salt into the bottle, allow to stand for two hours, and then rinse out in clear warm water.

CHILDREN GIVE PLAY TO AID WAR'S VICTIMS

Richard Mansfield, 2d, and Companions Help Red Cross Work.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Little folk are proving of invaluable assistance to the American Red Cross in the society's efforts to relieve suffering caused by the war.

Eight little girls of Morristown, N. J., who held a fair, raised $800, which they contributed to the Red Cross.

Richard Mansfield, 2d, son of the actor, and several of his boy and girl friends gave a play at the home of Mrs. Mansfield.

A JAPANESE LOVE TALE. Housewives who find the servant problem a source of endless worry may get some consolation from the fact that in no country is the matter a perfectly simple one.

A lady in Tokio had a valuable servant of somewhat mature years, who rejoiced in the poetic name of "Oharu San."

THE FAMOUS CHRISTABEL. Miss Christabel Pankhurst, after a prolonged absence from this country, has returned to London.

CONTENTED WIFE. Madam—Your last evening's article on a wife's dull round of household duty strikes me as a piece of top-sided logic.

FRENCH ARTS AND CRAFTS RARE CHARM TO GIRL'S DANCE FROCK

Free From Sophistication of Dinner or Ball Dress, but Marked by Premeditated Simplicity.

For the girls who are neither "out" nor "in," and who go to almost any number of dances as their elders and betters the dance frock should be chosen with particular care.

It should not have the sophisticated air of the dinner dress, or the ball dress, but its simplicity should be of the premeditated kind, and not the accidental.

It is because the French dressmaker has felt the same "joy of creation" that inspires the artist or the sculptor that Paris has become a Mecca for lovers of beautiful clothes.

A frock must be a picture to realize the French conception, happily harmonious in scheme of color and symmetrical in outline.

They take an almost childish delight in dressing each other not merely appropriately, but in idealizing it, and decking it out in the trappings that will proclaim its exact status so that all who run may read.

The Parisian conception of the style suitable to the "jeune fille," is to array her in a way that will imply all that there is of freshness and youth, and to enhance the charm that is borne by those that are still "unspoiled of the world."

The dress shown in the illustration is designed from the Parisian point of view. In treatment and in the color combination it is essentially French—unmistakably a young girl's frock, with roses to symbolize the age.

The color is blue, the faintly turquoise blue that has a charmingly artless look when it is combined with pink.

To get just the right shades of the two colors, the delicate nuance, is an achievement toward which the business dressmaker is not likely to strive.

The bodice is very girlish in design, but the fact that it is sleeveless precludes it from being a creation of the present year.

The bouffant appearance that is now so desirable, greatly increased by the ruffle at the edge of the tunic and at the foot of the skirt.

Slippers and stockings that exactly match the shade of the dress are an important detail of the costume.

RECIPES FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

LEMON MERINGUE

Ingredients: The juice and grated rind of a lemon, one and one-quarter table-spoonsful of corn flour, one and one-half cupful of boiling water, one cupful of castor sugar, two eggs.

A DAIRY DISH FOR SUPPER. Take six deep, small patty-pans, well greased, for one patty-pan for each person, sprinkle each with a thick layer of breadcrumbs, which have been seasoned with a little chopped meat (cold ham for preference), minced parsley, pepper, salt, and a dash of onion powder.

TREACLE PUDDING. One breakfast cupful of chopped suet, one breakfast cup of breadcrumbs, one breakfast cup of flour, one egg and a little nutmeg grated, three table-spoonsful of treacle, chop suet and mix same with breadcrumbs and nutmeg; add treacle and egg well beaten; mix altogether, pour into a greased basin, cover with pudding cloth and steam for two hours.

DATE JAM. Buy the dates by the pound. Remove the stones from three pounds and put the fruit in a large bowl. Add about three breakfast cupfuls of water. Let the fruit just get hot, and then add a pound and a quarter of preserving sugar, stir well, and add a cupful of raisins and a teaspoonful of fresh butter. Stir until the jam begins to thicken and put while steaming hot.

THE SERVING OF FISH. Fish should always be served with a diet of parsley, dill, and lemon. Two or three herrings nicely served become as attractive as salmon.

A SCHOOL FOR LOVERS. For some time, Munich has had its "school for lovers"—they call it the "Hochschule der Heratwissenshaften."

QUITE SIMPLE. The guests at the table were discussing diets.

PINEAPPLE AND FIG JAM. Buy a tin of pineapple and a pound of dried figs. Cut the pineapple and figs small. Put in a basin and add the pineapple-juice, and leave all night.

THE DETAIL VS. THE LARGE-PLAN WOMAN. By MRS. CHRISTINE FREDERICK, Author of "The New Housekeeping."

I learn that business men are generally divided into two classes, one the detail man, the other the large plan man or executive.

Now the detail man is the one who carries out orders. He is responsible for the thousand and one details which make up a day of that particular business.

The "large plan" on the other hand is the one in whose brain originates the general policy of the business, the plans and ideals toward which the business shall work and the larger results not only for next week, but for years ahead.

Slippers and stockings that exactly match the shade of the dress are an important detail of the costume.

AMERICAN WOMAN HEADS CLUB TO AID WAR-HIT WORKERS

Duchess of Marlborough Organizes Emergency Corps for Benefit of Europe's Professional Women.

LONDON, Sept. 28. With a splendid public spirit, which invariably characterizes her, the Duchess of Marlborough (Consuelo Vanderbilt), immediately following her return to England, set in motion a society to be known as the Women's Emergency Corps.

The object will be to aid middle-class professional women workers who are too shy or too proud to reveal their present destitution resulting from the outbreak of war.

In furtherance of her object the Duchess sends to New York a letter appealing to the professional women in America to join hands with their British sisters by subscribing funds.

The letter continues: They are organized as a community. The only method of reaching them is through such an institution as the Women's Emergency Corps.

The Executive Committee contains the names of many of the most brilliant women writers in England, who are accustomed to work in co-operation with these professional business women, they are the most fit persons to organize funds.

The Duchess promises in return to American women schemes for work to give the destitute women a fresh chance and continuous employment through the war.

As a result of exchange of cablegrams between the Duchess of Marlborough and the Duchess of Devonshire, the latter has consented to receive subscriptions in New York and remit the same monthly to the Duchess in London.

MISPLACED MOURNING. After a period of six months of widowhood, Bridget consented to again enter the married state.

"Why, Bridget," she exclaimed, "for whom are you in black?"

"For poor Barney, my first husband, mum. When I died I was that poor of I couldn't afford to buy mourning, but I said if ever O'Connell would, and O'Connell, my new man, Tim, is as generous as a lord."

A WITTY RETORT. Up the platform she raced, quite out of breath, and no wonder for she was of an advanced age and the guard had the whistle in his mouth.

"Indeed, no," was the reply as she stepped into the compartment. "I am only racing for a race."

CRACKED FURNITURE. Cracks in furniture should be filled in with beeswax, softened the beeswax and it becomes like putty, then press it firmly into the cracks, and smooth the surface over with a thin knife.
