Evening & Ledger PUBLIC LEDGER COMPANY EDITORIAL BOARD: Cenes H. K. Cunris, Chairman.

P. H. WHALEY ..... Executive Editor JUMA C. MARTIN. ..... General Business Manager Published daily at Pustic Labora Building,

Published daily at Public Levere Building, Independence Square, Philadelphia.

Library Cart. Broad and Chestnut Streets
Atlantic Cart. Press Union Holiding
New Your. 170-A. Metropolitan Tower
Cantago. 817 Home Instrume Building
Laysoon. 8 Waterion Place, Pall Mail, S. W.
Wangishton Bergau. The Post Fonding
New York Burgau. The Post Fonding
New York Burgau. By Friedrich Studiong
Broads, Rugage. Broads William Broads, S. W.
Carta Burgat. 2 Pall Mail East, S. W.
Carta Burgat. 82 Rug Louis is Grand

By carrier, Danty Other, six cents. By mall, postpaid puttaids of Philadelphia, except where foreign postage in required, Danty Other, one month, twenty-five cents Danty Oxid, one year, three dollars. All mall substriptions payable in advance.

RELL, BOOG WALNUT KEYSTONE, MAIN 3000 Address all communications to Revelop Endger, Independence Square, Philadel-hia. ENTERED AT THE PHILADELPHIA POSTOFFICE AS SECOND

PHILADELPHIA, TUESDAY, MARCH 30, 1915.

There would be no thief if there were no one to buy the stolen goods,

Bipartisanship for Political Decency

In His article discussing the ideals and purposes of the Democracy in Pennsylyania, A. Mitchell Palmer, after declaring the desire of the party to stand by Governor Brumbaugh in his fight for necessary reform. says: "But if Grundy is going to control the child labor situation, Mulvihill hold up the local option bill and Bigelow continue to stand between the people and good roads. then we shall fight on with all the strength we can muster."

Mr. Bigelow's days are numbered and Mulwihill is an anachronism. It will be a long time before any political party again finances itself through the bung holes of beer barrels. Besides, the Organization cannot deliver the goods. The Governor was not a party to the agreement, nor were the hundreds of thougands of citizens who are now demanding local option. Mr. Grundy is an astute special pleader, but his victories are chiefly in retrospect, and he will be engulfed in a new

The power of the Democracy is not great; it will be even less if its representatives do not stand by the Governor in furtherance of a program which is more humanitarian than political. A little bipartisanship for the achievement of political decency would do no

Preparations for National Birthday Party

WHEN the national celebration of the Fourth of July in Independence Hall was suggested last year it was indorsed at once by the whole nation. The plans were begun so late, however, that many men who would have been glad to take part had made other arrangements.

The President, as the official representative of the Union of States, will in time count it as one of his great privileges to stand every year in the place where the great Bell sounded its proclamation of liberty to all men and invited the oppressed of every land to seek refuge here.

Mr. Wilson, who established the precedent last year, is expected to follow his own example this war, and once more use Indepedestal from which to dense a moving message to his fellow countrymen. And the Governors and Senators and Representatives in Congress are expected to accompany him in such numbers that the old square will think that it is once more the seat of government. This will happen if the committees in charge of the arrangements are properly

Sandbagged and Ruined AGERMAN submarine officer when asked if he would sink an American ship, replied, "Certainly not, if I knew it was American. Besides, you have so few that we have them pretty well photographed in our mind." Our ocean-borne commerce is probably the most valuable in the world. We can build as good ships as can be built anywhere. Our people are apt in navigation. We have everything necessary for the upbuilding and maintenance of a great ocean marine except laws to foster it. Washington has succeeded in demonstrating that even the most flourishing business can be destroyed if legislators keep whacking at it long enough,

Honoring the Memory of a Brave Man

EVERY member of the police force shared in the tribute paid to the memory of James Maneely yesterday. Maneely came to his death in the performance of his duty. and the thousands of citizens who crowded the streets about his house were there because they knew that every other member of the police force would have gone to his death as unflinchingly. The Mayor was there to show his own personal respect for the dead officer, and also as the representative of the city as a whole which mourns the passing of a faithful defender.

So whenever we see a policeman we should make obelsance to him in our hearts, for we know that in a crisis he will do that which we are afraid we should not have the courage to do. We call them our defenders, but too often forget the high qualities required to enable them to merit the title.

The Old Democratic Aristocracy

PLECTION to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa Society, an honorary college fraternity, whose members are selected because of the excellence of their scholarship, is selform declined. The secretary of the chapter in the University of Pennsylvania, who says that the student who has just refused to accent election is the first to decline, may be vista, but there are traditions surviving in other universities that students there have with a temporary distinction by setting up for themselves a different standard from that which prevails both in and out of collage. Such a student may deserve respect for acting according to his convictions, but his convictions do not deserve respect. He is said to believe in an educational demogracy and to be opposed to a manifestation of any sign which will distinguish one selming from another. But he cannot apply ams theory consistently. Every time he talks with a student who thinks less clearly than o does and expresses himself more buntingly he displays the badge of his own suflority and proves that there can be no wh thing as an intellectual democracy, in h all are equals. Nature has made him ma Beta Kappa man, whether he is will-Le Dimir it or not. And whether he acsingle in to the society and wears its or whither he prefers to flock by | enforce it.

himself, does not affect his standing in the aristocracy of intellect one whit. If he does not know this now, he will know it when he is ten years older, for the Phi Bata Kappa Society is the one college society in the world which is founded on the theory that the aristocracy of intellect is the only kind of an aristocracy which can be recognized in a democracy, and the only kind which dominates society even in those lands where an aristocracy of birth or of wealth is recog-

What One Week Can Bring Forth

COCAL OPTION was "on the skids" week ago. Today its succeess is not only possible but probable. This change has come about because of the appeal of the Governor to the people of the Commonwealth. The opponents of local option have been protesting against his alleged attempt to browbeat the General Assembly and to interfere with its freedom of action, but the Governor has been doing nothing of the kind. He has been attempting to impress upon it a realization of the strength of the sentiment of the voters in order that the lawmakers may carry out the will of those who elected them.

The Governor is the representative of the whole State. He is convinced that he has received a mandate from the people to secure for them a local option law. He is right. Thousands of voters here in Philadelphia cast their ballots for him because they had confidence in his promises. They were independent citizens who owed allegiance to neither party machine. They are citizens whose wishes deserve respect. They hold the balance of power between righteousness and machine rule, and they are backed by tens of thousands of regular Republicans and Democrats who look to the Governor to execute his platform and their will. The Governor is strong because he is conscious of the strength that is behind him.

When the Organization discovers that it be not fighting Martin G. Brumbaugh, but is defying the will of the majority of the voters of the Commonwealth, the victory for local option will be won.

Japan Cannot Absorb China

WHATEVER may be the result of Jap-anese efforts to increase the influence of Japan in China the Chinese will continue to dominate their own land. Every observer who has traveled in the Far East has come back with reports of the marvelous capacity of the Chinese. They have patience, endurance, initiative and honesty, and even when the Japanese are favored by all sorts of discriminating duties and railroad rates the Chinese merchant can compete successfully and drive his rival out of business. This is what is said to have happened in Manchuria after the Russo-Japanese War, when Manchuria was filled with Japanese immigrants. The Chinese merchant beat the invader at his own game.

The hope of the East is really in China. The nation is slowly waking to a realization of its power and to a determination to exerelse it for its own protection. Under the lead of men such as Yuan Shi-kai, who understand the limitations as well as the qualifications of their fellow nationals, it will adopt one after another the methods of modern civilization and adapt them to its own needs. When the Chinese get ready they are likely to throw off whatever Japanese chains may be bound on them in the present transition state.

In the meantime the interest of the United States in the maintenance of the open door should not be slackened. American manufacturers who enter into relations with Chinese merchants for selling their goods are likely to prosper more than those who ignore the native and attempt to do their own distributing in a country with the ways of which they are not familiar.

Our Fellow Creatures

THE friends of that man who was killed I while trying to rescue a cold and hungry kitten may like to recall the lines in which Coleridge compressed the meaning of his greatest poem. Here they are:

He prayeth best who loveth best All things both great and small For the dear Lord, who loveth us, He made and loveth all.

A Plot That Failed

THE young woman in New York who sued James W. Osborne for $50,000 for alleged breach of promise of marriage now says that she was mistaken in her identification. of the man. It was some one else, she now avers, although she had sworn in court that she was not mistaken and has been supported by the testimony of her sisters. It is intimated that, as her suit is to be dropped, the counter action brought for an attempt to use the United States mails to defraud will also be dropped.

Such an outcome would be most unfortunate. The young women was either guilty of attempted blackmail or she was guilty of the incredible offense of being unable to identify the man who had called on her frequently and had promised to marry her. No one believes that she could have been mis-

The suit against the lawyer should be pressed or the suit against her for attempted blackmail should be tried, not for the sake of the accused lawyer, but for the sake of every other man in every other large city in the country. The prosecuting officers of the Government should not assist in compounding wrongs in order to assist adventuresses in escaping punishment. If this woman escapes now less scrupulous women will be encouraged to attempt to play the same game, and they may succeed.

What was the price of Rumanian neutral-

It is just as safe to be an umpire as a ship

Every householder is trying to nurse his supply of coal along until next Thursday.

Italy, which "has joined the Allies" every day for the past week, is still engaged in watchful waiting.

Shaving the high cost of living would be all right if incomes were not cut to pieces during the process.

The public is getting tired of the war, so what's the use continuing the thing? It is getting so that marbles is more exciting.

It is estimated that there are 50,000 defectives in New York State, although all of them are not in office by any means.

It is not true that some legislators own Philadelphia tenements, and nobody has ever suspected any legislators of living in them. An amateur sociologist has suggested that the world would be better off "if more lawyers and fewer other criminals were in jail." There are some citizens who are almost as hostile to law as they are to the officers who

POLITICAL DAY

OF JUDGMENT

It Will Follow for Republicans if the Legislature Adjourns Without Obeying Will of the People-What of the Democratic Party in Penn-

By A. MITCHELL PALMER

THE Democratic party in Pennsylvania is I not a mere party of opposition. It has a constructive program of its own. In late years it has not been afraid to say what it stands for. It has been fair and frank with

In 1912, when the Republican party wrote no platform at all, because its convention was captured by the Progressives, if the Democruts had been mere opportunists they would have written a platform in contrast with the progressive program of the Washington party so as to win the support of Republicans, already disgusted with the Flinn-Roosevelt leadership, Democracy's Greatest Achievement But we cast aside proffered support from such a quarter, unanimously adopted a real progressive platform and got behind the movement which forever divorced the Democratic party from reactionary control by the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for President. The Pennsylvania Democracy's controlling part in that movement will go down In history as the greatest achievement of the Democratic party of our State, and will always constitute an entire justification of the "reorganization," so called.

In 1913, our State Committee, in no uncertain terms, called upon the Legislature to redeem the pledges of the two parties which had made platform promises to the people, and sent a committee to Harrisburg to work for the promised reforms in co-operation with others there, regardless of their party affliations. In 1914 our party was the first to declare its position upon State questions. Its candidates for Governor and Senator, long before the primary, announced the platform upon which they asked support, and the party by a large majority sustained them. In the campaign that followed there was no "playing both ends against the middle." Its candidates, by their frankness and directness lost the support of thousands of so-called Democrats who dld not agree with them, but not a vote was won by sidestepping or false

For the Brumbaugh Program

The Republican party, however, presented a curious spectacle, which would be anomalous in the politics of any other State. Its candidate for Senator and the official party platform went in one direction; the candidate for Governor and his personal platform in another. It was a species of double play that got the votes. It is more difficult, however, to keep such a play going after election than before. There are already many signs that the mixed breed of Republican chickens are coming home to roost,

We are with Governor Brumbaugh in his fight, if he means business and as long as he seems to be in carnest. Workmen's compensation, enlightened child labor legislation up to the best standard county unit, local option on the liquor question and good roads are in the Democratic program, and the whole strength of the present organization of our party is at the service of the Governor if he will use all the power that he can grab to "put them over." But if Grundy is going to control the child labor situation. Mulvibill hold up the local option bill and Bigelow continue to stand between the people and good roads, then we shall fight on with all the strength we can muster. If this Legislature adjourns without doing what the people have demanded and Governor Brumbaugh has promised, the people will know whom to hold responsible, and the political day of judgment will not be long deferred.

FIGHTING POWER OF OUR NAVY

The Dreadnought Revolution Leaves Us Unprepared for a Great War.

Frem the World's West

An event that happened in 1995 changed the whole naval situation; it made obsolete all nghting ships then afloat, and led to the reconstruction of all navies. This event was the launching of the British battleship Dreadnought.

The Dreadnought concentrated its fighting powers upon the heaviest possible guns. Instead of a miscellaneous assortment, it had simply 10 12-inch guns. Its displacement, 17,500 tons, was larger than that of any other battleship then affoat; its armor protection much greater; more important still, it had a greater speed. Up to that time the average battleship contented itself with 17 or 18 knots; the Dreadnought could make 21.

A fleet of dreadnoughts could easily Gestroy any battleship squadron that had extsted up to that time. Its speed gave it the power to choose the place and time of battle, and also, if necessary, to keep without the range of the enemy's guns. Its heavy armament enabled it to outrange the old style ship and to inflict greater damage. The nation that possessed a considerable fleet of dreadnoughts, therefore, easily ruled the

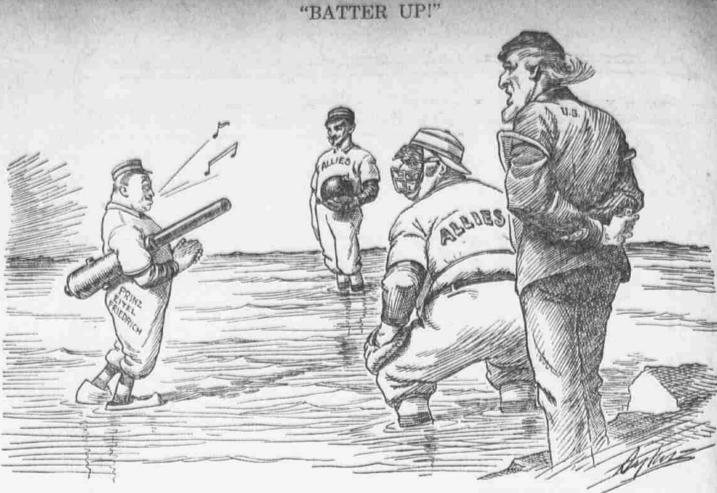

There are really two types of dreadnoughts the battleship dreadnought and the cruiser dreadnought. This latter ship is known as the battle cruiser. Like the dreadnought, its heavy battery consisted of all big guns; like tt. it had a great displacement-17,500 tons; it differed only in that it had not quite so many big guns-eight instead of ten-and had much thinner armor. It sacrificed itself in these two details in order that it might attain a much greater speed, 27 or 28 knots, The naval authorities use a generic name to describe these two types; dreadnoughts and battle cruisers are known as "capital ships." If we wish to estimate the fighting qualities of any navy, therefore, the one important question is this: How many "capital ships" does it possess? These capital ships, and these only, are "ships of the line"- ships that constitute the first battle line. On July 1, 1904, the office of Naval Litelligence at Washington published a broadside showing the relative naval strength of the great naval Powers. England had 29 dreadnoughts built and 17 building, a total of 46. Germany had 17 built and 11 building, a total of 28. The United States had 8 built and 4 building, a total of 12. France had 4 affeat and 8 in progress of construction, a total of 12. Japan had 4 built and 6 building, a total of 10. Russia did not possess a single capital ship, though she had II building or au-

Assuming that, is these six "first-class" Powers, all the ships are armed with the same efficiency, a child can easily figure out just where we stand. In July of this year England and Germany so far outclassed us that only national insanity would have forced us into war with them. On the other hand, we so considerably outclassed France and Japan that a naval engagement with either Power must almost necessarily end in

FESTIVAL OF THE PASSOVER Institution of the Rite and the End of the Israelites' Sojourn in Egypt. From Exedus.

And the Lord spake unto Moses and Auron in the land of Egypt, saying:
This month shall be unto you the beginning of months; it shall be the first month of the

Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, in the 10th day of this month they shall take them every man a lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an

Your lamb shall be without blemish, a male of the first year; ye shall take it out from the sheep, or from the goats.

And ye shall keep it up until the 1th day of the same month; and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it in

And they shall take of the blood, and strike it on the two side posts and on the upper door pest of the houses, wherein they shall est it. And they shall car the flesh in that night, roast with are, and unleavened bread; and with bitter berbs-they shall eat it. * * *

It is the Lord's passover For I will pass through the land of Egypt. this night, and will smite all the firstlorn in the land of Egypt, both man and beast; and against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment; I am the Lord. And the blood shall be to you for a token pon which the houses where ye are; and when see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt. rial; and ye shall keep it a feast to the Lord throughout your generations; ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance forever.

And it came to pass, that at midnight the Lord smote all the first born in the land of Egypt, from the first born of Pharaoh that sat on his throne unto the first born of the captive that was in the dungeon; and all the first born of cattle.

And Pharoah rose up in the night, he, and all his servants, and all the Egyptians; and there was a great cry in Egypt; for there was not a house where there was not one dead. And he called for Moses and Aaron by night, and said, rise up, and get you forth from among my people, both ye and the children of Israel; and go, serve the Lord, as ye have said.

Also take your flocks and your herds, as ye have said, and begone; and bless me also.

Now the solourning of the children of Israel, to dwelt in Egypt, was 430 years. And it came to pass at the end of the 430 ears, even the selfsame day it ant all the hosts of the Lord went out from he land of Egypt.

It is a night to be much observed unto the Lord for bringing them out from the land of Egypt; this is that night of the Lord to be observed of all the children of Israel in their

FICTION A PROPHECY OF FACT

Although the loss of a submarine is nothing new in the history of naval disasters, it is, nevertheless, a coincidence, that the first tragedy of this kind in our navy should have almost simultaneously with the death of Mor-gan Robertson, who described a similar ac-cident in one of his best stories of the sea. "Fifty Fathoms Down"—which is the exact depth at which the F-4 now lies! To his prophecy of the sinking of the Titanic, in his tale about the great transatiantic liner the "Titan," must now be added another borne out even more strikingly. Robertson may not have been a great artist, with Joseph Conrad. but he was undoubtedly one of the best writers of sea yarns aince William Clark Russell, and ranked with Frank T. Bullen, whose death preceded his own by but a few days; and he was too good a sailor, mechanic and inventor, and too conscientious a crafteman to write a story about submarine majoration without for story about submarine navigation without story about submarine havigation without fa-miliarizing himself with the technical details, so that "Fifty Fathoma Down" doubtless de-acribes with a great degree of accuracy just what transpires among the unhappy crew of a submarine disabled and cast away on the bed of the ocean. In Robertson's fiction, when the "Diver" had been rammed and sunk, the first thing her commander. the "Diver" had been rammed and sunk, the first thing her commander, Lieutenant Breen did was to fire out all the torpedoes in order to increase the buoyancy, and then one after another, the members of the crew were fired out through the tube, from a depth of 129 feet, to swim upward and find on the surface the floating torpedoes upon which they sustained themselves and saved their lives. Breen himself remained, for the last man had nobody to aboot him through the torpede tube, and the rest of the story, when the submarine had settled deeper into fifty fathoms of water, is settled deeper into fifty fathoms of water, is concerned with his blundering but successful efforts to make by artificial means sufficient oxygen to prolong his life until he was reaued, which he accomplished in a remarkable manner. According to Robertson, men may be shot like torpedoes through the submarine tube, and one floating torpedo is able to sup-

WHO SAID IT?

WHO SAID IT?

From the New York Sun.

The new enlarged edition of Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations" by our amiable Russian friend, Nathan Haskell Dole, doesn't contain, or if if does we have missed it, this remark:

"If I go, who stays?"

Who said it? It has a high Romen sound, but it is the sense of it that comes into the mind just now. If the Hon, Lindley Miller Garrison leaves the Cabinet, how much Cabinet will be left?

Foremoon and aftermoon and night-foremoon and aftermoon and night-foremoon and what! The empty song repeats itself. No more? Yea, this is lifet make this foremoon sublime. This afternoon a malm, this night a prayer-and time is conquered and thy crown is won.

GENERAL VON KLUCK'S BAD SUNDAY

A Frenchman's Whimsical, if Somewhat Prejudiced, Story of a Trifling Episode at Coulommiers-The Turning Point of the Great German Advance.

By PAUL BIRAULT

L the German army remains unknown to us. Official bulletins inform us of the movements of his troops, and tales of witnesses let one see the attitude of the officers who surround him; but the personage himself remains invisible behind a thick curtain of soldiers. Three or four Frenchmen have, however, succeeded in approaching this mysterious Von Kluck and seeing him in his own setting. Their testimony is worth collecting.

It is Saturday, September 5, at Coulommiers; the general, at this moment, believes that he has won, and, tired by the long effort accomplished since his victory of Charlerol, certain now that fuller triumph cannot escape him, resolves to give himself some hours of rest while putting off until tomorrow all serious affairs. Two officers came in the morning to prepare lodgings for the General Staff. They were preceded by an advance guard of Uhlans, and made their way to the Town Hall. "Somebody give us a horse and car riage at once," they said. Then, with the conveyance so requisitioned, they went across the town. At every cafe they balted while their men went down to the cellar and brought up all the baskets of champagne they could find. When the carriage was full they unloaded it in the courtyard of the house chosen for the general and set out on yet another expedition.

Behind their half-closed blinds the town folk follow these proceedings. Some of them even risk their skins outside. All at once loud cries resound; a bicycle squad precedes Death's Head Hussars who gallop in revolvers in their hands; infantry charge with fixed bayonets, and the whole horde cry at the top of their lungs: "The General Staff!" street!" All flee before them, and soon the entire street is mute and deserted. Ven Kluck makes his entry.

Von Kluck in Charming Humor This day he is in a charming humor. He enjoys reading the street signs of the little city-some of them bearing the picturesque names of Fishery street, Augel's court and others evoking the virtues of modern society: Broom avenue Co-operation Boulevard, Inthe heat of the autumn sun his auto gently rolls toward the centre of the town and the banks of the Grand Morin; the 'German chieftain is, doubtless, charmed by the sweetness and harmony of this landscape, and as nothing makes such inroads as the artistic emotions, immediately upon his arrival he orders something to eat. The cook, who arrived two hours before, had done what was necessary. He had emptied into a large basin three cans of French peas. "borrowed" at the neighboring grocery. To them he had added four pounds of lard and boiled the whole together over a hot fire. There was enough of it for the general and his two aides-de-camp. But the cook-artist had refined his menu and added to it sardines in oil, that Von Kluck prefers to every other gastronomic frivolity, on condition only that they be generously washed down with cham-

This light collation finished, Von Kluck summons the wife of the French gardener. the caretaker, to ask her: "Your masters are in the army, of course; have you any children? Five sons under the flag? Fine, I promise them my protection when they shall be incorporated in the German army." While thus diverting himself in light converse. Von Kluck has the servants make three beds in a little parlor on the ground floor for him and the two generals of his suite; then he orders that in all the other rooms a thick litter of straw be spread for h's escort. He looks the arrangements over himself and, satisfied, says: "This is the last stage; tomorrow we shall be leaving Coulommiers to enter Paris." Confronting the gardener's wife, erect, tall and strong, broad of shoulder, he towers with all his might and fixes the old peasant, who cannot hold back the tears when he says: "In eight days you will be a German!"

The General's Orchestra

And now before the general's house the musicians are lining up. Ven Kluck appears at the top of the garden steps and makes a sign. The concert begins. German officers, billeted on the townspeople, have "invited" all the Frenchmen they can find to come to the music. "You Kluck's orchestra," they add. "is composed of the best artists in Germany. No one beats them at playing 'Carmen' and 'The Mascot,' the general's favorite operas." "In two days, three at most," says a young officer of the General Staff. "they will be giving us a dance on the boulevards, in the arms of the shopgiris!"

And now the general gives the order to pillage. It is a methodical operation. locked doors are broken down, all shandoned houses are entered, and they carry away the

THE general who leads the active wing of | liner, clothing and provisions. Then the noncommissioned officers write on the doors with chalk, "There is nothing left to eat or drink," so as to save the rest any useless trouble. But already night is falling; the distant cannonading grows fainter; one by one the windows of the General Staff go dark. Von Kluck sends again to the Town Hall for 20 bottles of champagne, and the party is over.

Afraid of the Dark

But now Von Kluck knows fear, From those hostile shadows what dangers may surge! Rapidly his escort prepares the defense, and while the officers run to find candies the faithful Darmstadt rushes to the Mayor's office. "A thousand francs this minute!" he cries. "You will pay a thousand francs this minute" At the same time he selzes the Town Clerk, surrounds him with Uhlans and carries him off to the gas works. There they learn that the manager left 24 hours earlier-but put his fires out before he left! So the gas tanks are empty. Von Kluck orders that three hostages be taken; M. Delsol, the clerk; M. Bard, and M. Chatray, the District Attorney.

The last named General Darmstadt wants to arrest personally so as to have the pleasure of insulting him some more. After having had his say, Darmstadt turns to him, and pointing to his toque, says: "Take your helmet and follow me!" The hostages are locked up and warned that they will be shot at daybreak and that afterward a war tax of $20,000 will be levied on the town. So they are left to the guard of their sentinels. But the General Staff has lost time in these vain measures, its work is disorganized; by haphazard lighting the cards are badly read, and it is necessary to improvise a plan of defense while the English, pursuing their advantage, approach the town. At dawn they are less than a mile from the General Staff, which risks capture. One of the English sharpshooters, at 875 yards, picks off a German sentinel. Von Kluck decides to flee. Hesitating to have the hostages shot, he ends by releasing them. All the same, before leaving he has them backed against a wall in front of a firing squad. Twenty minutes they are kept there, anxiously waiting-perhaps to give the general revenge for the fear he himself has felt. Then they are set at liberty.

So runs the story of truthful witnesses of the stay of Von Kluck at Coulommiers. Perhaps it is only a trifling episode in the history of the war, yet who can say what influence a moment of disorder in the German General Staff had on the decisive hour? Perhaps the gasman played his part, too. in the great German defeat. And must he not have read with pride Joffre's general order before the Battle of the Marne: "So diers, the time of retreat has passed; the time of offense has come; you hold France's fate in your hands. We are attacking, Soldiers, advance as long as you can. If you can no longer advance, hold the position you have gained. If you can no longer hold it,

A SONG OF SHOPPING

Oh, glad am I with her to go Where apple blooms are dropping And merry birds are hopping on the leaf But it produces vertigo When she proposes shopping.

No shopping with my little love for me!

She lingers over fussy thing, All satiny and stlky-like; I really think she'd haggle half a day, he leaves a heap of mussy things. All mercerized and milky-like. And spends an hour to purchase appliqual

She lolters over hosiery In manner that is shocking It doesn't seem to bother her a bit. It shatters my composure-y To see so much of stocking: I feel as though I'm like to throw a fit!

She dotes on haberdashery wants to buy all of it. t last she gets a flaming necktie-one! She takes me to a hashery

(Alaz, the awful pall of it!)
And lunches me on cocoa and a bun! Oh, glad am I with her to go Where apple blooms are dropping And merry birds are hopping on the lest

But it produces vertigo When she proposes shopping. When she proposes shopping.

When she proposes shopping.

No shopping with my little love for mel

—Clinton Scallard, in Judge.

TOWN AND COUNTRY But, could you be content to bid adicu
To the dear playhouse and the players, too;
Sweet country seats are purchased everywhere.
With lands and gardens, at less price than here
You hire a darksome doghole by the year.
A small convenience decently propard.
A shallow well that rises in your yard.
That spreads his easy crystal streams around.
And waters all the pretty spot of ground.
There, love the fork, thy sarden cultivate,
And give thy frugal friends a Pythagorsus ireat.
The somewhal to be lord of some small ground.

"Tis somewhat to be lord of some small ground in which a limit may, at beat, form around.

—Juvensi (translated by John Drystell.