Ward. There had been a long period of dulness in the section, except on Lansdowne ness in the section, except on Lansdowne avenue. This was broken largely through the decision of the Feiton Sibley Manufacturing Company to sell the varnish plant on the northeast corner of 54th and Media streets. When it was built it was thought that it was far enough out in the country to be used for all time. The city, however, pletted Media street through the mill, and in March, 1811, proceedings were begun before a road jury to ascertain its value, and severat experts for the owners valued the land at $20,000 per acre.

On October 19, 1812, Calvin W. Rogera purchased the property at the northeast
