

WILLIONAIRE'S DUAL LIFE Laid Bare by Suicide of Girl, 18

Search for Missing Stenographer Reveals Fact That Rich Employer Maintained Two Homes. Girl Knew of Duplicity.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 5.—An hour after the body of Lillian May Cook, the 18-year-old stenographer of the Mayo Manufacturing Co., was discovered in a lonely spot on top West Rock Mountain, four miles from the city...

GIRL KNEW OF DUAL LIFE. Two years ago Miss Cook had been employed as a nurse at the home of the Brooklyn woman. The girl knew of Mayo's dual life and kept silent, suffering under some sorrowful burden...

Captain of Detectives James M. Donnelly, of the New Haven police, who has investigated the case for a week, said there was no reason to doubt the story of Mayo.

After State Attorney Alting had conferred with coroner, the autopsy was summoned to appear before the local coroner.

Coroner Mix also examined Frank Cook, the dead girl's father, and her roommate at the local Y. W. C. A. Miss Ellen Wilson, before he sent for Mayo.

The father is confident this will show no physical condition that might have prompted the girl to kill herself.

For a year Miss Cook had been melancholy, and her friends all knew her as an old maid.

For a year Miss Cook had been melancholy, and her friends all knew her as an old maid. She was a quiet, unassuming girl...

SUNDAY ASSAULTS EVOLUTION THEORY

Continued from Page One. Smiles played around the corners of hundreds of lips and there was a sigh of satisfaction as he took his listeners into the evidence of love and devotion...

PLEADS FOR SPIRITUAL. At the conclusion of the dramatic recital, "Billy" jumped into the lesson of his sermon. He compared the life of Nolan to that of the man or woman who refuses to acknowledge allegiance to the realm of the spiritual.

"The average man looks after his citizenship in the material world fairly well," he said, "as far as it applies to temporal, material, personal gratification. In the world of dust and dollars the average man lives most of his citizenship. This is all right. A man should look well after his citizenship in the world of the material. It is a good world. It is the best. I say it reverently, that even God could make it. It is not to be despised and hurried through. But the man who never gets beyond his cook, his tailor, his barber, his limousine is nothing but a refined animal."

"There is the greater world of the spiritual, just as real as the world of the material and spends his time and energy and his citizenship in the world of the material is the consummate idiot and fool of the centuries."

In closing, the evangelist pleaded with his audience to consecrate themselves to Christ. "Whenever you cancel your citizenship in the world of the material, you take the crown from your brow. You do not accept from your hand and sink back with the rest of the brutes," he yelled.

Another letter received by the evangelist today conveys the information from Thomas J. Reed of 312 Locust street, West Philadelphia, that he and his wife have named an infant son "William Sunday Boose." Mr. Boose was born at the home of his parents on Locust street on Monday night last.

OVATION FOR MAYOR. Mayor Blankenburg was given a great ovation by the city employees when he arrived at the tabernacle. He was escorted to the platform by James Quirk, his personal bodyguard.

"SPITE" PARTITION DIVIDES NEIGHBORS' PORCHES

men saw him they began to cheer and applaud. It was only after "Billy" had given the signal to Flanier Ackley to begin to play "America" and the audience had started to sing that quiet was restored.

When the anthem had been sung and the Rev. T. W. Davis, the baseball pitcher and chaplain of the State Senate and the Police Band, had offered prayer, the city employees again applauded the Mayor just as loudly as they had greeted the evangelist when he arrived.

TATE "HITS THE TRAIL." Among the persons who grasped Sunday's hand and assured him that they would stand with him in the army of the Lord was Lieutenant James A. Flanier, who went forward with three City Hall detectives, Andrew Knox, "Tom" Harbridge and Charles Holst.

FIGHT OPENS TO CRUSH LATEST TRANSIT FRAUD

Continued from Page One. The fight was signed by me on the 15th and everything seemed to go along smoothly and harmoniously. But in, and behold, by the papers of February 25 and 26, we are suddenly informed that Senator McNichol is opposed to the building of the business delivery loop.

"I" EXTENSION INVALIDATED. The extension of the Frankford elevated to Rhawn street through three miles of open country instead of ending at Bridge street, as intended by the Taylor plan, alone is destructive of the entire program for rapid transit.

FEUD RENDS NEIGHBORHOOD; SPITE FENCE DIVIDES CAMPS. Rancor Rampant in Wyoming Avenue Section as Result of Quarrel Between Children—Law Invoked by Participants.

A neighborhood feud, the outcome of a kids' scrap in which the families of practically an entire block are now involved, is shaking quiet-loving Olney to its very depths, and though there is a truce in the present moment, the presence of a yellow board partition erected between the porches of 43 and 45 East Wyoming avenue is a constant reminder to those who would forget of the rancor still rampant in the breast of the participants.
