

CLUB NEWS, FASHIONS AND SUGGESTIONS IN HOME MAKING FOR EVERY WOMAN

ANTIDOTES FOR LOVE By ELLEN ADAIR

Scaring Away Prospective Suitors

Such a superfluity of advice has flooded the feminine world on the ever green proposition of how to secure, tend and guard masculine affection that it is hard to find anything original to offer on the subject.

However, although many men will refuse to believe it, there is a reverse side to the picture. Some women refrain from racking their brains as to the due and timely securing of masculine homage, and even go further in seeking to scare away prospective suitors.

There are some really sure recipes for curing the ardent lover which have never yet been known to fail, and these recipes have been employed successfully for generations.

The first antidote for love is Contrariness. Let Angelina oppose her Edward in all things conversational and in particular in all things political and see what happens.

A second antidote for love is a strong sense of humor. If Angelina has a strong sense of humor—oh, blessed sense of humor in a trying world—she will sometimes be forced to laugh at Edward.

THE FEBRUARY FURNITURE SALE

By MRS. CHRISTINE FREDERICK Author "The New Housekeeping"

"Desirable 2-piece suite," "perfect reproductions of period furniture," "elegant mahogany rocker only," so run the ads, that all who read may run and purchase.

It costs money to make good, substantial furniture. Wood is increasingly scarce and dear; workmanship and craftsmen cost more today than ever before.

What we may buy today will depend on what we have already bought, and what pieces are already in our home. A lady indeed is the woman who has a carefully thought-out plan in buying.

Large pieces, like divans, sofas, chairs, and tables, need both floor and wall space to show them off, and prevent them from giving the room a crowded appearance.

PRIZE SUGGESTIONS PRIZES OFFERED DAILY

For the following suggestions sent in by readers of the Evening Ledger prizes of $5 and $10 cents are awarded.

A prize of $1 has been awarded to Mrs. J. W. Custer, Wilson, via Thiusville, Pa., for the following suggestion: What common soap will do—Stop a mouse hole.

A prize of 50 cents has been awarded to Linne M. Roberts, 20 North Virginia avenue, Atlantic City, for the following suggestion: A tabescent of castor oil poured on the ground around the roots of palms and ferns once a month will give them a rapid growth and make them look fresh and green.

A prize of 50 cents has been awarded to Mrs. W. Herbert Petty, 1800 Frankford avenue, Philadelphia, for the following suggestion: About the best way to hang a sweater out to dry after being washed is to run the clothesline through the sleeves and then fasten the line on the fence again.

Reality

This is the curse of life that nobler, wiser train Of better thoughts and feelings bid Our passions from our brain.

CHAPTER XXXIX (Continued)

He searched the shelves in the library, whistling like a boy. When he found the atlas he opened it out on a table pulled up to one of them.

"Here we are," he said, when he had found a map of the world. "Sandwich Islands, like specks in a blue sky."

He ran his fingers down the lines of longitude and latitude. Then he said: "Latitude 46, longitude 15. That's the last place the Marie Joseph was sighted. It's as likely as not she drove further south and went to pieces somewhere near the Sandwich Islands."

"Arthur," she said, in a low voice, "it is generous of you to be so glad—this means the loss of everything to you."

A SMART GIRL'S DIARY

Golfing Suits

We have been playing quite a lot of golf down here, and I am improving very rapidly under the able tuition of a shock-headed Irishman, who is really a wonderful player.

On the links are seen a great variety of wonderful golfing garments. Sweaters in every color of the rainbow are in great evidence, many of these being of very light silk makes.

AT WOMEN'S CLUBS This afternoon at 4 a meeting of the junior section of the Saturday Club of Wayne will be held in the clubroom.

JOHN ERLEIGH, SCHOOLMASTER A GRIPPING STORY OF LOVE, MYSTERY AND KIDNAPPING By CLAVER MORRIS

Author of "John Bredon, Solicitor"

Three lived for six months on the island. Then two of them made off with the boat, leaving Guy Wimberley and a man of the name of Stanton behind them.

"You dear old chap," said Joan. CHAPTER XL. Joan Merlet was married in the Abbey Church of Hartree on the anniversary of her mother's wedding day.

Miss Pauline Frederick, the charming actress, is an exponent of the fact that clothes may be made to express individuality. She dresses with superb taste, suiting the colorings, texture or design of each gown to the character of her roles.

The blue gown Miss Frederick wears is also a symphony in artistic styles. It is made perfectly straight, falling from the shoulders, of gold and silver brocade.

MISS PAULINE FREDERICK

"I must be going to bed," said Mrs. Travers, rising from her chair in the drawing room at Hartree.

"Yes, I expect you are very tired," said Lady Wimberley. For a few moments there was silence and the two women looked at each other.

"Grace," said Lady Wimberley after a pause, "Joan has told me. I suppose you are angry with me," she said in a low voice.

"Good-night," said Mrs. Travers in a tired voice. "Oh, don't think me ungrateful. I suppose it is because I envy you so much happiness."

"Come out here. It's a ripping night. You'll be all the better for a breath of fresh air."

Across the Counter

A faun-colored pocketbook is very pretty, indeed, with the same color for a lining and fittings of gilt. It costs $5.00.
