PORK PRODUCTS AND SMOKED MEATS DAY AT BIG FOOD SHOW

Second Delegation of Washingtonians View Exhibit at Reading Terminal Mar-

A second out-of-town delegation of market experts arrived in this city today to visit the Food Exposition now in prog rese in the Reading Terminal Market. They represent the Hay and Centre Markets of Washington, D. C., and are unanimous in declaring that they have come to learn as well as to admire.

Today will be marked as "Pork Products and Smoked Meats Day." Although these products are being featured, the other exhibits, such as fruit, vegetable, fish and meat displays, continue to attract much attention.

The visiting experts were introduced to A. Darlington Strode, a "pork specialist". of the Terminal Market, who outlined for them some of the features of the business and the great extent of territory to which the produce of the Philadelphia market is sent.

PHILADELPHIA IN LEAD.

"We not only ship sausage, scrapple and other pork products to Pittsburgh and Harrisburg," said Mr. Strode, "but as far West as Chicago and Detroit. This market has a splendid reputation. The demand from these distant cities is not occasional. It is steady and is con-stantly increasing. If we are to judge from letters received from some of the distant dealers. After a morning spent in examining the displays, the Washington market men were taken to the Terminal market restaurant and given an opportunity to eat some of the foods which they had been examining. This, they declared, was an unusual and an excellent feature of the Philadelphia market, as it afforded customers an concrunity to see how the tomers an opportunity to see how the goods they bought should be prepared.

This is offset by a decline in the price of turkey, which is now quoted at prices ranging from 25 to 20 cants a pound for first-class "nearbys." The poultry dealers say that the holding over of many birds intended to be killed for the Thanksgiving market and the fact that cold weather has arrived to stay that cold weather has arrived to stay will keep the prices of this fowl at the present quotation and may even drop the price of choice birds as low as 25 to 28 cents a pound.

FINE FRUIT CROP REPORTED. Although prices in the fruit market are steady, an excellent crop of oranges grapefruit and pineapples is reported, and graperruit and pineapples is reported, and it is expected that within a month there will be a decline in prices rather than the usual rise. York Streets Shows Increased Real Estate Activities and Higher Values.

An active situation is rapidly developng in the realty field on Germantown avenue, between Norris street and York street, which, prior to 1910, went through period of duliness.

A Fine New Lot of Easy Chairs One-Third Below Their Actual Value

These have come from the same maker from whom we secured the specially priced box couches that have sold so well. The reason for the low prices is the same in both cases. The maker used up his overplus of tapestries in covering these pieces. The chairs are of two kinds-big, deep-seated fireside types and English-style lounging chairs. Many have loose cushion seats. What is the use of saying a whole lot about the gift qualities of these things when everybody who knows anything knows that for a wife, a mother, a father or an invalid there is no gift that can compare with them?
