presence of Christ when Christ was brought before him. Standing before the royal palace Pilate demanded to know the charges against his prisoner. The shifting answers were not satisfactory to Rome. The charge that He was a persecutor of the nation failed. The accusation that He refused tribute to Caesar was shown to be false. The third charge alone had some semblance of truth, Christ's declaration of Kingship. "Pilate was not convinced, however, that there was sufficient reason for the execution of Jesus. His attitude in saying to the accusers of Christ 'I find no fault at all' and in washing his hands in his presence was due to his desire to be fair to Christ. His conduct in turning Christ over to the soldiers to be scourged, his willingness to allow Jesus to be associated with Barabbas, his sentence 'Take ye Him and crucify Him, for I find no fault in Him' was due to his desire to assert an absolute neutrality."

topic at the service at noon today in the Garrick Theatre. The Rev. Charles E. Woodcock, Bishop of Kentucky delivered a sermon. He appealed to his hearers to endure the hardship and suffering which courageous living necessitates. "Men who refuse to endure hardship always lose in the end," he said. "They always sustain a loss when they do what they ought not to do. Many men are in a state of fear and try to protect themselves with a few weak resolutions. These resolutions are useless. What they need is a stiffer, more determined courage."

due, in his opinion, to a defective sense of what worship was. "In worship we receive many a mental enjoyment," said Doctor Ross, "but forgotten factors in our personal problems and difficulties appear, and the difficulties are solved. Spiritual refreshment comes to us sometimes by the mere suggestion of the building and congregation."

DOCTOR ROSS' FINAL SERMON

Last of Lenten Series Delivered at St. Stephen's.

The final in a series of noonday Lenten sermons by the Rev. Dr. G. A. Johnson Ross, of the Union Theological Seminary, delivered at noon today at Old St. Stephen's Church, 29th street above Chestnut, was entitled "Our Debt to Social Worship." The speaker said there is a widespread defection from social worship.
