THE DRAMA

ANNA PAVLOVA "Divine" of Dancers—Metropolitan Opera House, November 23.

A Time For Religious Drama

In books and plays, as well as in art, the two subjects of fundamental interest are those which concern love—love primarily the same under all its varied phases—and man's instinctive desire for immortality. The greatest novels and plays have been those dealing with these, humanity's two most stupendous themes. There has been, as Sarah Bernhardt recently said, a popular hesitancy in accepting religious plays. Nevertheless, of the most astounding dramatic successes, a great proportion have been religious. "Ben Hur" is still playing, and will be soon seen again, for the 15th time, in Philadelphia. "Quo Vadis" has not lost its appeal, as is manifest in the production of the "movie drama." There were "The Sign of the Cross" and "The Christian"—memorable successes of not one, but many persons.

Says Madame Bernhardt: "The theatre reflects the thoughts of a nation; it is incessantly striving to embody what is beautiful and true. Sometimes it is far in advance of public opinion, and must wait until the right moment has come. This was the case scarcely 20 years ago in regard to the religious question in the theatre. Now public opinion is more conciliatory, and it is admitted that the religious dramas written in the last ten years challenge our admiration for their grandeur and beauty. We need more."

In the humblest realms of life there are Paraisos today seeking the "Holy Grail" of some inviolate passion, some transcendent soul experience, some exaltation beyond the mortal. With nations at strife, with the desolations and abominations of war, we may seek a factious diversion in amusing banalities; nevertheless, there was never a time when dramas seriously and sacredly dealing with the spiritual themes of life—with love in its holiest sense with humanity's loftiest aspirations—and bearing an inspiring message, were more to be desired. At this catastrophic epoch a really sublime religious drama would meet with a mighty response.

FLASHES FROM "STARS"

Miss Ida Hamilton, who will play Fanny in "Hindle Wakes" when it is presented at the Little Theatre on November 16, is a believer in suffrage and an earnest advocate of equal rights for women, not merely from the standpoint of the ballot, but from the standpoint of the judgment of the world. She disapproves, however, of militant methods, believing them a hindrance rather than a help, because they prejudice the general public.

Frank Craven, who will appear at the Adelphi later in the season in his comedy, "Too Many Cooks," declares that the present European war will give impetus to the writing of a surfeit of military dramas which will result in the ultimate triumph of comedy plays as entertainment. "My idea of the show business is that its paramount purpose is to entertain," says he, "and it must be conceded that nothing entertains so completely as something amusing, something that causes hearty laughter."

Pedro de Cordoba, now playing Stephen Bennett in Edward Sheldon's "Song of Songs," at the Broad Street Theatre, began his stage career with E. H. Sothern in "If I Were King," "Hamlet" and "The Proud Prince."

Edward Pele, author of "A Pair of Sixes" and other successful plays, has just finished another farce which he has not yet named. It will be produced by H. H. Frazer.

The three principal comedians in "A Pair of Sixes" at the Adelphi Theatre, Ralph Her, Hale Hamilton and Fritz Williams, are college graduates. Her graduated from Oxford University; Hamilton from the University of Kansas, and Williams from Fordham University in New York.

ADELPHI—"A Pair of Sixes," farce by Edward Pele. Two business partners shoot a cold hand, the winner to retain the business, the loser to become his body-servant for a year. Maude Ehrne imitating funny as a slavey.

BROAD—"The Song of Songs," new play by Edward Sheldon. An episodic adaptation of Hermann Sudermann's novel detailing a girl's quest of love, in which Irene Fenwick proves herself a capably great actress.

FORREST—"Sari," charming operetta, with Mizzi Hajos and Irene Powlowka. Mizzi Hajos, an Hungarian girl, transported to Paris, is impossibly, copy-funny—and just captivating. Miss Powlowka sings operatically and charmingly.

GARRICK—"The Debutante," new musical comedy, with book by H. B. and R. B. Smith and music by Victor Herbert. A trite plot, enlivened by bits of insinuating music, with Hazel Dawn as rosette as ever.

KEITHS—Celebration of the 12th anniversary of this popular vaudeville house, with Jesse L. Lasky's tabloid musical comedy, "The Society Buds."

LITTLE THEATRE—Excellent revival of "The Rivals" in original form as written by Sheridan, admirably acted.

LYRIC—"The Story of the Rosary." Elaborately staged melodrama, which will weary some in the first act and thrill others to the last, appreciation being a matter of taste.

WALNUT—"Within the Law." Catherine Tower convincingly portrays Mary Turner, who is unjustly sentenced to prison, but finally triumphs.

larity. As a sequel to this work he has just completed a new work entitled "First Cousin to a Dream," which will be brought out shortly by the John Lane Company.

Weary of having all her gowns copied by modistes, Miss Julia Sanderson, who is playing in "The Girl From Utah," has decided to preserve the originality of her costumes by invoking the aid of the law. She will have all her gowns copyrighted in Washington, D. C., just as an author has a book or a play copyrighted. So hereafter, if husbands find their wives attired in perfectly bewitching new gowns they will have simply to look inside them, and if they find the mark "Copyrighted, by Julia Sanderson" they will know they are the real articles.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell has consented to appear for a single performance in the title role of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" during the engagement of "Pygmalion" in New York.

Mrs. Campbell has been induced to revive what is generally believed to be her best role by a group of women, headed by Mrs. Norman Hapgood, who are raising funds for the relief of sufferers in Europe. Their scheme is that of an all-star representation of the famous play, and inasmuch as Mrs. Campbell is deeply concerned with the war situation the idea fell upon eager ears.

Billy Burke has signed a contract with Charles Frohman, by the terms of which Miss Burke will play exclusively under his management for the next five years. This is the first written contract this actress has ever had with Mr. Frohman, every other agreement whereby she has appeared under his management having been verbal.

By the terms of the new agreement Miss Burke will play in one of Mr. Frohman's theatres in New York until Christmas each season. Miss Burke will play as far West as San Francisco, where she is to appear during the Panama Exposition. Mr. Frohman has arranged that Miss Burke shall play Rosalind in "As You Like It" for a special engagement in New York city next spring.

Miss Beatie Abbott, prima donna, has arrived in New York. She has a contract to sing in opera in Paris, but because of the war she will not be called upon to keep it. She is accompanied by her husband, Waldo Story. Their house in Paris has been turned over to the Government, to be used as a Red Cross hospital.

Joseph Brooks has completed arrangements for the coming tour of the play "The New Henrietta," which opens on Christmas Day in Indianapolis, afterward going to the Cort Theatre, Chicago, for an indefinite engagement. In the cast will be William H. Crane, Thomas W. Ross and Maclay Arublock, Amelia Bingham and Mabel Taliaferro.

Donald Brian has made his debut as a song writer by introducing a song called "Most Wonderful Eyes in the World," in the first act of "The Girl From Utah," at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York.

"Suzi," the new operetta, is booked for presentation at the Lyric Theatre later in the season.

Foxhall Dainfield, a nephew of the late James R. Keene, is playing a character role in "The Battle Cry." He is a cousin of Foxhall P. Keene, and his father, Algernon Dainfield, is assistant secretary of the New York Jockey Club. He has written several magazine stories and is the author of "The Household," a four-act drama which has recently been accepted for production.
