

TWO BUILDINGS FOR DEFECTIVES ARE COMPLETED

Director Harte Announces That Quarters at Byberry Are Ready for Women Inmates of Blockley.

Director Harte, of the Department of Health and Charities, announced today that two of the new buildings for female defectives at Byberry have been completed by the contractors and are ready to be turned over to the city.

The completed structures are the laundry building, and the combined kitchen and dining room building, in which will be fed the 100 female defectives, who will ultimately be transferred from congested Blockley to the city's farm in the northeast section.

Three dormitory buildings, that will accommodate 300 feeble-minded women, in the city's care, are now being constructed at Byberry and will be completed within the next six weeks.

Director Harte said today that he hoped to transfer the women from Blockley's crowded wards to the new home for feeble-minded women within the next few months. He is confident, however, with the necessity of providing a power house for heat and light at the institution before the transfer can be made. He has already chosen a site for the power plant and work on it will be started immediately.

The new laundry and dining room buildings at Byberry are of brick and Indiana limestone and were constructed by Rax and Abbott, contractors. The construction of the three dormitory buildings has been delayed because of the abrogation of the contract by the original contractor and the necessity of the bonding company's completing the work.

Five hundred male defectives are now housed in cottages at Byberry and all the women defectives in the city's care are kept in the ward of Blockley.

The transfer of 500 women to Byberry within the next few months will add to the relief afforded at Blockley. Director Harte will urge construction of additional buildings at Byberry to house at least 500 more women defectives.

Director Harte, of the Department of Public Works, has advised Director Harte that the expenditure of the $10,000 provided for improvement of Blockley in the loan contract is being through the Public Works Department to the elimination of Philip J. Johnson, "architect in perpetuity" for the Department of Health and Charities.

Council will render impossible any such arrangement by directly appropriating the loan item to the Health Department for the benefit of Architect Johnson. The influence of Charles Seger, Organization Councilman on the Finance Committee, will be swung in favor of Johnson, and the possibility of the work being done under the Public Works Department will be eliminated.

Director Harte is eager to have the work on Blockley proceed without delay and on that account will not oppose Johnson's claim on the architectural part of the contract.

MOSLEMS TURN DEAF EAR TO APPEAL FOR HOLY WAR

American Bishop Finds Loyalty Among Aliens' Subjects.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Rev. Dr. W. F. Anderson, of Cincinnati, Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has arrived in London after a visit to Methodist missionary centers in North Africa. In conversation with a Daily Telegraph representative he said he was much impressed by the loyalty of the Moslems in Algeria and Tripoli to France and with their understanding of the real matters at issue in the war.

He said he was especially struck by the fact that these zealous Mohammedans had not been misled by the proclamation of a holy war in Constantinople. They knew quite well that this was due to German, not Moslem, inspiration. "From Marcellus," said Bishop Anderson, "we went to Orlan, from there to Algiers, then to Biskia and Constantine, and finally to Tunis. On the way back we stopped at Port National. We made it our business to call upon officials of our Methodist Church and upon local officials to discuss the situation with special reference to local Moslem opinion. From all sides we received evidence of the loyalty of the Moslems to the French Government."

During one of our journeys we fell into the company of a group of leading Arab merchants, who unanimously repudiated the idea of responding to the declaration of a holy war by the Sheikh al Islam. They were all unqualified in their avowal of loyalty to the French Government, which they said, had been their protector, and under which they had prospered. They added that they would be sorry to seem to be at variance with the Sultan of Turkey, but they were sympathetic in their assurances that the Constantinople proclamation would not weaken the allegiance of the North African Moslems to the French Government."

Doctor Anderson thinks the unity of Mohammedanism as a political force "has been broken by the power of efficient government in India, Egypt and Algeria." Nowhere in Africa, he said, "did I find any sign or symptom of sympathy with Germany."

GOEBEN AND BRESLAU RUSE WILL BE EXPLAINED LATER

Churchill Promises Story When It Will Not Injure Empire.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The time has not yet arrived when the facts regarding the escape of the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau can be published without prejudice to the vital interests of the empire, today said Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

"In the first week of the war the Goeben and Breslau were supposed to be bottled up in the Straits of Messina by the British Mediterranean fleet. On August 8 it was announced that they had escaped the vigilance of the British and had made their way into the Dardanelles. This was followed soon by the announcement that the two cruisers had been sent to Turkey, although they were still manned and officered by Germans."

"Charges were made against Admiral Sir Stanley Milne and Rear Admiral E. C. T. Troubridge, first and second in command of the Mediterranean fleet, of negligence and inability in allowing the enemy's ships to escape. Both of them were cleared of these charges in court-martial."

"One version of the escape of the Goeben and Breslau which has reached the United States is that they 'read their bow and stern lights and simply made their way out through the British ships at night.'"

MANY REASONS, SAYS BRYAN, FOR US TO BE THANKFUL

We have such an abundance of reasons for being thankful this season that it is difficult to single out the one for which we should be most thankful.—Secretary Bryan.

WOOD NOW WAR CONTRABAND

Sweden Lodges Protest Against New German Order.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 26.—The German Government has made it known that all wood would be considered contraband of war.

Private advices from Stockholm say that the greatest excitement prevails there as a result of this ruling. A number of ships loaded with timber to a total value of 30,000,000 kroner are lying in Swedish ports ready to put to sea.

The Swedish Foreign Office has lodged a protest with Berlin.

THREE LARGE ESTATES' ACCOUNTS ARE FILED

Alfred Box Left $714,716; Elizabeth Cresswell, $23,533; J. P. Murphy, $223,459.

Accounts of estates that will come before the Orphans' Court for adjudication early next month have been filed with the Register of Wills.

The estate of Alfred Box, a former manufacturer who died March 21, 1910, amounts to $714,716.32 in personal property and $20,000 in realty, according to the account of Florence N. Boswell and William H. Box, the surviving executors. The entire estate has been distributed in accordance with the will except a balance of $1,097.10.

The estate of Elizabeth P. Cresswell, who died in October, 1911, amounts to $23,533.25, according to the account filed by the Philadelphia Safe Deposit and Trust Company. Credit is claimed for disbursements of $26,773.31 in settling the affairs of the estate, with a balance on hand aggregating $308,953.94 for distribution under the terms of the will.

Among investments in this balance are: Two hundred shares of 10th and 15th Streets Passenger Railway Company, appraised at $18,000; 30 shares American Telegraph and Telephone Company, $21,250; 50 shares Citizens' Passenger Railway Company, $13,750; 135 shares Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, trustee certificates, $12,500; 12 shares Pennsylvania Railroad, $200. Bonds and mortgages comprise the greater portion of the remaining investments.

The estate of John P. Murphy is $223,459.37, according to the account filed by the Fidelity Trust Company, the executor. Mr. Murphy died September 15, 1913. A balance of $20,000.23 is also distributed. Included in this balance are 370 shares of Union Transfer Company, $162,250, and 213 shares Norfolk and Western Railway Company, $23,585.

Director Harte, of the Department of Public Works, has advised Director Harte that the expenditure of the $10,000 provided for improvement of Blockley in the loan contract is being through the Public Works Department to the elimination of Philip J. Johnson, "architect in perpetuity" for the Department of Health and Charities.

BRYAN GOING TO ROME?

Rumor of Official Visit to Italian Capital.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—It is rumored in Rome that William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State for the United States, will arrive there soon on an official mission.

Director Harte is eager to have the work on Blockley proceed without delay and on that account will not oppose Johnson's claim on the architectural part of the contract.

CYMRIC REPORTED CAPTURED

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—It was rumored in shipping circles today that the White Star steamship Cymric, which was converted into a supply ship for the British Government, had been captured in the North Sea.

PORT OF PHILADELPHIA

Sun and Tides
Sun rises... 6:57 a.m. Sun sets... 4:37 p.m.
High water... 8:55 a.m. High water... 9:17 p.m.
Low water... 2:55 a.m. Low water... 3:51 p.m.

High water... 5:47 a.m. High water... 6:09 p.m.
Low water... 1:47 a.m. Low water... 2:29 p.m.
High water... 3:23 a.m. High water... 3:41 p.m.
Low water... 9:23 a.m. Low water... 9:41 p.m.

Vessels Arriving Today
Sir. Bjornfjord (Nor.), Lahon, ore, Flint, Goring & Co.
Sir. Paratasy, Sabine, crude oil, Sun Company.
San Ricardo (Br.), Galveston, ballast, Joseph C. Gabriel.
Sir. Royal Sceptre (Br.), New York, ballast, H. Hubert, Bond.

Vessels Sailing Today
Sir. Theophile Dutch, Bakker, Rotterdam, Holland-America Line.
Sir. Monastelle (Br.), Dover, New York, L. Westergaard & Co.
Sir. America (Br.), Thoms, Newport News, Havana and Galveston, Sweden-Norway Line.
Sir. Hargrave (Br.), Dismantling, New York, Sweden-Norway Line.
Sir. Edgar Vance, Ludlow, San Pedro and San Francisco, Arrow Line.
Sir. Neches, Young, New York, W. F. Hagar.
Sir. Columbian, Blackwell, New York, W. F. Hagar & Co.
Sir. Indian, Howe, Savannah and Jacksonville, Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company.
Sir. Lexington, Nickerson, Boston, Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company.
Sir. Carolyn, Calhoun, Savannah, H. P. Dimes & Co.
Sir. Henry J. Smith, Gannett, Boston, A. D. Cummins & Co.

Steamships Arriving Today
Name From Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

Steamships Leaving Today
Name To Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

Steamships Arriving Today
Name From Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

Steamships Leaving Today
Name To Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

Steamships Arriving Today
Name From Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

Steamships Leaving Today
Name To Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

Steamships Arriving Today
Name From Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

Steamships Leaving Today
Name To Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

Steamships Arriving Today
Name From Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

Steamships Leaving Today
Name To Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

Steamships Arriving Today
Name From Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

Steamships Leaving Today
Name To Date
Mogulian... Liverpool... Nov. 27
Ancona... Naples... Nov. 20

RICHARD CROKER AND HIS BRIDE

This picture of Miss Beulah Benton Edmondson was taken in a sufrage parade in New York, where she rode a horse, dressed as one of her Cherokee ancestresses.

CROKER SECRETLY TAKES CHEROKEE MAID FOR BRIDE

Ex-Tammany Chief, 73, Weds Indian Princess 23, Tekaw, 23, a Convert and Modern Pocahontas.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Richard Croker, former "Tammany boss" of New York City, and Miss Beulah Benton Edmondson, a singer, sufrageist and descendant of the Cherokee Indian Chief Blue Jacket, were secretly married this morning.

It had been planned to have the ceremony performed in St. Agnes Roman Catholic Church, but the presence of a large crowd of sightseers there at the hour set for the wedding caused a change.

The wedding took place at the home of Nathan Strauss, 27 West 73rd street. Only a few intimate friends of the couple were present at the ceremony. Monsignor H. A. Brann, rector of St. Agnes Church, officiated.

The new Mrs. Croker consented to talk to newspaper men for a few minutes soon after the ceremony.

"I have been inspired by the example of Pocahontas, the Indian maiden who did so much to make the English understand our people," she said. "I also have been inspired by the example of Tallahatchie, the Cherokee National Seminary for girls at Tahlequah, where the Cherokees for nearly a century have educated their girls. When she had finished this school it was arranged she should continue her studies. The school selected was Curry School of Expression, Copley square, Boston."

After finishing at the Copley school Miss Edmondson went to Chicago, where she took additional work in expression in the Chicago University. She returned to Muskegon, where for a short time she taught dramatic expression in the schools. Later she went to New York, where her knowledge of Indians, her culture and her beauty attracted attention.

A few days ago Mr. Hastings was at his home in Tahlequah recuperating from a vigorous campaign preceding his election to Congress when his stenographer handed him a registered letter from New York. The letter was from Miss Edmondson. It told him she was to be married on Thanksgiving Day to Mr. Croker and it was her wish that Mr. Hastings should come to New York and as godfather give her away at the wedding. He laid the letter down, then picked it up and read it through from beginning to end again without a word. He wired: "I'll be there."

On the day of the marriage license Mr. Croker gave his age as 73, whereas it had been supposed that he was only 71. His bride is 23.

Richard Croker, a former "Tammany boss" of New York City, and Miss Beulah Benton Edmondson, a singer, sufrageist and descendant of the Cherokee Indian Chief Blue Jacket, were secretly married this morning.

It had been planned to have the ceremony performed in St. Agnes Roman Catholic Church, but the presence of a large crowd of sightseers there at the hour set for the wedding caused a change.

The wedding took place at the home of Nathan Strauss, 27 West 73rd street. Only a few intimate friends of the couple were present at the ceremony. Monsignor H. A. Brann, rector of St. Agnes Church, officiated.

The new Mrs. Croker consented to talk to newspaper men for a few minutes soon after the ceremony.

"I have been inspired by the example of Pocahontas, the Indian maiden who did so much to make the English understand our people," she said. "I also have been inspired by the example of Tallahatchie, the Cherokee National Seminary for girls at Tahlequah, where the Cherokees for nearly a century have educated their girls. When she had finished this school it was arranged she should continue her studies. The school selected was Curry School of Expression, Copley square, Boston."

After finishing at the Copley school Miss Edmondson went to Chicago, where she took additional work in expression in the Chicago University. She returned to Muskegon, where for a short time she taught dramatic expression in the schools. Later she went to New York, where her knowledge of Indians, her culture and her beauty attracted attention.

A few days ago Mr. Hastings was at his home in Tahlequah recuperating from a vigorous campaign preceding his election to Congress when his stenographer handed him a registered letter from New York. The letter was from Miss Edmondson. It told him she was to be married on Thanksgiving Day to Mr. Croker and it was her wish that Mr. Hastings should come to New York and as godfather give her away at the wedding. He laid the letter down, then picked it up and read it through from beginning to end again without a word. He wired: "I'll be there."

On the day of the marriage license Mr. Croker gave his age as 73, whereas it had been supposed that he was only 71. His bride is 23.

Richard Croker, a former "Tammany boss" of New York City, and Miss Beulah Benton Edmondson, a singer, sufrageist and descendant of the Cherokee Indian Chief Blue Jacket, were secretly married this morning.

It had been planned to have the ceremony performed in St. Agnes Roman Catholic Church, but the presence of a large crowd of sightseers there at the hour set for the wedding caused a change.

The wedding took place at the home of Nathan Strauss, 27 West 73rd street. Only a few intimate friends of the couple were present at the ceremony. Monsignor H. A. Brann, rector of St. Agnes Church, officiated.

The new Mrs. Croker consented to talk to newspaper men for a few minutes soon after the ceremony.

"I have been inspired by the example of Pocahontas, the Indian maiden who did so much to make the English understand our people," she said. "I also have been inspired by the example of Tallahatchie, the Cherokee National Seminary for girls at Tahlequah, where the Cherokees for nearly a century have educated their girls. When she had finished this school it was arranged she should continue her studies. The school selected was Curry School of Expression, Copley square, Boston."

After finishing at the Copley school Miss Edmondson went to Chicago, where she took additional work in expression in the Chicago University. She returned to Muskegon, where for a short time she taught dramatic expression in the schools. Later she went to New York, where her knowledge of Indians, her culture and her beauty attracted attention.

A few days ago Mr. Hastings was at his home in Tahlequah recuperating from a vigorous campaign preceding his election to Congress when his stenographer handed him a registered letter from New York. The letter was from Miss Edmondson. It told him she was to be married on Thanksgiving Day to Mr. Croker and it was her wish that Mr. Hastings should come to New York and as godfather give her away at the wedding. He laid the letter down, then picked it up and read it through from beginning to end again without a word. He wired: "I'll be there."

On the day of the marriage license Mr. Croker gave his age as 73, whereas it had been supposed that he was only 71. His bride is 23.

HENRY ERDIN JAILED FOR ATTACKING AGED FATHER IN FRENZY

Ex-Councilman Sentenced to Thirty Days in Norristown Prison, Pending Investigation of His Sanity.

Henry Erdin, of Cheltenham, a former Philadelphia Councilman, is in the Norristown jail charged with a frenzied attack on his aged father. He was committed for 30 days for a further hearing by Magistrate Conly yesterday and an order was made that his sanity be tested.

Erdin's father, who is Adolph Erdin, 73 years old, of Lawrence, testified his son repeatedly threatened to kill him unless he paid over money. He showed the magistrate bruises which he said were inflicted by his son.

The elder Erdin, who is a wealthy retired manufacturer, said that his son had held a loaded revolver to his head several times in demanding money, and that he once shot at him. Several weeks ago, he said, he had given his son $500 to go to San Francisco and that the latter had spent it in Washington.

When the magistrate ordered Erdin sent to jail the father broke down and pleaded for his son to be given another chance, but the magistrate refused.

PRINCESS KITAW SOUGHT WHITE MAN'S KNOWLEDGE

Bride of Richard Croker Had Lofly Ambition Since Childhood.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Nov. 26.—The marriage of Beulah Benton Edmondson to Richard W. Croker today marked one of the most romantic chapters in the long history of the Cherokees as a race. Edmondson, who as president of the Cherokee National Seminary, gave expression to the lofty ideals that have characterized her race, and her marriage today will give her ample means to gratify that ambition.

In the remote hills of Delaware County, the marriage of Beulah Benton Edmondson to Richard W. Croker today marked one of the most romantic chapters in the long history of the Cherokees as a race.

Edmondson, who as president of the Cherokee National Seminary, gave expression to the lofty ideals that have characterized her race, and her marriage today will give her ample means to gratify that ambition.

SUFFRAGE BOARD CHANGES

New Members to Aid in Congressional Campaign.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—A thorough reorganization of the Congressional committee of the National Woman Suffrage Association, of which Mrs. Anna M. M. McKim, of Chicago, is chairman, has been effected.

The following members have been reappointed: Mrs. Antoinette Funk and Mrs. Sherman Booth, of Illinois, and Mrs. Helen Gardner, of Washington. The new members are Miss Jeanette Rankin, of Montana, who as president of the Montana State Suffrage Association organized the successful campaign in her State; Miss Ethel M. Smith, who has resigned as editor for the Bureau of Fisheries to act as executive secretary of the Congressional committee; Mrs. Raymond M. Morgan, who will have charge of publicity, and Mrs. Glenna Smith Tinnin.

Mrs. Funk and Miss Rankin will devote their attention to lobbying in behalf of the suffrage measures pending before Congress and will be assisted by Mrs. Booth and Mrs. Tinnin.

WOMEN'S WORK FOR PEACE

Meeting to Demand That They Help Make Treaties.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The movement to obtain for the people of Europe a voice in determining the ultimate terms of peace will take form at a mass-meeting to be held in this city in January.

The movement was started here and in Boston, New York and Chicago by Mrs. Foback Lawrence, of England. At a meeting yesterday a permanent organization was effected by the election of Mrs. Christian Hennick, president; Mrs. Hinton Jackson, treasurer; and Mrs. Nina Alexander, secretary.

Among the objects of the movement are to give the women of the warring countries, as well as the men, a voice in the settlement of peace terms; to see that all treaties are submitted to the judgment of the people; the creation of constitutional machinery by which the people may exercise some control of foreign policies; and to see that the termination of the war shall be followed by the establishment of peace upon such terms that it may not be again broken without the consent of the people of the contending nations.

How an old peasant destroyed an Ulian patrol, at the risk of his own life, has just been told in Paris. The French troops in retreating blew up a bridge over the Oise close to the old man's house, but there being many refugees who were unable to get across, the old man ferried a number of them to the other side. Then a patrol of Ulians rode down to the bank and the officer shouted: "Here, you dirty old Frenchman, you can ferry us across; we are going to find out which way your runaway army has gone."

The old man without saying a word, pulled his fatbed to the bank, and allowed the Ulians to board with their horses, then with the boat laden down to the water's edge, he pushed off into the stream. Half way across the Oise there was a dangerous eddy, and he guided the boat straight into the current.

How an old peasant destroyed an Ulian patrol, at the risk of his own life, has just been told in Paris. The French troops in retreating blew up a bridge over the Oise close to the old man's house, but there being many refugees who were unable to get across, the old man ferried a number of them to the other side. Then a patrol of Ulians rode down to the bank and the officer shouted: "Here, you dirty old Frenchman, you can ferry us across; we are going to find out which way your runaway army has gone."

The old man without saying a word, pulled his fatbed to the bank, and allowed the Ulians to board with their horses, then with the boat laden down to the water's edge, he pushed off into the stream. Half way across the Oise there was a dangerous eddy, and he guided the boat straight into the current.

How an old peasant destroyed an Ulian patrol, at the risk of his own life, has just been told in Paris. The French troops in retreating blew up a bridge over the Oise close to the old man's house, but there being many refugees who were unable to get across, the old man ferried a number of them to the other side. Then a patrol of Ulians rode down to the bank and the officer shouted: "Here, you dirty old Frenchman, you can ferry us across; we are going to find out which way your runaway army has gone."

The old man without saying a word, pulled his fatbed to the bank, and allowed the Ulians to board with their horses, then with the boat laden down to the water's edge, he pushed off into the stream. Half way across the Oise there was a dangerous eddy, and he guided the boat straight into the current.

How an old peasant destroyed an Ulian patrol, at the risk of his own life, has just been told in Paris. The French troops in retreating blew up a bridge over the Oise close to the old man's house, but there being many refugees who were unable to get across, the old man ferried a number of them to the other side. Then a patrol of Ulians rode down to the bank and the officer shouted: "Here, you dirty old Frenchman, you can ferry us across; we are going to find out which way your runaway army has gone."

The old man without saying a word, pulled his fatbed to the bank, and allowed the Ulians to board with their horses, then with the boat laden down to the water's edge, he pushed off into the stream. Half way across the Oise there was a dangerous eddy, and he guided the boat straight into the current.

How an old peasant destroyed an Ulian patrol, at the risk of his own life, has just been told in Paris. The French troops in retreating blew up a bridge over the Oise close to the old man's house, but there being many refugees who were unable to get across, the old man ferried a number of them to the other side. Then a patrol of Ulians rode down to the bank and the officer shouted: "Here, you dirty old Frenchman, you can ferry us across; we are going to find out which way your runaway army has gone."

The old man without saying a word, pulled his fatbed to the bank, and allowed the Ulians to board with their horses, then with the boat laden down to the water's edge, he pushed off into the stream. Half way across the Oise there was a dangerous eddy, and he guided the boat straight into the current.

How an old peasant destroyed an Ulian patrol, at the risk of his own life, has just been told in Paris. The French troops in retreating blew up a bridge over the Oise close to the old man's house, but there being many refugees who were unable to get across, the old man ferried a number of them to the other side. Then a patrol of Ulians rode down to the bank and the officer shouted: "Here, you dirty old Frenchman, you can ferry us across; we are going to find out which way your runaway army has gone."

The old man without saying a word, pulled his fatbed to the bank, and allowed the Ulians to board with their horses, then with the boat laden down to the water's edge, he pushed off into the stream. Half way across the Oise there was a dangerous eddy, and he guided the boat straight into the current.

How an old peasant destroyed an Ulian patrol, at the risk of his own life, has just been told in Paris. The French troops in retreating blew up a bridge over the Oise close to the old man's house, but there being many refugees who were unable to get across, the old man ferried a number of them to the other side. Then a patrol of Ulians rode down to the bank and the officer shouted: "Here, you dirty old Frenchman, you can ferry us across; we are going to find out which way your runaway army has gone."

The old man without saying a word, pulled his fatbed to the bank, and allowed the Ulians to board with their horses, then with the boat laden down to the water's edge, he pushed off into the stream. Half way across the Oise there was a dangerous eddy, and he guided the boat straight into the current.

How an old peasant destroyed an Ulian patrol, at the risk of his own life, has just been told in Paris. The French troops in retreating blew up a bridge over the Oise close to the old man's house, but there being many refugees who were unable to get across, the old man ferried a number of them to the other side. Then a patrol of Ulians rode down to the bank and the officer shouted: "Here, you dirty old Frenchman, you can ferry us across; we are going to find out which way your runaway army has gone."

BRITISH WAR LOAN IS LIKELY TO DRAIN U. S. MONEY CENTRE

Liquidation of American Securities Logical Result of Necessity for Huge Payments.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Wall street is taking too little interest in the ultimate effect on the money markets of the world of the subscription to the new English war loan of $1,750,000,000. When the terms of subscription were first announced houses here with London connections received cables from their correspondents reading: "Loan open; pleased to subscribe."

It cannot be learned that these cables had any actual results. Most of those who received them gave the cables little more than a casual glance and threw the messages to one side.

That Wall street did not subscribe to any material amount of the loan does not enter into the question. Undoubtedly many of the subscribers are heavy holders of American securities, and as the instalments to the subscriptions become due it is found that American securities will be sacrificed in order to provide funds for these payments. This will add another item to the large number of cash contributions from this side and will present new problems for our financiers to solve.

These payments are to be made every 60 days until the end of April. The initial payments may be made without resorting to the sale of other securities in hand, but with incomes of investors in other lines reduced, and further payment will meet there is certain to arise the necessity for replenishment of cash resources, and this can only be done through the liquidation of holdings of American issues.