The announcement recently made by fra M. Lewry, general manager of the Lubin Company, that his company would release its big special feature productions direct to exhibitors, has created much interest in the moving-picture world. A New York office will be opened in the Mecca Building, at 48th street and Broadway, within the next few weeks, and at about the same time distributing offices will be opened in other large cities.

The Lubin Company has a number of important productions, in which distinguished stars are featured, ready for first time he had seen them in final perrelease as soon as distributing plans are arranged in detail. Among these masterpieces are "Engle's Nest," by Edwin Arden, in which Arden and Romaine Fielding are featured; "The Sporting Duchess," Cecil Raleigh's comedy drama, with Rose Coghlan and Ethel Clayton and supported by George Soule Spencer; "The Valley of Lost Hope," a spectacular drama, by Shannon Fife, in which Romaine Fielding is featured; "The District Attorney," Charles Klein and Harrison Grey Fiske's well-known drama, with George Soule Spencer and Dorothy Bernard; "The College Widow," George Ade's sparkling comedy, featuring Ethel Clayton and George Soule Spencer; "The Evangelist," Sir Henry Arthur Jones' powerful drama, in which Gladys Hanson is tarred, supported by George Soule Spencer, and "The Climbers," by Clyde Spencer, and "The Climbers," by Clyde Fitch, in which Gindys Hanson will be featured and supported by an all-star cast of Lubin players.

Among the other big features now in the making or shortly to be produced are "The Light Eternal." by M. V. Merle; "Mrs. Dane's Defense," by Henry Arthur Jones; "The Great Divide," by William Vaughn Moody; "The Woman in the Case," "The Truth," and "Captain Jinks," by Clyde Fitch, and a number of other famous plays. other famous plays.

Changes at Thanhouser

Some real changes are being made at the Thanhouser plant. Things are being reorganized with a vengeance. It seems that Mr. Thanhouser is working more or less upon the basis of delivering good films without paying big prices for stars and artists who are to be featured. Sydney Bracy and Frank Farrington have resigned from the company, and it is understood that there may be more to take a stand on the policy followed for so many years by Biograph, that of making films and advertising only the name of the brand and not advertising the artists. Naturally, this has been one of the big questions in the trade for years, This reversing back to the former policy by such a prominent manufacturer as Mr. Thanhouser will be watched with in-

Pius X in Motion Pictures

Motion pictures of Pope Pius X, taken at the Vatican after 18 months of en-deavor on the part of a young Ameri-can, James Slevin, will soon be seen in this city under suspices of the Knights this city under auspices of the Knights of Columbus and with arrangement with the Sacred and Historic Film Company, or New York. The pictures give intimate views of the departed prelate, not only at ceremonlais, but also in his study in the Vatican, where the Papal messages to Catholics all over the world are written. In another picture, among the group of attendants upon the Pope may be seen the successor of Pius, Benedict XV.

Slevin's success in obtaining permission to photograph the Pope was due to per-sistence and diplomacy. One seeker for the privilege of making motion pictures of the Holy Father was so zealous as to be turned away abruptly, although he was a stanch Catholic. Another deter-mined man spent $150,000 in vain, in pre-liminaries in a photographic campaign that came to naught. The pictures that Slevin obtained give the most diverse views of ceremonials and of informal appearances of the Pope, and are re-garded as of the greatest historical as garded as of the greatest historical as well as contemporary interest. Unusual opportunities were afforded Slevin to go on with his photographic plans, and the result is the remarkable pictures that will be shown here for the first time about April 10. Americans have been enabled to see with their own eyes many events that only the rarest opportunity would afford in the Eternal City itself.
