CARUSO AND AMATO TRIUMPH IN "AIDA" AT METROPOLITAN

Greatest Success of Present Season Due to Splendid Cast—Mme. Destinn Unable to Appear.

The story of "Alda," last night's opera, is exclusively the story of the cast which presented it, and the story of the cast is almost exclusively the story of the men in it. The singing of Caruso, Amato, Didur and Rossi made the ancient opera rich in color and feeling; it made what promised to be a torturous rigmarole a glorious enjoyment. Mme. Destinn, owing to sudden indispo-sition, was unable to sing Aida and was replaced by Mme. Marie Rappold. She was in tolerable voice, but for two and a half acts sang in a monotonous and a half acts sang in a monotonous and unskilful tone, entirely undramatic, ut terly unevocative, and becoming effective only in the plaintive moments for which her voice seemed to be suited. In the last acts, however, Mme. Rappold's voice took on warmth of tone, displayed at least some appreciation of the dramatic import of the singing, affected its hearers to some degree of feeling and made one wonder why it all had not happened bewonder why it all had not happened be-and supple.

Messrs. Caruso, Amato and Didur were in no wise troubled. From his first words, Mr. Didur's bass was clear and sound, almost noble in its dignity. Less rich, but still attractive, was Mr. Rossi's King. And the two great singers of the evaning. Caruso and Amato, were traven. rial on robbery charges. It was stated that an accident to his head years ago had made him abnormal. The trial was postponed for a week for an examination.

ROTARY CLUB MEMBERS HOSTS AT "LADIES' NIGHT"

Women Guests Find Fun Galore at Annual Entertainment.

Annual Entertainment.

Nothing in the way of entertainment novelties which might have the least feminine appeal was overlooked at the arnual "Ladies" Night" of the Rotary Club of Philadelphia, held last night at Kugler's. The women present were regaled with stylish apring* hats which though made of paper, savored of the Parisian boulevards.

Many of the most prominent representatives of Philadelphia manufacturing sentatives of Philadelphia manufacturing interests were included in the 200 guests who sat down to the banquet table and joined heartily in the songs. Speeches were mostly impromptu and of a humorous character.

The "general music" was furnished by "Honey Songbird" Evans, assisted by the Pfaff & Shaver Orchestra. The other music came with varying degrees of spontaneity from the assemblage. The feature, calculated to be of great-est interest to the women, but which also proved a "hit" with the men, was an exhibition of the newest ideals in furs, displayed on living models.

The guests included E. J. Berlet, International Rotary vice president; Miss Augusta Kohnle, contraito, who contributed to the evening's entertainment, and Dr. John Dennis Majorey, of the West Phil.

John Dennis Mahoney, of the West Phil-adelphia High School for Boys.

Addresses were made by the officers of the club, including Guy Gundaker, president; Frank H. Stewart, first vice president; Charles A. Tyler, secretary and treasurer, and Henry S. Evans, sergeant

The committee which arranged the af-fair consisted of Henry W. Buse, chair-man: J. Harry Bowers, Frank C. Harris, William J. Steen, William A. Stuard, F. Barnitz, George P. Smith and Howard

William Johnson, a Negro, 26 years old. of 1349 Poplar street, was held under $800 bail by Magistrate Boyle at the 39th street and Lancaster avenue station this morning for a further hearing on suspicion of larceny. Benjamin Stoker, a lumber merchant, of 34th and Market streets, testified against the prisoner. According to the latter, Johnson approached him yesterday with the request to cash a check, which, Stoker said, was drawn by himself and which he had malled a day previously to a creditor. Johnson maintained that a man whose name he was unable to give gave him the check. Stoker charged that the check was stolen from the mail. Federal postoffice inspectors are investigating the case.

day season and you will see all the lassies who meet their swains after office hours clinging tenderly to their arms and look-ing adoringly into their eyes. Walk down those same bright thoroughfares a week or 10 days before Christmas and what do you see? The swains are as forgotten as you see? The swains are as torgeten as the roses of yesterday, and the lassless are putting positive cricks into their necks gazing into the shop windows.

After all, what is a mere man, compared to a real lace jabot or the latest creation in blouges?

The queer, improvident ways of the lone man shopper cause many a deprecatory smile to his feminine observers. There was the man the other day who wandered anxiously up and down the aisles, just like the biblical lion, seeking whom he could devour. Each counter he searched anxiously. Finally he arrived at the piace where they sell notions—though he hadn't. where they sell notions—though he hadn't a notion of notions. He stopped suddenly with an Eureka expression on his face and pounced on a little heart-shaped box. "Would you like a box of hair pina?" said the genius of the notions.

And the Santy thus referred to pulled himself together and puffed out his laws and his tummy in an endsavor not to compromise his species, but the little boy wasn't half satisfied with his effort.

The woman who hesitates between giv-ing her husband the chafing dish that she needs herself and the smoking jacket that he really wants, and decides on the latter, usually comes home feeling that she has done a mighty big and noble thing!
