SCENES AND PERSONS MENTIONED IN THE HOME AND FOREIGN NEWS OF CHRISTMAS WEEK

BEAUTIFUL PHILADELPHIAN BRIDE AGAIN
A recent photograph of the former Mrs. Elsie Whelen Goelet, who was married last Saturday to Henry Clews, Jr., son of the New York banker, after obtaining a divorce from Robert Walton Goelet.

EXPRESS COMPANY WORKERS STRUGGLE WITH LAST-FEW-DAYS' CROWD
The parcel post may have made some inroads on the business of the express companies, but the effect is not apparent to the naked eye of the man with a package who has to hang on at the tail-end of the line. This picture was taken in the Adams Express Company's office at 18th and Market streets.

HUSTLING BASKETS FULL OF EXPRESS PACKAGES OFF TO THEIR TRAINS
The great platforms of the Adams Express Company on West Market street are crowded with hurrying clerks and draymen as wagon after wagon brings up its load of holiday parcels. There will be no rest for these men till Christmas day.

KINGS REVIEW TROOPS
George V and King Albert review what is left of the Belgian army at Furnes. To the rear stands the young Prince of Wales in winter uniform.

GERMANY'S GREATEST LIVING DIPLOMAT
Prince Bernhard von Buelow, former Imperial Chancellor, has now been sent to Rome intrusted with the delicate task of keeping Italy from joining forces with the Allies if possible. "My Bernhard," the Kaiser calls him.

OFF TO SHOW THE SOLDIERS OF THE SULTAN HOW TO FIGHT FOR GERMANY
The central figure of the group, wearing a field cap while he holds his plumed helmet in his hand, is General von Sanders, who has been sent to Turkey to boss the warriors there in behalf of his imperial master. He is surrounded by the brilliant staff of officers who accompanies every German high commander when on official business.

CALLS GERMANS "BABY KILLERS"
Winston Churchill, head of the British Admiralty, is shown walking down Whitehall, London, with Mrs. Churchill. He recently celebrated his 40th birthday.

WEARS MANNISH DRESS TO WIN LAW BUSINESS
Miss Lucile Pugh, who practices at the New York bar, is shown with her client, Mrs. Katharine Browne Decker, for whom she recently won a divorce. Mrs. Decker is a former actress.
