CHRISTMAS FAKERS MAKE EASY MONEY FROM THE UNWARY

Worthless Goods Exposed for Sale on Curb at Prices That Beguile the Credulous Shopper.

The Christman faker is here-so healinte before buying the big bargains from mirhatone merchants.

These venders, who are only seen around the nothings, come from parts unknown. They are glib of tongue and their goods look substantial while they are on the Mands or wagens. They move from place to place because it is extremely necessary. The fellow who sells at 9th and Filbert streets one day may be found near 6th and Market streets the mext. Later he will be found in Kensington or West Philadelphia. Sometimes he is found in fall.

As to their wares-they include a line of goods which make a flash without exposing quality. This is not true of all the Christmas venders, but, nevertheless, the faker is as plentiful as the one who sells on the level.

The most glaring of Christmas fakes is the holiday cologne sold by these open-the holiday cologne sold by these openals merchants. It is said to be made of water, a little lemon juice and a tint of washing blue. The lemon juice gives the liquid a yellowish tinge and the washing blue is used for bottles alleged to hold a special brand,

The concection is mixed by the tubful and put up in bottles of all shapes obtained from junk dealers. Usually the labels, which are very fancy, are got from a printer who does work for the drug trade. After the liquid is bottled from a printer who does work for the drug trade. After the liquid is bottled and corked, the top of the bottle is cov-ered with a neat piece of chamols and fastened with a fancy string or ribbon.

SPRAYING ADROITLY DONE. When the bottles bearing the fancy labers are spread out in a vender's wagon with a background of straw or sawdust they look attractive, and the finishing touch is added when the faker sprays the tops of the bottles with real cologne. The spraying is done quickly with an atomizer when no one is passing, and the scent which greets passersby causes many to stop and buy a bottle for 10 or

The vender announces that they are "alesman's samples" as an excuse for the low prices. Fortunately for him many of the bottles are not opened until after Christmas. And the poor fellow who gives one as a Christmas gift never knows why the recipient greets him cold-by when they meet again.

One of these cologne merchants did a land office business yesterday near 9th and Market streets and later on Market

"FIRE SALE" FAKERS.

The fire sale curbstone faker is an other who gets easy Christmas money. One of these merchants operated yesterday on 9th street near Arch and also on Market and 7th streets. He had cameras which were bought up cheaply from a manufacturer "whose place was recently burned out at Metuchen, N. J." These according to the faker, "would make an its investigation of conditions affecting attractive Christmas present for the national defense.

Photographs supposed to have been taken by some of the cameras were nailed against the vender's wagon. Some of the photos were at least seven by ten inches-although the cameras on sale were 2% by 3%. The vender had a number of "plants" in the crowd who always started business when there was a tendency among the onlockers to be dublous. "Heavily plated table ware bought in

"Heavily plated table ware bought in the filarge lots from a firm which recently failed," was sold by an open-air peddler for 15 cents a set. The set consisted of a knife, fork and spoon for a child. The vender operated near his brother merchants and frequently shifted his stand. His argument sounded all right. But as the same table sets are aid by one of the bomba. 10-cent stores for 10 cents, those took advantage of the exceptional effer lost money.

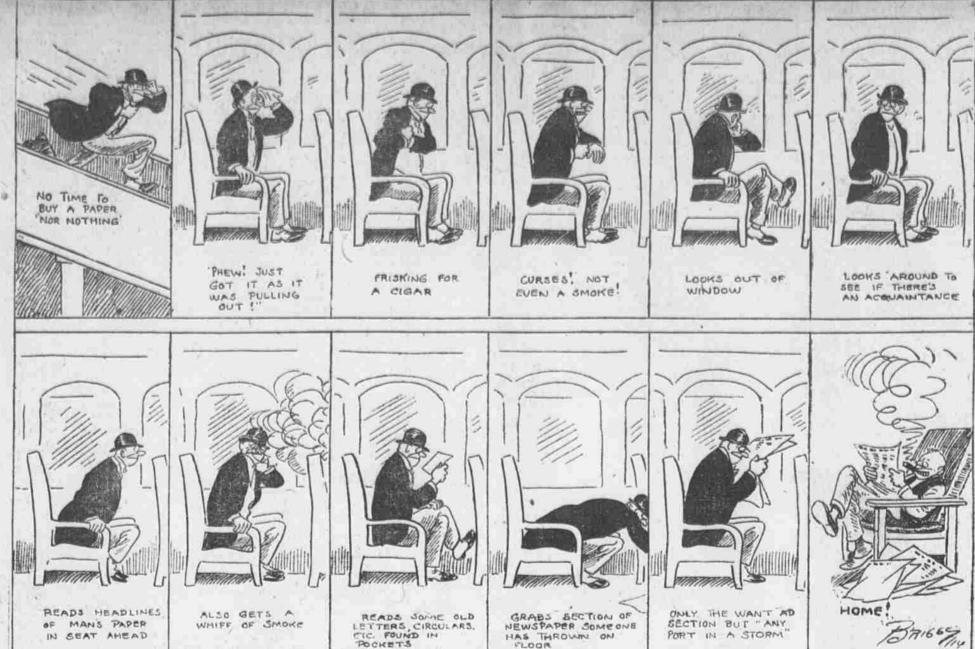

FRAUDULENT SOLICITORS. In addition to the faking venders, there are a number of other Christmas fakers these vessels. sperating successfully, One of these, a well-dresed negro, is soliciting financial atd in West Philadelphia for the Southwark Colored Orhpans' Home at 9th and Bainbridge streets. As there is no such boine, those who contributed will enable the collector to have a very Merry Christmas unless his scheme is stopped.

Two men who are soliciting clothing and provisions for the "Pennsylvania Vol-unteers" are slee doing a thriving busianteers" are slee doing a thriving business in the outlying sections of the city, especially in West Philadelphia. They tell householders that they will not accept money, but in most cases get cast-off slothing which can be sold for fairly goed prices. Their business must be good, for they have a wagon to carry away donations. There is no such organization in the city's list of charities as the necessariants of the contraction of the city's list of charities as the necessariants. Pennsylvania Volunteers. And it is safe to say that the membership consists solely of the two persevering solicitors.
