

WHAT EVERY WOMAN WANTS TO KNOW—SPRING FASHIONS, USEFUL HINTS AND IDEAS

THE MALE FLIRT

By ELLEN ADAIR

How He Conquers Foolish Femininity

Main is a polyzomous animal, so goes the saying. He is capable of loving more than one woman at a time. He is even capable of loving half a dozen and of regarding them all into the belief that each and every one is the damsel particularly chosen out to be the queen of his heart and the one and only lady of his choice.

Now whether this be true or not, there is one thing pretty sure and certain and that is that the average man is capable of carrying on several pretty lively flirtations at one and the same time, and what is more, thoroughly enjoying them, too.

Whether the gentle passion that the pursuit of each damsel arouses in his adventurous breast can be labeled with the rather all-embracing title of love is not easy to decide. Love is a big word and implies a very great deal—and the male flirt does not desire to expend too much undue energy on the chase. He prefers that his efforts be diffused, as it were, and spread out over a wide area. In other words, he decides not to have all his apples in one cart.

Most worth-while men have had a few little flirtations in their lives. They would make hopeless, blundering, unappreciative sort of husbands if they hadn't. There is nothing in this world quite so rejuvenating, quite so stimulating as a mild flirtation.

For it calls into play certain mental faculties and certain powers of repartee which are otherwise apt to stagnate. It makes a man feel that after all he isn't such a back number as he thought he was, and that the girls still see something to admire in him. He feels quite a dog, prinks around in front of the mirror, puts on a new tie, and sallies forth for conquest.

All of which is very interesting and delightful. It does a man good, and it certainly puts him into a fine humor with life in general and himself in particular.

But what of the man who really makes of female scalp-collecting a hobby? He isn't such a rare specimen as one might imagine, either. No indeed. In certain walks of life he is to be met with only too frequently. The city of the business is that girls don't find him so sooner. Girls can be extraordinarily stupid where an attractive man is concerned. Not that the confirmed male flirt is really attractive. Superficially he may be, but he lacks depth. Girls don't see that, however, for it is one of the regular poses of the confirmed male flirt to assume a depth of character and feeling when he has neither.

Another of the interesting poses peculiar to the person under discussion is quite alluring—as he desires it so to be. Not only has he this wonderful depth of feeling hidden away from the whole world—and only to be revealed to The Girl of Girls—the Girl of the Moment—that is—but he suffers from a terrible handicap in life; for he is misander-

THE DAILY STORY

Films of Fate

It was in the hypo bath that he first saw her—that Lawson Trotter first beheld the features of his future wife, Margaret Pudsey. That is to say, it was when he was developing films late one night—films of what he supposed were a group of pictures of himself in various poses of athletic contention. Then when he was watching with eager interest to behold his own silhouette, faintly and reversed came forth the features of a girl.

"Great Heck!" said Lawson, although there wasn't any one in his bachelor quarters to hear him. "These were pictures of myself and here is a girl." He looked at the six exposures of the roll and found on each a girl.

Then he went back over the events of the day and recalled that when he had taken the train in the morning from the lake shore where he had been spending the week-end he had left his roll of films in the car. He had gone back to the "lost and found" desk in the station, and when he discovered the roll of films he had there handed out to him. As they were the same size as the ones he had lost he had accepted them.

The next evening Lawson printed the negatives and saw, as he had hoped he would find, that the subject of the pictures was charming. She looked out of the pictures with a girlish animation that made him smile back at her. There was a dog in the picture, too, though he was of a variety of animal that Lawson did not admire—he was a rather large white French poodle—still he was here, and he was at least unusual.

After about a month Lawson decided that it was necessary to go to the pictures to discover her identity. It was curiosity, he granted, but it was insatiable. He lived in a city about a hundred and fifty miles from the lake. There were, of course, a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

After this inspiration Lawson concentrated his leisure thoughts on white French poodles. He went to the dog house and examined every entry and inquired of the kennel-keeper as to the number, Lawson reasoned, possibly of a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

After this inspiration Lawson concentrated his leisure thoughts on white French poodles. He went to the dog house and examined every entry and inquired of the kennel-keeper as to the number, Lawson reasoned, possibly of a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

After this inspiration Lawson concentrated his leisure thoughts on white French poodles. He went to the dog house and examined every entry and inquired of the kennel-keeper as to the number, Lawson reasoned, possibly of a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

After this inspiration Lawson concentrated his leisure thoughts on white French poodles. He went to the dog house and examined every entry and inquired of the kennel-keeper as to the number, Lawson reasoned, possibly of a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

After this inspiration Lawson concentrated his leisure thoughts on white French poodles. He went to the dog house and examined every entry and inquired of the kennel-keeper as to the number, Lawson reasoned, possibly of a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

After this inspiration Lawson concentrated his leisure thoughts on white French poodles. He went to the dog house and examined every entry and inquired of the kennel-keeper as to the number, Lawson reasoned, possibly of a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

After this inspiration Lawson concentrated his leisure thoughts on white French poodles. He went to the dog house and examined every entry and inquired of the kennel-keeper as to the number, Lawson reasoned, possibly of a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

After this inspiration Lawson concentrated his leisure thoughts on white French poodles. He went to the dog house and examined every entry and inquired of the kennel-keeper as to the number, Lawson reasoned, possibly of a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

After this inspiration Lawson concentrated his leisure thoughts on white French poodles. He went to the dog house and examined every entry and inquired of the kennel-keeper as to the number, Lawson reasoned, possibly of a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

After this inspiration Lawson concentrated his leisure thoughts on white French poodles. He went to the dog house and examined every entry and inquired of the kennel-keeper as to the number, Lawson reasoned, possibly of a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

After this inspiration Lawson concentrated his leisure thoughts on white French poodles. He went to the dog house and examined every entry and inquired of the kennel-keeper as to the number, Lawson reasoned, possibly of a hundred young women—not that any of them were comparable with the original of the picture—but still he would have to travel a long way to meet her casually. And he hadn't the ghost of a clue as to her identity. He pondered it thoughtfully. There wasn't a ghost of a chance except—happy thought!—the poodle.

A NEW COIFFURE

PRIZE SUGGESTIONS

PRIZES OFFERED DAILY

For the following suggestions sent in by readers of the EVENING LEDGER prizes of $1 and 50 cents are awarded.

A prize of $1 has been awarded to A. G. B. 202 Walnut street, West Philadelphia, for the following suggestion:

A very satisfactory way to prevent moths from getting into the trunk where you pack clothing is to place in the trunk a two-ounce bottle of chloroform. Have the cork of the bottle fastened in firmly, but punctured in two or three places so as to allow the fumes to escape. This is not only a protection from the moths, but kills the eggs without injuring the fabric in the trunk.

A prize of 50 cents has been awarded to Mrs. Lillian T. Gilbert, Pausboro, N. J., for the following suggestion:

When your kid gloves split, do not throw them away, or attempt to sew them, with the likelihood of the stitches tearing the kid. Get some adhesive plaster, the regular surgeon's plaster, and cut a strip somewhat larger than the tear you wish to mend. Draw the edges of the tear as close together as possible and press the adhesive plaster firmly on the wrong side of the glove, so as to hold the edges of the tear together. Any part of the adhesive plaster that shows on the right side without disturbing and also "stickiness" scraped off, and can be colored with water colors to match the glove. Black gloves can be colored with black and tan gloves will look well colored with russet shoe polish.

A prize of 50 cents has been awarded to Agnes M. Hilgen, 762 South 51st street, West Philadelphia, for the following suggestion:

To make the foot of a stocking practically hole-proof, if a piece of light-weight hannel is sewed on the inside of heel and toe, the stockings can be worn indefinitely without distress and also without any discomfort being felt by the added weight.

A real time saver in the kitchen is the combined apple corer and cutter. This is a wheel-like arrangement with a hole in the center. The apple is simply pressed down upon this and the hole takes out the core, while the wheel "spoke" divides the apple into sections. It is the best thing for baking day you can imagine. The price is 25 cents.

Little darts for holding corn on the cob so that you do not soil the fingers sell for 25 cents.

TOMORROW'S MENU

"What say you to a piece of beef and mustard? A dish that I do love," Shakespeare.

BRUNNEN Baked Apple and Cream Cereal Raised Biscuits Coffee

DINNER Vegetable Soup Broiled Sweet Potatoes Spinach Celery Salad Vanilla Ice Cream Orange Water Ice LUNCHEON OR SUPPER Ham Toast Apple Fritters Wafers Cheese Tea

Fried scallops—Wash and dry the scallops, and then dip them in beaten egg and then in cracker dust seasoned with salt and pepper. Fry in deep fat.

Celery salad—Cut celery into two-inch lengths. Slash one end of each piece lengthwise several times and put into iced water. The ends will curl back. Serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise and stuffed olives.

Ham toast—One cupful of finely minced cooked ham, two well-beaten eggs, one cupful of milk, salt, pepper and melted butter to taste. Cook until it thickens and spread on dry buttered toast.

In the Garden This is the time of the year when the garden lover must turn her attention to the preparation of the soil. With the approach of spring and the gradual departure of Jack Frost this work becomes a genuine pleasure. Rusty rakes and hoes and garden implements must be unearthed from the cellar.

Before one enters upon the actual preparation of the soil there is a very real pleasure in poring over catalogues, selecting various seeds, writing numerous epistles to seed houses and many other attendant joys of anticipation.

The great mistake of the average amateur gardener is that his eagerness carries him away, he starts to prepare the soil far too early in the season, and Jack Frost creeps in over night and undoes all his work and toil.

With spring surely at hand, seeds planted at the proper time—and the proper time is now approaching—the gardener enjoys the first real pleasure attendant upon cultivation of plants.

As day after day passes the gardener watches with the keenest interest for the first tiny shoots to push up from the soil, for there is no greater pleasure than watching the gradual creation of one's own handiwork. These tiny shoots are nurtured and watered daily, and the greatest attention must be given them if the best results are to be obtained.

OPENING OF NEW MATERNITY Building at Germantown Hospital Ready for Occupancy.

"STABAT MATER" TO BE GIVEN Hossini's "Stabat Mater," with the chorus in English, will be given by four soloists and a chorus, under Wessell Lenz, musical director, at the Church of the Saviour, 28th street above Chestnut street, tomorrow night, at 7:45 o'clock.

Divorced Couple Will Remarry Joseph Elmer Roberts, a former Philadelphia, who was divorced from his wife in this city in 1911, applied for a marriage license in Olean, N. Y., yesterday, and will try the matrimonial altar again. The man and woman, who are 23 years old, have two children, and decided after being separated for two years that it was all a mistake. This information was received in dispatches from Olean today.

Specialists Which means that we sell nothing else; also in Corsets we know every curve of the corset business. We place utmost importance in fitting—giving you the newest in styles fitted to your figure perfectly.

Miss Water 1316 Walnut St.

A SMART GIRL'S DIARY

The New Coiffure I think that the matter of hairdressing is really very difficult. So many women adhere rigorously to every new fashion as it comes in, quite regardless of the fact that it may not suit their particular type of face and feature.

A very pretty girl came into the hotel here last night and her hair was really done beautifully. She was the daughter of a Chicago multimillionaire—and her get-up was quite stunning.

Her hair was dressed high, in pompadour style, which, by the way, is exceedingly popular. Partings have quite gone out. The hair was waved very beautifully and the upper part of the ear was covered in the new style, leaving only the lobe showing.

A flit of exquisite pearls was worn across the forehead, and from a large cabochon in the center two beautiful agrettes rose. I don't know when I have seen anything smarter than this style of hairdressing.

Puffs and curls have come back again, and I am so glad, as they give such a soft, attractive look to the coiffure. If one's hair is straight and refuses to keep

In curl, it is really better to buy little clusters of curls and puffs, for so much bother is saved in that way. Shades of hair can be exactly matched nowadays and the difference between the real and the "addition" cannot be detected, even by the most inquisitive friend!

I do like these little puff-curls that seem fastened on pins. They droop gracefully over the forehead or over the ear and soften the face so much.

The Castle style of hairdressing is very popular just now. Yet many women here in Palm Beach are averse to having the hair "bobbed" and so they compromise by wearing a wig! It is impossible to detect these wigs, and, of course, the wearing of them saves the hair from being cut short.

The Castle style of hairdressing is only becoming to the woman who has curly or at least wavy hair. French rolls and twists have quite gone out, and the Psyche knot, with little puffs and curls cunningly inserted at the sides, has taken their place. The knot is at the back of the head, but much higher than the nape of the neck. It is certainly very becoming to the average woman.

NO BLANKS IN LEDGER SUBSCRIPTION CONTEST

All Entries in Race for Exposition Trip Assured of Substantial Rewards.

So many subscriptions are being sent in by the participants in the contest of the EVENING LEDGER and PUBLIC LEDGER every day that it is evident even those who do not win one of the 50 free trips to the Panama-Pacific and Panama-California expositions will have good times elsewhere this coming vacation season.

All subscriptions obtained for either paper will be paid for by the contest editor at the regular newsdealers' commission rates, and many of the contestants already are assured of a goodly sum early in July if the totalling of the points at that time shows they have been beaten out of the free trip.

This feature of the contest, providing that no one who does any work in it can lose, is one that has attracted many of the contestants. In most subscription contests those who do not get into the prize-winning class get nothing for their time and labor. In the EVENING LEDGER and PUBLIC LEDGER contest they will be paid handsomely, and the money will come to them at a time when it will be exceptionally useful.

There is still plenty of chance for those who want a trip to the Coast to get into the contest and win their way into the first 50. To enter, send your name to the contest editor, second floor of the PUBLIC LEDGER building, on the coupon provided for that purpose in the advertisement. He will see that you are supplied with all necessary information and some valuable hints on the best way to get subscriptions to the two newspapers.

Did you see Al? Did he tell you? No? Well, he told me to tell you when I saw you to look for it on March 6 in the Evening Ledger.

Fashion's Fancies

One of fashion's favorite combinations this spring will be poplin and satin. Skirts of poplin will be combined with a lode of Roman stripe in it. Plaids are very good this season, too.

Most of the plaids, checks, stripes, etc., shown in the newest materials are in black and white or very dark colorings. The glaring tints of last season's costumes for street wear are a thing of the past.

From the other side comes word that nets will be very much worn. The fillet nets are very attractive, and it may be safely assumed that a great many of the gowns will have sleeves of this material. Silk square-meshed nets are not particularly new, of course, but they are still in vogue, blue and black predominating.

Vestees of bemottished pique, batiste, mull or organdie are seen on most of the trotteurs. They relieve the rather somber effects of the plain colors. Bands of moire, a shade lighter than the suiting itself, are also used, with gun-metal buttons as the sole trimming. These help to make a very modish costume for street wear.

The top coats for spring show a decided inclination toward the flare around the bottom. They are mostly three-quarters length, and black and white check is frequently seen. All the collars are high in the back and V-shaped in front, like the blouses. A broad belt with basque effect is rumored.

Many women are buying narrow rib-

When She Comes Home

When she comes home again! A thousand ways I fashion, to myself, the tenderness Of my glad welcome; I shall tremble—yes; And touch her, as when first in the old days I touched her girlish hand, nor dared upraise Mine eyes, such was my faint heart's sweet distress.

Then silence; and the perfume of her dress: The room will sway a little, and a haze Cloys eyesight—soulslight, even—for a space; And tears—yes; and the ache here in the throat; To know that so ill deserve the place Her arms make for me; and the sobbing noise I stay with kisses, ere the tearful face Again is hidden in the old embrace.

—James Whitcomb Riley.

bons, now that the streamer dangles cheerfully from every spring hat. These can be seen in a variety of styles, such as moire, bengaline, voile, etc., as well as the regular taffeta and satin.

Picot edging is still being used as a finish on the Georgette crepe and chiffon blouse. Another notable manner of trimming them is by a touch of embroidery, done in narrow black velvet or deep cream soutache braid. This, when combined with hand embroidery, is exquisite.

Fruits and vegetables have almost succeeded in replacing flowers as a trimming for hats this season. Cherries, peaches, berries of all kinds, apricots, grapes, brightly-tinted apples, etc., are some of the trimmings seen recently at a large opening.

A Georgette crepe waist in palest flesh color, with a tiny touch of hand embroidery in the front and bemottished seams, is selling in one exclusive Chestnut street shop for $7.50.

Couple Married in Night Court Magistrate Carson played "second fiddle" when he married a couple in the Night Court in City Hall, after the young people had missed the last train to Elkton, Md. Miss Louise Klubman, of 112 Wood street, and Harry Mandels, of 122 North Bodine street, with the best man and bridesmaid, arrived at Broad Street Station a few seconds too late last night. They did the next best thing, and were married by Magistrate Carson.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

THE SNOWFLAKES' BATH

UP IN the clouds some snowflakes lingered, drifting hither and yon across the sky. "Now I think I will go to the earth," said one, "I have seen all I can from the clouds."

"I will go with you," said another, "I am tired of the sky and would like to see more of the earth that looks so beautiful below us."

"Let's go down," said a third, and as the word spread around through the cloud, hundreds of snowflakes found they wished to visit the earth.

Identify they bade the cloud good-by, softly they drifted downward—downward through the twilight—through the night.

grumbled a third, "I'm so hot I can hardly breathe!"

"The sun heard the snowflakes murmuring and the third day hid himself behind a cloud bank so the snowflakes could be more comfortable."

But that didn't help matters much, for Jack Frost went away on a visit and the snowflakes were warmer than ever.

And the smoke from the chimneys on houses and factories settled down on yards and roofs till each snowflake felt as black and messy as a coal fairy.

Bargain Counter Hints

This is the time of the year when the children's shoes take on a rather shabby look, and the wise mother goes to look for bargains in footwear. A large Market street store is selling some good black kid shoes for 98 cents. These cost $1.50 originally.

Crepe promises to be as popular as voile for summer wear. The skin with a little embroidered motif is very attractive, indeed, to the woman who likes dainty things. You can get 38-inch material, with stripes and other styles embroidered in pale pink, blue or lavender for 65 cents a yard.

It has been successfully demonstrated that crepe de chine lingerie will outwear several sets of fine batiste, however carefully the laundry. This is the opportunity for the woman who goes to her Lenten sewing class, to make a few dainty things for herself. Silk and cotton crepe de chine is on sale for 60 cents a yard. It is just the thing for lingerie, for it is so durable.

A real time saver in the kitchen is the combined apple corer and cutter. This is a wheel-like arrangement with a hole in the center. The apple is simply pressed down upon this and the hole takes out the core, while the wheel "spoke" divides the apple into sections. It is the best thing for baking day you can imagine. The price is 25 cents.

Most people eat eggs in the morning, and the invalid who is inclined to be testy about his three minutes will have no cause to complain if you use the egg timer. There is a little hour glass, placed on a graded scale. On the scale he marked all the "egg stages," soft, hard, medium, etc. You simply invert this when you put the egg on to boil. The price is 25 cents.

A new arrival is the picnic stove. This comes in a compact box about 19 inches square, and can be set up at a moment's notice. It is lighted by means of an alcohol tube, which ignites the coal oil in the body of the stove. The cost is very small—it averages a quart of coal oil a day. The stove is a great favorite with amateur fishermen or for yachting trips. The price is 75 cents.

A corn splitter takes the pulp out of each kernel and leaves the husk and part on the cob. It costs 25 cents.

FARM, GARDEN and the HOME

EGGS and CHICKS FROM LAURELTON FARMERS

Our thousands of select S. C. White Leghorns, winners here for size, vigor, early maturity and superior egg production—are supplying our home market. They are also filling our 48,000 egg incubators for bringing off hatches twice a week.

LAURELTON FARMS BOX 1, LAKESIDE, N. J.

1 Doz. Assorted Rose Bushes, $3

ENTERPRISE NURSERY CO. 2015 E. 12th St., Philadelphia, Pa. Phone, Kensington 2264.

PROFIT-MAKING FARMLANDS in best districts of South, growing greatest variety of crops, giving best home locations. Shall we give you information? M. V. RICHARDS, Ind. & Agr. Commissioner, Room 234, Southern Railway, Washington, D. C.

KEYSTONE POULTRY FOODS DELAWARE FARMS for fruit, gardening, HARDWOOD ASHES—No. 1 Canadian Unsleached, Incinerator ashes. Best fertilizer in use. Geo. Stevens, Peterborough, Ont., Canada.

Burpee's Sweet Spencers Peas

Six Super Spencers Peas For 25c we will mail one regular 10-cent packet (40 to 60 seeds) each of BURPEE'S DANBY, a beautiful plectone pink-edged Spencer; BURPEE'S KING EDWARD, deep Carmine Scarlet; BURPEE'S IRISH BELLE or DREAM, rich lilac flushed with pink; Mrs. CUTBERTSON, an exquisite pink; Mrs. HUGH DICKSON, rich apricot on cream ground; also one large packet (90 to 100 seeds) of the BURPEE BLEND OF SUPER SPENCERS FOR 1915, the finest mixture of Spencers or Orchid Flowered Sweet Peas ever offered. The Burpee leaflet on Sweet Pea Culture with each collection.

Burpee's Annual carries on the leading American seed catalog—the bright book of 120 pages for 1915 is better than ever. Mailed free. Write for it today and name this paper.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO. Burpee Buildings, Philadelphia.

Write us for prices on OYSTER SHELL, BONE MEAL, CANADA AND COW PEAS, LAWN SEED, TIMOTHY, CLOVER, RAPE, VETCH, ETC. Charles H. Keefe & Co., Inc., 119 West St., New York.

SEED at WHOLESALE Vegetable, Flower and Fruit seeds from growers in all wholesale prices. Write today for our wholesale list. C. N. ROBINSON & SONS, Dept. 81, Baltimore, Md. Seed Growers and Importers, Estab. 1876.

HOT BED SASH 80¢ OVERSEAS. Write for our list of hot bed sashes. C. N. ROBINSON & SONS, Dept. 81, Baltimore, Md.

Best and Biggest Berries

Promote good health and happiness—greatly reduce cost of living

Joy—the best and most prolific Blackberry. Jumbo—the biggest and best Raspberry. Van Fleet Hybrids—wonderful Strawberries. Caco—the best and most beautiful Hardy Grape. Everybody's—Best Currant for everybody. Carlie Gooseberry—Succeeds everywhere. MY CATALOG No. 1, an illustrated book of 64 pages, tells all about them and describes, with prices, all the "good old varieties" of Small Fruit as well. It gives full instructions for planting with cultural notes, and tells about the grand Jumbo Raspberry that I am giving away. It is free. For 25 pages a year send to Barry Doolittle.