PLAYS AND PLAYERS

Three Delightful Plays to Be Given Again Tonight at the Club Rooms.

The Plays and Players will give the third and last of their performances tonight at the Playroom, 43 South 18th street, in aid of the forestry cause. The three short sketches which are being presented have each been delightfully diverting and the casts are exceptionally good.

The first number, "The Subjection of Kezia," written by Mrs. Havelock Ellis, is under the direction of J. Howard Reber, president of the club. The cast comprises Mrs. J. Howard Reber in the title role, William H. Whitney as Joe Pengilly, the husband of Kezia, and Henry L. Fox as Matthew, the well-meaning friend of the Pengillys. The whimsical little piece serves as a most entertaining curtain-raiser.

"The Little Stone House," by George Calderon, the scene of which is laid in a Russian province, is a one-act drama of great intensity. Dr. Daniel M. Hoyt is the stage director, and the members of the cast include Miss Helena Balbirnie, Miss Dorothy Welsh, Henry L. Fox, W. A. Stout, Herbert L. Weir, J. Howard Reber and Howard F. Brinton. The performance of Miss Balbirnie as Preskovya Petrovna, the lodging house keeper, and of Mr. Reber as the stranger leaves nothing to be desired, and each of the other players is to be commended.

A delightful sketch, "Over the Hills," by John Palmer, proves a welcome diversion after the more dramatic performance preceding it. It is produced under the direction of Herbert Lloyd Welr, with Mrs. Maurice Walsh Fagan, Mrs. Samuel Woodward, William H. Whitney and Henry C. Sheppard in the cast. Mr. Whitney, as Robert Wilde, is splendid, while Mrs. Fagan, as Helen Wilde, his wife, brings out all the subtle humor and charm of the character. Mr. Sheppard speaks his lines with a delightful breeziness well in keeping with the part.
