SOUTH STREET HAS STRIKING CONDITION IN ITS REAL ESTATE

Every Foot of Space Being Utilized on This "Foreign Boulevard"-Values Are Bounding.

Striking real estate conditions, the like of which are not likely to be found elsewhere in the city, prevail on South street . and other thoroughfares running into it. between Front and 4th streets.

Below South street, on 4th, extending all the way to Moyamensing avenue, which meets 2d street at Christian, is the "curbstone market." Here are lined up, mostly on the west side of the street, farmers from New Jersey, who offer their produce for sale. Formerly they were to be found on 2d street, where they still can be seen near South; but now they have gone further to the west, where the frade comes from the rapidly extending area of customers. South street is the "foreign bouleward," and at 2d and Bouth streets, where the thoroughfare narrows again, after widening to take in the market sheds south of Pine street, the centre of activity is located.

Below this point was the old district of Southwark.

June 6 of the same year, northeast corner of 3d and South streets, consisting of Nos. 249-51 South street and 257 South 3d street, entire lot 42x49.4, was sold by Christ Church to Louis Dilke for $30,500, or $725 a front foot. same kind of property now. The rush of business has a great deal to do with advancing values at this point. The native population, unaccustomed to the "store-and-dwelling" proposition to the fullest meaning, moved, many going to West Philadelphia. The foreign element soon took possession, and, needless to say, utilized every foot of space.

Only in the very difficult finale did the apirit fall off. The technical hardship of entrying an almost unbroken, unmelodic accompaniment, to melodies which felter almost before they are heard, was a bit too much for the orobestra. Leonard Borwick took his seat at the plane, and in the long orchestral move-ment which preluded his first notes sut attentive, following its rhythms, even essaying inaudible notes upon his instru-ment. When he began to play he made his work, for a time, the expression merely ment. When he began to play he made his work, for a time, the expression merely of an orchestral unit. It was in his pa-denma that the power and beauty of his musical diction began to be feit. The tone he drew from the plano was mire fluid than clear; the runs and trills, the sharp arpeggios, still had something of a tender and supple tone. In no place were the outlines sharp, even when playing tender and supple tone. In no piace were the outlines sharp: even when pinying contrapuntally against the strings or woodwind, the melody was kept, where only the atrength of the chords seemed to be demanded. It was this feeling for the sinuous lines of his melody that made the largo so complete a triumph. Mr. Borwick's playing was quiet; it was poetic and elequent. And toward the close of the movement it had a high and breath-less beauty. He persuaded his hearers, tess beauty. He permunded his hearers, in that time that nothing beyond that beauty existed, and it was enough. The finale, excellently played, fell from this high estaic. But it brought a feeling of satisfaction with II. Mr. Borwick had the ungracious task of convincing these who heard him that the plane is justified as an instrument with an orchestra. It is not easy, because the instruments which not easy, because the instruments which can be heard alone with the orchestra are chieffy those which the orchestra employs. The plane and the volce (except in choral) are interlopers. Mr. Borwick made the intrusion wonderful. He cannot win himself great repute by such work; but the critical judgment which has honored him since be came to this country must continue to praise him with his name is continue to praise bim until his name is established beyond the power of advertis-ing to do or undo.

DELIGHT OF DANCE NOT CONFINED TO FASHION'S REALM

Recreation Centres Scenes of Joy for Thousands Who Give Less Thought to Clothes Than to Art.

A lame duck or a canter for Christmas sounds ridiculous, of course, any way you take it, even when modern dances are considered. The fact is that the mention of a tango, a lulu fado, the fox trot, and other steps bring to mind visions of sweet debutantes, bare shoulders, flashing gowns and jewels of society matrons, and men in evening attire. But the fact remains that many of the most enthusiastic dancers in the city don't own a dress suit, never have owned one, and many no doubt, never will.

The recreation centres where the city conducts free dancing classes are crowded to overflowing by thousands of ardent dancers, both old and young, all enthusiastic to learn the latest steps of the latest dances. Some are rough, some are uncenth pro-
