'FOLKS BACK HOME' TELL THE STORY OF PRESIDENT'S POWER

Politicians Puzzled, But Riddle Solved by Those Who Realize Neighbors' Influence With Lawmakers

FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT. WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 .- Politicians of the old school cannot understand how President Wilson has succeeded in having his legislative program enacted into laws by Congress without causing a serious split in the Democratic party. In the days of President Roosevelt, Congress accepted "My Policies" simply because the statesmen at the other end of Pennsylvania avenue feared the "Big Stick." In this Administration, however, President Wilson has not endeavored to coerce the lawmakers into bowing to his will.

Few members of the Senate or House have been taken into the President's confidence. He has dominated the legislative branch of the Government, however, and even the small band of insurgents led by Speaker Clark, who attempted to defeat the resolution for the repeal of the free tolls provision of the Panama Canal act, were so completely crushed that they are today the President's most loyal sup-porters. "How, then," veteran statesmen are asking, "has the 'schoolmaster' succeeding in getting everything he asked for and at the same time held his party to-

The EVENING LEDGER correspondent to-day asked a friend of President Wilson to explain the secret of the President's control of Congress.

"FOLKS BACK HOME."

"There's no mystery about it," he repiled. "the President has had the support of the next-door neighbors of the Democratic Senators and Representatives. It has been the fear of the folks back home that has kept the legislators in line. They realized that if they opposed the President they would have to explain to the neighbors at home.'

It has long been a rule with the Prestdent to entertain a wholesome respect for the opinion of his neighbors. On one occasion, he was walking in the outskirts of Princeton with a newspaper correspondent. He was telling of the days back in the latter 70s, when he was a student at Princeton.

"I have often said," the President-he was Governor of New Jersey then-ex-plained, "that while I walked, so far as is known, a pretty straight road while I was in college, I did not feel that it was was in college, I did not real that it was due to any natural and innate virtue of my own. I know again and again when I- was tempted to do things that I knew that I ought not to do I was restrained, not so much by the precepts of morals as by what I knew the folks at home would think of me if I did those things."

Again, on the President's 58th birthday, just after his Virginia neighbors had presented him with beautifully wrought min latures of his father and mother, Mr. Wilson discussed this same question of "the influence of a man's next-door neigh-bor." On that occasion the President told a story-not a funny story, but a very touching one-to illustrate "how much a man's morals is in other people's WEBSTER BOWED TO NEIGHBORS When Mr. Webster was at the acme of his career," said the President, "he went back after a fatiguing session of the Senate to his home in Boston. He He had hardly sunk off into that first delicious loss of consciousness which precedes sound sleep when there was a knock at his door. His orders were immediately disobeyed and her servant roused him, and Mr. Webster angrily saked him why he dared do that.

"'Well,' he said. 'Mr. Webster, I wouldn't venture to do it, but there are some gentlemen downstairs from your cld home in New Hampshire who wouldn't go away, sir, and they said it was a case of life and death that they had to see you about."

"Webster, with many complainings and grantless got as his clothess."

gruntings, got on his clothes and went down to find a group of plain men from his old home in New Hampshire, who told him that there was a boy, their neighbor, a son of a friend of his, who was charged with murder and caught in a net of circumstantial evidence which seemed absolutely to be conclusive. "'But,' they said, 'Mr. Webster, we have known that boy ever since he was born; he did not commit that murder, and we don't know any man that can unravel this skein of syldence but yourself. You must come.' They pleaded with him and finally he said he would not come. not come. Then they arose and the spokesman said, half to Mr. Webster and half to the others, 'Well, I suppose we must go home; but I don't know what the neighbors will say. 'Oh, well,' said Mr. Webster, 'if it comes to the neighbors, I'll go.'

"That is the greatest compulsion I know of," the President added. "what the neighbors would think. A very witty English writer says, 'You may talk of the tyranny of Nero and Tiberius, but the real tyranny is the tyranny of your next door neighbor."

It has been, according to one of the President's closest friends, this "tyranny of your next door neighbor" that has held 53 Democratic Senstors and 200 Representatives in line and made the "big stick" a useless weapon in this Admin-

President Expresses Hope People Will Awaken to Ravages of Disease

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. - President Wilson expresses his approval of the fifth national tuberculosis day movement during the week of November 29, and also of the work of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, in a letter to Dr. George M. Kober, the president of that body, made public today. He says:

SCORES RAILROADS AS UNJUSTIFIED IN HIGHER RATE PLEA

Clifford Thorne Condemns Carriers for Taking Advantage of the "Situation Produced by European

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 .- Scoring the allroads in Eastern classification territory for taking advantage of existing conditions to force the Interstate Commerce Commission to grant a flat increase in freight rates of 5 per cent., to meet the "situation produced by the European war," Clifford Thorne, chairman of the Iowa State Railroad Commission, today charged that the railroads were unjustified in their demands.

He declared at the reopening of the ate advance argument before the comnission that the plea for more revenue o pay dividends to bolster up American railway securities was not a proper argument to submit to show that railroad property needed Federal help.

"The question in this hearing," declared Mr. Thorne, "is whether or not the commission will go outside of its jurisdiction to grant an increase in rates to the railroads."

Mr. Thorne said that the commission's authority only extended to a point of declaring what was a reasonable rate. "Should it be ascertained that the present rates are not reasonable in view of the situation created by the European war, then," said Mr. Thorne, "the commission has proper authority to consider the railroads' application for the increase."

He added that an increase in rates was not justified on the pretext advanced by the carriers. "REHASHING OLD ARGUMENTS." "Most of the lines in official classification territory," said Mr. Thorne, "are distinctly prosperous. Hardly had the ink dried on the decision printed by the Commission several weeks ago in the Eastern freight advance case when the railroads come again asking for additional help. Today these self-same roads are rehashing their old arguments of inadequate revenues. There is absolutely no evidence of any fact since the record in the former case was concluded showing a falling off of any special commodities. securities are selling at better prices than before." Mr. Thorne introduced a petition from merchants of St. Joseph, Mo., opposing the granting of the increase. It declared the carriers had no more right for an increase than individual shippers

Failure of Carefully Planned Invasion of Poland From Three Directions Revives Russian Hope of Successful Advance to Berlin.

It is officially admitted in Berlin that the German invasion of Poland has collapsed. Instead of thundering at the gates of Warsaw-as they were a couple of weeks ago-General von Hindenburg's forces are now rapidly retiring toward the German base in West Poland, on the River Warthe. The German left has yielded more ground than the centre or right. In the region west and southwest of Warsaw the Russians claim to have occupied Lodz, which had been in German possession since early in August. The extreme German left is now about 75 miles west of Warsaw, and the line of the retiring army runs from that point southeast to the neighborhood of Radom until it almost touches the upper Viatula. But the Russians are on the offensive all along this front, and the official Berlin statement says that strong reinforcements to the enemy have ne-cessitated a retreat.

The forward movement in Poland was part of a general plan to check the Rus-sian westerly advance, which had made such unexpected progress up to the mid-dle of September. By that time the Rus-sians had cleared Eastern and Central sians had crossed the San River, in-galicia, had crossed the San River, in-vested Przemysl and pushed west toward Cracow as far as Rzeszow. In order to counteract that advance and allow the heaten Austro-Hungarian armies time to reorganize, a German force crossed the Russian border from East Prussia about four weeks ago and attacked some of the fortresses on the line of the River Nie-men. That diversion had little success, the Germans being quickly driven back into their own territory.

Von Hindenburg endeavored to take the Russians by surprise by a dash for War-saw, and he did, in fact, get within ten miles of Warsaw before his attack could

To meet this invasion Russian troops had to be massed all along the middle stretches of the Vistula and the Rus-sian advance through Gallela had to be halted. The Russian armles in Galicia withdrew to the line of the San River, which forms a continuation of the Vistula southeast from the Polish border to the Carpathians and covers Jaroslau and Przemyal. On that line and south-ward, at Sambor and Stryj, they stood for a couple of weeks on the defensive, waitng to see how the new Austro-German feeling of nervousness at certain places along the border over the supposed danger of such an attack. Such fears are declared to be unwarranted.

The Russian concentration in the west-ern theatre has been worked out with great precision and smoothness. Now German control of Western Poland, which Russia had not hitherto seriously disputed, is in danger.

If the German retreat continues only a small section of Poland west of the Warthe River will remain in General you believe to be a polar to the whole of Martin River will reside in Conservation Hindenburg's hands and the whole of western Galicia will be uncovered to a Russian attack from the north. At Lods the Russians are further west than they have been at any other stage of the camhave been at any other stage of the cam-paign. If they can clear southwestern Poland of the enemy, the Austro-Hun-garian armies on the line of the San River will be in an extremely danger-ous position. These forces will be sub-ject to an attack from the rear and their line of retreat to Cracuw may be cut off. Should they be compelled to retire across the Carpathian Mountains into

By NEW YORK TRIBUNE CRITIC | Hungary they would be of little further use in the present campaign The German and Austro-Hungarian armies on the eastern front are limited by strategical considerations to a defensive role. They cannot with safety undertake anything like a conquest of Russia. The excursion to the Niemen and the raid to the Vistula have not seriously in terrupted the Russian campaign. The former was abortive. The latter has led to a new Russian advance which puts in peril the position of the Austro-Hun-garian army in central Galicia and reopens the road to Cracow.

ditures for maintenance. BROWNELLE DEFENDS RAILROADS. George F. Brownelle, counsel for the Erie Railroad, following Mr. Thorne, declared that since the former hearing facts and circumstances had arisen which had materially changed the situation of the carriers, which would fully justify the granting of the advance naked for. "The effect of the European war on the supply of capital available for investment would be serious and increase the difficulty of the railroad companies in securing the new capital necessary for refunding, for improvements and for other purposes," he said.

"It, is obvious," Mr. Brownelle con-cluded, "that the railroad and trans-portation interests of the country lie at the basis of our industrial and financial fabric, and that unless those interests can be made reasonably prosperous through adequate revenue, their financial necessities relieved and confidence in the stability of their securities restored and maintained no permanent relief from exsting conditions can be expected. GUN TO SHOOT 27 MILES: MINE GUIDED FROM SHORE

Two New Weapons Reported to Have Been Launched by Germans.

BERLIN, Oct. 30 .- Two weapons have been perfected by the Germans that are expected to be decisive factors in the present war, both on land and sea.

One is a new howitzer which is declared to have a range of 27 miles, being far superior to the greatest guns of nations. The other is a dirigible floating mine, whose movements 20 miles from shore can be directed by electricity.

The secret of the construction of these destructive weapons has been guarded, and the fact that it has become known indicates that both are being used or will be used immediately.
