WHAT MILADY WEARS

Smart Gowns Are Worn by Smart Women in the Shops and at the Various Tea Rooms. Milady, as she trips through the shops or stops in one of the attractive tea rooms for a quiet chat, appears extremely dainty and frilly in her new fall clothes.

One of society's smartest matrons, Mrs. Samuel Bell, Jr., has chosen a stunning model of plum-colored cloth. The skirt is made narrow at the foot and has a wide hem. The bodice is made with a long, pointed peplum of the material which is edged with wide folds. A satin collar and cuffs are worn with the gown. and above the satin collar is a flaring one of plum-colored chiffon. With this gown Mrs. Bell wears a small black velvet toque which clude the bridal party, who are Miss Margue- has small flat pheasant breasts around the edge and a tall spiked aigrette at the from Mrs. Ralph Townsend has selected an extremely smart gown of dark-blue cloth which is made with a long-waisted bodice which ends about the hip with a wide satin sash. The sleeves of the frock are made of black satin and the drop skirt under the full overskirt of blue is also of satin. Her hat is a stiff model of satin-finish beaver in a sailor shape.

Miss Elizabeth Thompson is wearing a smart suit of bottle green cloth, which is made with a tiny short jacket and skirt full over. The prettiest part of the costume is the hat which is worn with it. It is small and close fitting, of the exact shade of dark green as the gown and is made entirely of breasts. The contrast to Miss Thompson's golden hair is most attractive.

Miss Pauline Disston, another debutante. wears a stunning frock of dark blue which is made with a full overskirt and plain sleeves. The bodice is made in a basque effect and has shirrings of satin at the sides. A small, cle >fitting velvet toque is worn with the gown.

Miss Edwinn Eikins Bruner, who has been spending the fall with her grandmother. Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, in West Virginia, is wearing a trotteur of navy blue serge, which, with a close-fitting little hat of black velvet, proves most becoming to her statuesque beauty.

Mrs. John Conaway Megargee appeared recently in a smart costume of black velvet with a small hat to match. The black is relieved by a stole and muff of ermine and boots of black and white.
