

BRUMBAUGH STAMP ON CITY RECREATION REFUTES M'CORMICK

His Work for System That Gives Many Thousands Substitute for Saloon Answers Democrat's Argument.

The charge made by Vance C. McCormick that Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh has never taken part in any independent political movement makes any attempt to give credit to improvements for Philadelphia is not supported by the life and record of the Republican gubernatorial nominee.

Dr. Brumbaugh has served for three years as president of the Board of Recreation, under a reform administration, and as an appointee of Mayor Blankenburg. The latter in 1907 elected Brumbaugh to his personal friends.

Without any financial compensation, Doctor Brumbaugh has succeeded in obtaining the city of Philadelphia a recreation system which provides a substitute for the saloon and street corner. The Board of Recreation is a municipal body and has no official connection with the Board of Education.

It was created in 1911 by an act of the Legislature, which authorized the Mayor to appoint five of its seven members, the other two members being the Mayor himself and the Director of the Department of Health and Charities.

Every day, after he had left his office at the headquarters of the Board of Education, Doctor Brumbaugh attended meetings of the Board of Recreation or applied himself to some detail in the management of the city's recreation centers.

Dr. Brumbaugh's friends assert that he has done more for the playgrounds movement in this city than any other Philadelphian. By keeping the movement out of the hands of the politicians, they say that he has accomplished a civic benefit that can not be fully appreciated.

The creation of the playgrounds commission, with the subsequent Board of Recreation, was the result of agitation by the Philadelphia Playgrounds Association, of which he was president.

As president of the board, Doctor Brumbaugh has encountered innumerable difficulties, but in each case, it is known, he has fought on the side of the children where their interests were involved.

Dr. Brumbaugh's friends assert that he has done more for the playgrounds movement in this city than any other Philadelphian. By keeping the movement out of the hands of the politicians, they say that he has accomplished a civic benefit that can not be fully appreciated.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS WANT OLD GUNS SENT SOUTH

Nashville Declared More Appropriate Home for Historic Canon. Many old Confederate soldiers have written the Philadelphia chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, urging it to take steps to have a historic field gun at the Memorial to German town soldiers, at Germantown avenue below Chelton avenue, removed to Tennessee, according to a statement made today by Mrs. E. Frederick Oates, president of the Philadelphia chapter of the Daughters. This old field gun has been a landmark at Germantown for many years. It was placed there at the close of the Civil War.

The gun was one of a battery of six field pieces taken by the Confederates from the Union forces at Perryville early in the war. It remained in the continuous service of the South until the battle of Nashville in 1864, when it was recaptured by the Federals. On the breech of the cannon is an inscription bearing the name of Q. T. Mitchell, First Tennessee Volunteer. Mitchell was a gallant Confederate soldier, killed at Perryville. It is thought by the old Confederates that the more appropriate place for this field piece is at Nashville, where many old soldiers of Mitchell's brigade still live and where some of his descendants reside.

At the meeting Dr. Ernest Laplace, 1523 South Rittenhouse square, will present a prize of $10 offered by the chapter for the best essay on the South as a place in American literature. It was won by Mrs. M. B. Newman, of West Chester. Delegates and alternates will be elected to the annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy to be held at Savannah, November 11 to 14. A Cross of Honor will be placed upon Robert Edmondson, 1904 Mt. Vernon street, an old Confederate veteran. The chapter will buy a bale of cotton to aid the "Buy-a-bale of cotton" movement. Mrs. Oates, president, will preside.

MARYLAND "GRANDFATHER CLAUSE" IN HIGH COURT

Feudal Case One of Several Before Supreme Tribunal. WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Meeting today for the first time since the summer recess for the purpose of handing down decisions, the Supreme Court of the United States has a docket of already argued cases of great importance.

One of these is the Maryland "grandfather" case. This law would not prevent Negroes from voting for Federal officers, but in State and municipal elections provides that, among other things, a man can vote if his ancestors voted prior to January 1, 1865, or before Negroes were enfranchised. This law was applied in Annapolis, capital of Maryland, and four Negroes have appealed the case up to the Supreme Court.

Another race question decision which will be handed down in the near future, probably, if not today, will be that on the Oklahoma "Jim Crow" law, providing that common carriers must provide separate compartments for white and black passengers.
