

IRONWORKERS AND PHOTOGRAPHERS VIE IN PERFORMING HAIR-RAISING FEATS ATOP NEW SKYSCRAPER

HANGING OVER A PLUNGE OF 200 FEET TO DESTRUCTION BELOW
So close is City Hall that this daring young workman looks as if he might drop on its roof. In the background, to the left, is Broad Street Station.

SITTING ON A BEAM EDGE FOR A BIRDSEYE VIEW OF THE CITY

A LITTLE ACROBATICS TO OBTAIN A BETTER VIEW
The hardy men constructing the new Widener Building, on Chestnut street, near Broad, found they had no monopoly of nerve when the Evening Ledger photographers got busy.

A PUFF OF WIND CATCHING IN HIS OVERCOAT WOULD SEND HIM FLYING BACKWARD THROUGH SPACE

GETTING UP IN FATHER PENN'S RAREFIED COUNTRY
The reversed gentleman resolutely keeps his face in the other direction, as if displeased with such antics.

TAKING A RIDE STRAIGHT UP TO THE TOP FROM THE STREET LEVEL