BONELESS EGG RIDDLE IS OFFICIALLY SOLVED AT PINE NOTCH, N. J.

Solution of Problem Now Rests in Archives of Board of Poultry Trade. Philosophical Gymnastics of Newt Bull.

Special Correspondence Evening Ledger. PINE NOTCH, N. J., March 30.-The great boneless egg riddle has been of ficially solved and the solution stored away in the archives of the Pine Notch Board of Poultry Trade. This great centre of egg culture breathes a palpitating sigh of relief-that is, so far as the boneless egg riddle is concerned.

Another vexatious little matter has arisen to harass the chairman of the Hard Questions Committee of the Board of Poultry Trade, but of that more anon. Let us first to but with the boneless egg

It happened, as the world must know by now, that Watson Malone, the well-known Hala breeder of esthetic, game cocks and split toe Langshams, touched off the siddle by sending Newt Bull, chairman of the board and leading Pine Notch exment of a direct to the consumer trade eggs (settings, specials and just eggs), an order for a consignment of boneless eggs, and it has likewise come to pass that the same intensive hen culturist solved the ridale in the document he shipped to Newt Bull and which was read and voted on at a special closed session of the Board of Poultry Trade.

THE HISTORIC MEETING.

Having these important facts in mind let us come to the board meeting and listen to Newt Bull's reading of the document in issue. The silence was so tense in the board room when the secretary unfolded the manuscript that you could hear Rodney Pulp's whiskers crackle as gently stroked them with his horny is of toil. This is what Newt Buil

Gentlemen of the Pine Notch Board of

Poultry Trade:
"Having had my attention called to the fact that my order for two dezen the fact that my order for two dozen boncless eggs has perplexed and troubled you, for the reason that there is a wide variance of opinion as to just what a boncless egg is or isn't, I have decided to turn myself loose and describe to you just what a boncless egg is or isn't, so that you may finally record and specify. as an official finding of your board, just what a boncless egg is or isn't.

"Let us begin then with a positive conclusion, or, in other words, let us propound the objective potentialities of a boncless egg in a state of being. All matboneless egg in a state of being. All mat-ter either is or isn't, so as a primary premise let us begin with is. I will describe clearly then what a boneless egg s, upon the assumption of its being which predicates a state of life, though not necessarily strong chemical action. THE RIDDLE SOLVED.

"A boneless egg then (following this simple line of reasoning) is an egg which has not begun to construct its bone fabric. All the bone in a boneless egg is on the outside, just as we imagine is the case with the construction of our heads. An omelet is a boncless egg hash, inasmuch as we have to throw away the shells. An egg by itself is utterly bonetess during its infancy. Some scien-tists say you may detect the wishbone in a nine-day egg by use of the X-ray.

"It is not necessary for a boneless egg te be replete with bones to put it in the catagory of eggs that are in the negative class of boneless eggs. A boneless egg is not a boneless egg only when it qualifies the essential fact of a mellow unclouded fluid yoke. You may reach a my careful elucidations are of certain value to the board, and will aid it in its further commercial transactions."

A TENSE MOMENT.

Newt Bull was perspiring freely when he finished reading; so was his father and the Bull twins. No one spoke, but all were breathing hard. Zedekiah Bull was breathing so hard that his windpipe whistled a little, and he was compelled to remove his lower tier of teeth to facilito remove his lower tier of teeth to facili-tate respiration.

He seemed on the point of jumping up and excialming vehemently when his son, Newt, forstalled him, and said with fierce and compelling determination:

"Let us accept this document as a complete total an everlastin' settlement

o' the boneless-egg specifycations for this board o' trade, an' let us further have copies made o' this document to mail to all customers sendin' in orders for bone-less eggs. That'd save us sayin' another word onto the subject. All them as is in favor of this resolution raise their right

Every right hand in the assemblage went up. Zedekiah Bull seemed too feeble or too distraught or something to raise his right hand, but the twins lifted it for

The session was about to adjourn when odney Pulp let go of his whiskers and asked sharply: "In that there document, Newt Bull, the feller mentions the left side o' an ess.

But the chairman and secretary of the Hard Questions Committee out him short, and declared the meeting "adjourned without day." But as Rodney Pulp filed the apprehension is growing that he is going to start something even worse than the boneless-egg riddle. out there was what you might almost call a wicked look in his eyes, so that the apprehension is growing that he is

BOY SCOUTS

The New Commissioners

Two of Philadelphia's three newly pinted field commissioners-E. Goodman and Haydon O. Merrill-will Goodman and Haydon O. Merrill-will take up their new duties at Boy Scout headquarters Thursday. The third, Carroll A. Edson, of New York, will report May I. He is scoutmaster of the Hamilton Grange Troop (New York Troop 26), of the Hamilton Grange Reformed Church, and is at present finishing a postgraduate course at the Dartmouth Teachers' College. rs' College, Commissioner Merrill, who is scoutmaser of Troop 22, has been connected with he Boy Scouts for two years, his first position being the acoutmastership of the troop, which has 27 members. Previous to this, he was leader of a club of 81 boys at the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church. tenhouse Square. He was graduated from Mercersburg Academy, where he had charge of the smaller boys. His experi-ence among boys has been wide and the progress of his troop has been exceptional.

Commissioner Goodman resigned his position as scoutmaster of Troop 1 at a meeting of the troop last night and was elected honorary scoutmaster by the members. He will be succeeded by Horses P. Versical P. Versi ace P. Kern, first assistant scoutmaster. Troop I received the first charter granted in this city in January four years ago, and through Mr. Goodman's efforts it grew from a troop of 10 members to 110, the largest membership of any troop in the city. "Dear Scoutmaster:

"On invitation of Connie Mack and Willlam F. Baker, registered Boy Scouts of Philadelphia and vicinity are invited to attend the fifth interleague game be-tween the Athletic and Phillies, to be played at Shibe Park, 21st street and Lehigh avenue, at 3 p. m., on Friday, April 9.

"It is planned to admit free of charge every scoutmaster, assistant scoutmaster and scout in Philadelphia. Special tickets of admission will be sent to each scoutmaster from headquarters and must be shown, together with the scout badge, at the park. Great care should be exercised that none but registered scouts in good standing receive thees tickets intrusted to you.

"Letters excusing scouts from attendance at school will be forwarded with the admission tickets on April 1. These ex-cuses, which must bear the counter-signature of the scout executive, must be signed by the parent and the scoutmaster. "Letters signed by Director Porter and the scout executive are to be sent to scoutmasters for each working boy, asking his employer to allow him to atteno the game. Scoutmasters will please report to headquarters by April 1 the num-ber of working boys in each troop. "Sections of the grandstand are to be

"Sections of the grandstand are to be reserved for the Boy Scouts and will be numbered for individual troops. Scouts upon arrival will go at once to their respective sections, there to remain until the end of the game. Troops may be accompanied by their bands, but bugles and drums should not be sounded during the game.

This department is published every Tuesday and Friday. News of troops is desired from troop scribes, as well as special articles of scout work, and not more than 300 words long, from scoutmasters and scouts. Address all communications to the Boy Scout Editor, Evening Ledger, Philadelphia. Ledger, Philadelphia.
