CHRIST TOO INDEFINITE TO MANY, SAYS BISHOP

Tells Audience at St. Stephen's That Son of God Has Real Personality.

Christ is to most people only a vague figure, indefinitely fixed in their minds, and as a result the real meaning of His personality and His message are often lost sight of...

"The Christ most of us know," Bishop Williams said, "is often a figment of theological imagination and speculative reason, a composite creation made up of various elements drawn from creeds, dogmas and traditions..."

"There are many who have never known the real Christ of the Gospels or the eternal Christ of today. For many he has been disguised in the traditions and doctrines in which men have arrayed him."

"That is often particularly true of young men in the first processes of education. A young man comes to college with a stock of ready-made religious beliefs that have been diligently inculcated into him..."

"Suddenly his intellectual horizon widens. He studied a little science, philosophy, Biblical criticism. His whole point of view is changed. To the unquestioned tenets of his boyhood faith the acid test is applied and many of them are dissolved..."

"I have no doubt what the result of that process will be. You shall find a better faith than you have lost, and a better Christ, for it will be the real Christ of history and eternity."

GIRL MODEL TELLS OF HER DOWNFALL; CAUSED BY DRINK

Nellie Fenning, Once Noted Beauty, Patronized by Great Artists, Driven to Despair by Divorce and Loss of Her Child.

From High Rank in Sphere to Which She Was Peculiarly Adapted, She Has Descended to Condition of Abject Misery.

"There isn't anything that will send a woman to the dogs so quickly as taking her child away from her. Every woman knows that, but it seems hard to make a man understand it. That's what they've done to me and look at me."

Looking at the slatternly, blowsy creature hunched in a dark corner of a little room at 942 South Water street, scarcely enough clothes on her body to cover it and her feet encased in a rough wornout pair of men's shoes, it seemed hard to believe that this was Nellie Fenning...

Charles Dana Gibson, Howard Chandler Christy, Cecil Beaux, Bryson Burroughs, George Grey Barnard and other famous artists clamored for Nellie Fenning to pose for them. Starting at the pictorial number of a Philadelphia newspaper, her subsequent success as a model was so great that she soon found her way to New York, where the perfect contour of her arms and neck and the Madonna-like expression of her lovely face won for her the name of being the most desired model in the artists' quarter...

"But Chris Hulkes came along after a little while," she said, "and I married him. He's divorced me, he's led about half a dozen other women away from me, but I can't help loving him a little bit even yet."

"After we had been married a little while funds began to run low and so said: 'Nellie, if you want out to work again we might be able to put a little something by for our old age. I was against it from the first, but I went to work to please him and that was the beginning of it all.'"

"There was plenty of work for me. I posed for George Grey Barnard for the figures of 'Art and Poetry' and decorated the New Amsterdam Theatre in New York and also for Bryson Burroughs when he was doing the murals for Anson Hall, and for hundreds of other artists. I also did illustrations for Christy's book and many of Gibson's drawings, too."

"They were wonderful gentlemen, all of them. Sometimes made as high as $20 a week and Chris didn't mind my doing it, apparently, but several years ago he deserted me. Then he stole Helen, my little girl, from me and soon divorce papers were served on me."

Nellie Hulges was crying now. "He charged that I had been unfaithful to him and also that I had beaten my little girl. I let all that go and my first drink when I got those papers and then I couldn't stop. I was put into the House of God Shepherd and the case came up in New York just after I had been released. I had no money or clothes to wear to go over and see if I couldn't stop him from setting the divorce, but before I knew it he had it and then I started to drink and I haven't been the same since."

"He got Helen hidden away from me somewhere. She's a beautiful little girl of nine years and I don't think I can live without her. What incentive is there then to work and to live? I'm going to start in again, however. I've given my pledge to the magistrate, and I intend to keep it. Maybe Chris will have some money on me then and give me back my little girl."

Despite the coarsening traces which drink and poverty have begun to leave on her face, it is easy to imagine the great beauty that Nellie Fenning must have been. Big brown eyes as clear as a baby's illuminate her face which quantifies of heavy black hair frame, and no amount of neglect has been able to spoil the beautiful tapering hands and well-shaped arms.

"I am 22, now," she volunteered, "and I suppose that's the best time to go ahead. As long as I can pull myself together, I'm going to look for work and then I'm going to night school and learn stenography. Maybe if I can have enough money to get to New York to see my little Helen. It was losing her that made me what I am now. Perhaps after all she'll be the one to save me."

The Selig Polyscope Company has contracted with Frank Gow, the world's champion wrestler, for his appearance before a motion-picture camera in three wrestling bouts, the honorarium for which will approximate $100.00.

Arrangements are being made for the comprehensive plan for athletic productions as contemplated by the Selig concern. The plan embraces, among other interesting and blood stirring events, a complete course of lessons in physical culture. Negotiations are now pending with such athletic experts as Muldoon, Sandow, Bernard McFadden, Alois Swoboda, Sylvester J. Simon, and others, each of whom, if satisfactory arrangements are made, will show upon the screen a course of simple yet effective exercises which the world accepts as being conducive to longevity.

This new series, which will be called the Selig Physical Culture Series, will be ready for release within a short time. The arrangements to be made the first week in April.

Claude Flemming, the Australian actor and singer, whose last engagement was in support of Fritz Scheff in "The Pretty Mrs. Smith," has succumbed to the lure of the motion picture and has been engaged by the World Film Company to play the leading male roles in several forthcoming films of importance. At the present time he is playing the leading part in "Hearts in Exile," in which Clara Kimball Young is being featured.

Carlton King Nearly Drowned. Carlton King, as the vagrant spy who drowns himself in "Olive's Greatest Opportunity," in which Mabel Trunnelle is featured, came the nearest to actually losing his life ever experienced in his film career. The scene required that he drown himself by jumping into a hole in the ice. The day the picture was taken was so cold that no hole could be found and a hole had to be chopped in the thick layer. The job was hard and the chopper, thinking he was being pulled only about large enough to admit a man's

Mr. Mastbaum. An enthusiast of the future of the drama and the photo-play, Mastbaum, president of the company, and director-in-

"It is conceded by all," says Mastbaum, "that the photo-play is a wonderful stage of development. I cannot agree that drama and comedy, with its classes. This some people think is a modern miracle, fighters. They climax and zenith of motion picture development. The film play has reached a great stride forward. It is a great and other strides, in a final at which we cannot even begin to follow. I do not think them to fight strictly in the far-off and the ductions of famous plays for Havana for we have well nigh, ally the reached the perfect stage of maturity if we had not simultaneously presented the 'Big and a thousand cities. But the chamber the motion picture camera will not work automatically. It does the photograph as a film. It will automatically take a picture, saying now a picture. It is a picture of the earth; it will even tell the sufferings and perhaps death. It will invade the mysteries of such fields as China and Tibet, and the unexplored jungles of South Africa. In fact its possibilities educational and civilizing force are only limited. Not far from predictions, when you consider developments of the telegraph, the phone, the wireless telegraph, the plane, the submarine and other day wonders. The motion picture is the greatest of them all."
