DANSANT A SUCCESS

Benefit For Sunnyside Nursery Proved a Brilliant Affair

The benefit given on Saturday afternoon for the Sunnyaide Day Nursery proved quite unique, as it was arranged primarily to attract the younger generation. And this it did, for Horticultural Hall was fairly swarming with flushed and excited kiddies, who followed the hectic adventures of "Alice in Wonderland" and the equally thrilling "Lena and the Geese" with shouts and squeaks of childish joy.

Then came the dancing in the foyer, and this. too, was not confined to the grownups, for numerous tiny tots ventured on to the floor, tripping the light fautastic with all the grace and rhythm of their elders. The competitive dancing was judged by C. Frederick Jordan, Andrew Wheeler, Jr., and C. W. Churchman. Miss Inez Drayton and Robert Carrere were the winners of the fox trot, and Miss Sidney Wilson and Longstreth Brown of the hesitation. Miss Mary Stuart Wurts and Robert Carrere executed a graceful pas de deux.

Professional dancers from New York, Miss Cynthia Perot and Elliott Taylor, gave an exhibition of a graceful and unusual fox trot. Among the young women who acted as aides were Miss Jean N. Thompson, Miss Lois B. Cassatt, Miss Mary Alice Clay, Miss Jean B. P. G. Hancock, Miss Inez Drayton, Miss Margaretta Jeanes, Miss Gainor O. Baird and Miss Margaret Berwind.

MONIGHT there will not be any special dance or affair for the debutantes only, but number of dinners will be given in honor of these much-entertained members of society before the Junior Cotilion, which holds its final meeting tonight in the Rose Gardens.

Miss Jean Christian Bullitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Logan M. Builitt, will be given a dinner at the Believue-Stratford by Mr. and Mrs. Hollinshead N. Taylor, of St. Martins lane, Chestnut Hill. The other guests will include Miss Mary Stuart Wurts, Miss Hope Truxton Beale, Miss Alice Chapman Thompson, Miss Virginia Roberts, Miss Charlotte Rush, John W. Drayton, C. Prevost McMichael, William J. Hopkins, Dr. Arthur H. Hopkins, Daniel L. Hutchinson, Jr.

Miss S. Worthington Mitchell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Kearsley Mitchell, will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given by Dr. and Mrs. Henry Middleton Fisher, of 1829 Clinton street. Another guest will be Miss Caroline Sinkler, of South Carolina.

Miss Elizabeth Roberts Reath, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore W. Reath, of Lis ! street, will be guest of honor of Dr. and Mrs. William Taylor, of 1825 Pine street, before the Cotillon. Among the guests will be Mrs. Marion Taylor, Miss Susan Brimger Ingersell, Charles J. Biddle, Clement N. Taylor and George R. Foulke.

Miss Cordelia Biddle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, whose engagement to Angier Duke, was recently announced, will be guest of honor of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Chariton Henry, of Chestnut Hill, at a theatre party before the Collies.

ABOUT TWO NEW PLAYS It is almost as easy to read a play as to see one. In fact, some prefer reading, because they don't have to go out of the house, and can be sure of a comfortable chair. The sentences and paragraphs are short. The reader is automatically guarded against nature descriptions and mood analyses. And it is usually the playwright's ambition to make

Shaw, with characteristic perversity, contrives, as usual, to defeat convention by writing prose introductions longer, and sometimes cleverer, than the play itself. But these the reader averse to solid blocks of print may skip. Two of the recent magazines print plays, one of them a Shaw play

Marion Craig Wentworth has written a tragic one-act play, "War Brides," Its grim sincerity should give pause to the war apologists. The text of the play is a press clip-

Scene: A room in a peasant's cottage in war-ridden country. Amelia, a girl of 18, telling her old mother that she wants to follow her four brothers to the from as a Red Cross nurse. The mother begs her to stay at home and help care for Hedwig, who married the oldest brother just before he left for the front, and who is to have a child in six months. Herr Hoffman, a young lieutenant, enters, and in a familiar, overbearing manner tries to bully Amelia into marrying him. He is to leave for the front in a day.

They said we'd have a widows' pension fund—us and our children—forever and ever, if the boys didn't come back. So you see, I won't be out anything. Anyway, it's for the country. We'll be famous as war brides. Even the name sounds giorious!

Hedwig enters and shows extreme contempt.

breathe for thinking of my Franz, waiting, never knowing from minute to minute. From the way I feel, I should think my child would be born mad, I'm that wild with worrying. And then for Amelia to go through the agony alone. No husband to help her through the terrible hour. What solace can the state give then? And after that, if you don't come back, who is going to earn the bread for her child? Struggle and struggle to feed herself and her child; and the fine-sounding name you trick us with—war bride! Humph, that will all be forgotten then! Only one thing can make it worth while, and do you know what it is? Love. We'll struggle through fire and water for that—but without it—

Great Catherine

In Bernard Shaw's play, "Great Catherine," he satirizes the famous 18th Century Empress of Russia with his usual pitiless humor. During the play, Catherine, true to her amorous reputation, is infatuated by a young English lieutenant, who has been sent over to report to her the progress of the American

The second act is typical of the humor of the piece:

the piece;

Scene two—The Empress' patit lever. The central doors are closed. On the left, on a dais, a magnificent curtained bed. The court is in attendance, standing in two melancholy rows, down the side of the room opposite the bed, solemn, bored, waiting for the Empress to awaken. The Princess Dashkoff stands a little in front of the courtiers. A loud yawn is heard from behind the curtains. Naryshkin, the chamberlain (holding up a warning hand)—S-sh!

Naryshkin, the chamberlain (holding up a warning hand)—S-sh!

The courtiers hastily cease whispering, dress up their lines and stiffen. A bell tinkles within the curtains. Naryshkin and the Princess solemnly draw them and reveal the Empress. Catherine turns over on her back and stretches.

Empress. Catherine turns over on her back and stretches.

Catherine (yawning) — Heigho-ah-yah-ah-ow. What o'clock is it?

Naryshkin—Half past ten, Little Mother, Catherine (sitting up abrupty)—Potztausend! (contemplating the kneeling courtiers). Oh, get up, get up, (All rise.) Your efiquette bores me. I am hardly awake in the morning before it begins (yawning again and relapsing against her pillows). Why do they do it, Naryshkin? do it. Naryshkin?

do it, Naryshkin?

Naryshkin—God knows it is not for your sake, Little Mother. But you see if you were not a great Queen they would all be nobodies. Catherine (sitting up)—They make me do it to keep up their own little dignities. So? Naryshkin—Exactly. Also, because if they didn't, you might have them flogged, dear Little Mother.

Catherine (springing energetically out of bed and seating herself on the edge of it)—

Little Mother.

Catherine (springing energetically out of bed and seating herself on the edge of it)—Flogged! I! A liberal Empress! A philosopher! You are a barbarian, Naryshkin, (She rises and turn to the courtiers.) And then as if I cared! (She walks about restlessly.) No, what maddens me about all this etiquette is that I am the only person in Russia who gets no fun out of my being Empress. You all glory in me, you bask in my press. You all glory in me, you bask in my smiles; you get titles and honors and favors from me; you are dazzled by my crown and my robes; you feel splendid when you have been admitted to my presence, and when I say a gracious word to you, you talk about it to every one you meet for a week afterward. But what do I get out of it? Nothing.

Nobody gives me anything. When I have headaches and colles I envy the scullery maids. And you are not a bit grateful to me for all my care of you, my work, my me for all my care of you, my work, my thought, my fatigue, my sufferings.

The Princess—God knows, Little Mother, we all implore you to give your wonderful brain a rest. That is why you get headaches. Monsteur Voltaire also has headaches. His brain is just like yours.

Catherine—Dashkoff, what a liar you are. (Dashkoff curtesies.) And you think you are flattering me. Let me tell you I would not give a ruble to have the brains of all the philosophers in France. send some part of ourselves into the future since we can't live ourselves? There, that's straight, and right, too.

Hedwig—What will happen to Amelia? Have you thought of that? No, I warrant you haven't. Well, look. A few kisses and sweet words, the excitement of the ceremony, the cheers of the crowd, some days of living together. I won't call it marriage. Then what? An order to march. Amelia left to wait for her child. No husband to wait with her, Think of her auxiety if she learns to love you. What kind of child will it be? Look at me. What kind of child would I have, do you think? I can hardly breathe for thinking of my Franz, waiting, never knowing from minute to minute. From
