WINTER ON THE POLISH WAR FRONT
Here a German lancer has found himself forced to cross a snowdrift that comes up to his horse's shoulders. Such conditions are more suited to polar bears than men.

CARRYING AN UNACCUSTOMED LOAD
This might be a picture of British fighting men subduing the German monster of militarism. As a matter of fact, it is a behemoth constructed for the amusement of children at Crystal Palace, London's Willow Grove Park, now a training ground for England's naval recruits.

UNITED STATES MILITARY OBSERVER AT FRONT WITH GERMAN ARMY
Colonel Joseph E. Kuhn, Engineer Corps, is the second figure from the right. Germany and Austria are the only countries at war which have freely permitted observers from this country to follow their movements in the field. Great Britain and France have resolutely refused to allow either army or naval attaches from the United States with their own forces at the front.

KAISER'S GRANDSON AS WARRIOR
This is Prince Alexander Ferdinand, son of the Princess August Louise, in patriotic uniform. He is two years old.

TO WED PHILADELPHIA GIRL
Angier B. Duke, whose engagement to Miss Cordelia Biddle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Bixel Biddle, has been announced, is the figure with the knickerbockers in the center. He is the son of James B. Duke, the tobacco manufacturer.

A PHILADELPHIA WOMAN AT THE WAR FRONT
This photograph has just been received from France, with the announcement that it is a Philadelphia woman married to an English nobleman, who is serving in the Anglo-American Hospital at Wimereux, France.
