FIRE AT COLUMBIA DESTROYS FAMOUS UNIVERSITY HALL

Blaze Wrecks Building Designed by Stanford White. 3000 Students Rush to Rescue Trophies.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.-Fire wrecked the famous University Hall of Columbia University today. Estimates of the loss vary, Fire Chief Kenlon, who led the firemen that fought the blaze, declared that it was fully $1,000,000, but officials of the university declared this estimate was too large and said the loss probably would not be more than $200,000 and might be much less.

The building was a two-story structure, housing the gynfnasium, the Columbia Spectator, the college paper; the eating commons, the awimming pool and the college power plant. The fire for a time imperiled the entire group of uni- Five Fewer Cases of Tyversity buildings, but was confined by great efforts to the one building.

Five alarms summoned all available apparatus to the scene and the firemen were aided as far as possible by 2000 students, many of them scantily clad, who rushed from their dermitories and saved many of the trophies and much of the college property in the burning building. It was in this structure that President Nicholas Murray Butler was installed in 1905. He was among the spectators who saw it destroyed.

STARTED IN KITCHEN.

The fire is believed to have started in the kitchen of the eating commons. I was discovered by students returning on the scene in response to their alarm, but it was kept waiting for 20 minutes for the gates of the campus to be opened.

When the firemen got through the gates they found that only two hydrants were available on the campus. As a result, most of the hose had to be attached to hydrants several blocks away from th OVERCOME SAVING TROPHY. Several students had narrow escape from death. Frank McCarthy, stroke or the college crew, was overcome while trying to drag a rowing trophy from the gymnasium. A number of students who carried out a grand plano dropped with exhaustion as soon as they had completed their task. Sparks were blown through the open windows of Hadley Hall, adjoining the symnasium, and set fire to bedding there, but the flames were extinguished without serious damage. University Hall was designed by Stan-ford White, the architect killed by Harry K. Thaw. The original plans called for a six-story building, but only two had been finished. The first floor of the building, second largest on the campus, was of steel and concrete. The second story was of wood.

Constitutionalists' Agency in Washington Predicts Adjustment.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10,-General Villa's revolution will not interfere in the least with the plans of the election convention which is to meet in Mexico City in the mmediate future, was the declaration of the Constitutionalist agency today. There will most certainly be a peaceful settlement of the present trouble, the same authority declared.

Even if the convention now in session fails to sattle the trouble peacefully, it was pointed out that Villa cannot hope to win by force of arms since he is outnumbered by almost four to one. The best he can hope to accomplish is interven-tion by the United States, which seems inlitely, it is thought here.

LAST OF "ANCIENT MARINERS" ARRIVES HERE FROM HAWAII

The John Eva Lands After Long Voyage and Brings Back Glorious Memories of Old.

Last, or almost last, of the type of ships that once made the Stars and Stripes supreme on the Seven eSas, the American square-rigged ship John Ena, arrived at this port last night from Hillo. Hawall Islands. The voyage from the Pearl islands of the Pacific to this city took 131 days. During it the dreaded hook of South America, Cape Horn, was rounded probably for the last time by a vessel to or from this port. The opening of the Panama Canal sends into history the romance surrounding the "salling round the Horn."

The John Ena left Hile on May 31 commanded by Captain Olsen. Neither he nor the crew of 34 men knew of the war sweeping over Europe until told of the fact by Captain F. De Otte, of the revenue cutter Onondaga, off Winter Quarter Light, on Wednesday morning. It was amazing news to them. Every nationality, with the exception of the Belgian and Serb, involved in the struggle are represented in the crew. In addition to them, there are a few Philippine Islanders, Fouth Sea Islanders and Americans. GLORIOUS MEMORIES.

Memories of the glorious days, gone forever, when the harbor resembled a forest of masts, from the majority of which flew the American flag, were recalled by the port's "ancient mariners" at the sight of the stately, royal gallant yards of the staunch sailer. "Those were the days," said one veteran, "when there was no hue and cry for an American merchant marine. We had one to be proud of, and though its tonnage was less than other nations' the Yankee tars and Yankee ships by their fearlessness and courage captured most of the world's commerce."

The John Ena is virtually, if not actually, the last of the magnificent race of windiammers typical of the thrilling clipper ship era. In the past few years the square-rigged ships under the American flag have been converted into barges or have gone to their doom on the scrap pile or gloriously at sea. It is most likely that the days of the John Ena as a creature of the "roaring forties" are ended. Uncle Sam's gigantic waterway across the Isthmus of Panama has made it impossible for a vessel of her type to compete against steamships. It is expected that the Ena will have an auxilliary engine installed to obviate the necessity of being towed through the canal and up through the windless western approach. The towage fees cut into the profits until they are nil.

HAD BAD VOYAGE.

The John Ena, according to Captain Olsen, had some of the worst weather of her career on her voyage. At times there was not enough wind and at other times there was too much wind. The run from Hawaii to the Equator re-2 quired ten days and to Cape Horn 70 days. This, Captain Olsen said, was the slowest run he has ever made to these points. Two years ago Captain Olsen brought his ship around to this port in 84 days, which still stands as an unsurpassed record. The weather at the Horn was beautiful. It was cool, but clear. The run up the Atlantic coast was un-During the entire run of 131 days only two other vessels were sighted

U. S. COMMISSION SUSPENDS RAIL SWITCHING CHARGES

Holds Over Until Next Year New Tariff Rate of $2 a Car.

Freight tariffs of the Baltimore and Ohio and other Eastern railroads, which provide for a charge of 51/2 cents per ton, minimum charge $2 per car, for switching freight to and from points on private sidings and industrial plant tracks, were further suspended today by the Interstate Commerce Commission from October 29 until April 29. These tariffs were origthally suspended from July 1.

Switching charges were first proposed by Louis D. Brandeis, attorney for the commission, in the 5 per cent. advance case. It was then pointed out that the railroads should first assess charges on services now being rendered free to large shippers. The roads immediately filed the switching tariffs, but upon comptaint of shippers they were suspended, pending an investigation. This investigation has not investigation. This investigation has not yet been completed.

In addition the commission further suspended from October 20 until April 20 the proposed tariff of the Wheeling and Lake Eric Railroad, which proposed to absorb the switching charges of the Cuyahoga Valley and the River Terminal Railways at Cleveland; the switching charges of the Newburg and South Shore Railroad at Cleveland and Newburg, and the switching charges of the Lake Terminal Railroad at South Lorain.
