

SIDELIGHTS OF PERSONAL TINT IN FEDERATION CONVENTION

Many Striking Features of Noteworthy Assemblage and Glimpses of the Men Who Make a Stir in the World of Labor.

The most striking feature of the present convention of the American Federation of Labor is the large number of tall delegates that are attending.

J. G. Brown, of Seattle, Wash., has few peers when size is the consideration. Brown is president of the Timber Workers and is more than 7 feet tall.

Just to illustrate his versatility, A. J. Kugler, of Cincinnati, can discuss the present European crisis for hours at a stretch if not headed off in time.

Duncan McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the Mine Workers of Illinois, and Adolph Gerner, vice president of the same organization, left last night for Cherry, Ill., where they will address a meeting at the third anniversary of the Cherry mine disaster.

WILL TAKE LABOR'S RIGHT TO CONGRESS

I should make its attitude plain. We of the Federation of Labor deplore strikes. We greatly desire industrial peace.

"The meetings of the Federation of Labor are open ones. We welcome the criticisms of our friends and of our foes. We are going on with our work to help the man and woman of labor whether they are represented here or not.

"The labor movement must work out its own destiny and that the emancipation of labor must be accomplished by labor itself was the keynote of an address by Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the United States Commission on Industrial Relations.

"Collective bargaining," said Mr. Walsh, "is that machinery which would make it possible for well-to-do men to drive hard bargains with hungry men."

"The Commission will tell Congress that out of more than 300 employers and great captains of industry who appeared before it only five expressed themselves as opposed to collective bargaining.

"We are holding the mental balance between organized labor and organized capital," said Mr. Walsh, "but we are also heeding the voice of the disinherited of God's creatures, the exploited man and the exploited woman.

"The commission will emphasize that the man who tolls should have a compelling voice in determining the conditions under which he works.

"In recommending this, however, I wish to emphasize that all that government can do is to unshackle industry. The destiny of labor, the complete solution of the question of industrial democracy depends upon the labor movement, upon yourselves."

Mr. Walsh ended his address under an outburst of applause that continued for several minutes.

Mr. Walsh was followed in his support of the principle of collective bargaining by the Rev. Samuel Eason Batten, fraternal delegate of the Council of the Federated Churches in America, representing 31 denominations.

tion is John W. Brown, of Denver, Col., organizer of the United Mine Workers. Brown was the leader of the miners during the now celebrated West Virginia strike.

Paul Voegel, of this city, business agent of the Brewery Workers, and Peter Schaffer, of this city, business agent of the Beer Drivers, are also well known to the delegates. One is never seen without the other.

Among the distinguished delegates may be mentioned Homer D. Call, treasurer of New York State. He comes from Syracuse and officially represents the Butchers' Union, of which he is secretary-treasurer.

The Union Label exhibit is daily attracting more attention. One of the exhibitors of clothing is doing a land office business among the delegates. He advertises that he will make a suit to order and deliver it within 48 hours.

John P. Hart, of Utica, N. Y., organizer of the Butchers' Union, is very much in evidence at the sessions. He and Homer D. Call, of Syracuse, are "doing the convention" together.

League and Trades Union Auxiliary, told of the work being done by organized women throughout the country for the use of the union label.

It has been announced that the radical and progressive opposition in the convention of the American Federation of Labor will put up a candidate against Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor.

Deloate representing the opposition, who refused to have their names quoted, said this morning that this convention would see the greatest exhibition of revolt against the reactionary policy of Samuel Gompers that the American Federation of Labor has ever seen during the entire time that Gompers has occupied the presidency of the Federation.

Colorado Situation Considered. The following resolution on the Colorado strike situation was introduced today by the Mining Department of the American Federation of Labor:

BARONESS, WAR WIDOW, BACK HOME IN AMERICA

Baron von Romberg Killed in Fight at Belfort.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Back in her merchantman colors, the Red Star Line steamship Lapland, which has been engaged as a Government transport in the transportation of Canadian troops to Europe, arrived here Tuesday with 519 passengers, among them being the Baroness von Romberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Converse, of Greenwich, Conn.; Mrs. Stewart L. Woodford, widow of General Woodford, once American Minister to Spain; Admiral W. T. Swinburne, U. S. N. (retired); Cyril Maude, actor, and Captain F. H. Dalton, J. J. Dowd, James L. Wilmett, John Walcott and R. A. Shepard, Government officials, who have been superintending the distribution of the American relief funds sent to the war zone.

Baroness von Romberg is the widow of Captain von Romberg, of the German army, who was killed a few weeks ago in the fighting before Belfort, France. She was in deep mourning yesterday and declined to be interviewed, but friends said that she had returned to America to stay until the end of the war.

Admiral Swinburne was accompanied by Mrs. Swinburne, and they will also remain on American soil until things take a more peaceful turn in Europe. The Swinburnes have been living in southern France for the last five years.

Mr. Maude has come to America for a return engagement in "Gipsy," which made such a big hit on Broadway last winter.

Among the other passengers were Mr. and Mrs. En-Yeh-sheng, relatives of the Chinese Minister of Foreign Affairs; Mr. and Mrs. Poeker, R. Dix, Fred Rasper, Rowland Buckstone and Miss Nora Kenney.
