CHILDREN'S CORNER

They took me to the church one day, Where daddy preaches people good. I heard the great big organ play, For high upon the seat I stood.

My mother said the things with eyes Were pipes, so while my daddy spoke I looked, an I yet, to my surprise, I could not see one bit of smoke.

My daddy preached a great long time; I thought about my humming top; I longed to see a spider climb. And Andy Swartz's barbershop.

Then little children all in white Were christened, standing in a line; I thought it was a pretty sight To see them smile and look so fine.

Then we were called to graduate From cradle roll to primary: I was afraid I would be late, And ran down calling, "Here I be!"

They handed me a s'tifercat. Oh, dear, I felt so sad and f'lorn! I cried, "No. sir! I don't want that, I want a little tooting horn."

The people laughed and laughed at me; And daddy seemed to think 'twas fun. But mother's mad as she can be. And says she's 'shamed of little son. -MALCOLM SANDERS JOHNSTON.

ou go back to the city, mother," said Jimmy, "and have a good time, I'll stay here in the woods and keep Jack Frost from coming any further."

Of course, Mrs. South-breeze was proud and happy to realize that her little boy was growing up so he could take care of her, and she was glad he was brave enough to want to do it—any mother would be. So she smiled and patted Jimmy on his back and wished him luck. Then she blew off toward the city to tend to her own

"But"—Bushy Squirrel started to argue again, but Jimmy interrupted him. "But you see," he said, "I don't intend to go to sleep."

"No?" asked Bushy Squirrel.

McNAIR EXPOUNDS SINGLE TAX Answers Questions Put to Him by Occupants of Cafe.

An impromptu discussion of public af-airs by William N. McNair, Democratic candidate for Secretary of Internal Affairs, was held in a little cafe at Juniper and Sansom streets, when the candidate entered the place late last night to buy

The cafe was filled with Socialists and others with pronounced opinions on na-tional and State issues. Mr. McNair was recognized and some of those present gathered around his table to question him. For the next half hour McNair ex-ounded the doctrine of the single tax, of which he is an ardent exponent.

Mayor of New York City Uses Classified Ad to Fill Big Job

(From the N. Y. Sun., Oct. 21, 1914.) Advertising Pays.

"Pull" sags and "Influence" boohoos. Mayor Mitchel has given a $5000-a-year job to a candidate selected out of some 300, all answerers of an advertisement in the daily papers; an unsigned advertisement that carried no possible hint of politics. It was addressed to "only men of marked executive ability and good experience," qualities that are oftenest lacking in the political papefeds.

oftenest lacking in the political pap-feds.

Advertising pays; pays the city as well as smaller corporations; but the choice of the most competent man found by advertising; we are living, we are moving in a grand and wondrous time; and the mossbound officeholder and officeseeker must fear the end of the world.

When Mayor Mitchel needed a real big man for a real big job, he didn't look among the ward heelers and political hangers-on to find him. He went about it just as all good business men do. He went to headquarters-to the classified columns of the newspapers -and out of 300 replies received to an unsigned ad he picked the man who was eminently fitted by ability and experience for the work. When you are looking for a man to fill a really big job-Take a Leaf From the Mayor's Book. Put a Want Ad where competent, able men will see it. State your requirements. You will find that the quickest and best way to fill vacancies with the right sort of workers is to use the classified columns of the
