

Evening Illustrated Ledger

THURSDAY

April 1, 1915

PERSONS AND SCENES THAT FIGURE IN THE DAY'S NEWS AS RECORDED BY THE PHOTOGRAPHER

CHESTER'S EVANGELIST AND CHOIR LEADER IN ACTION
The pictures above, to right and left, show the Rev. William P. Nicholson in characteristic attitudes as he illustrates his points in the big tabernacle built for him at Chester. In the centre is J. Raymond Hemminger, who is Mr. Nicholson's "Rodey," as he directs the choir of 500 voices. The series of meetings began Sunday and are attracting immense crowds.

TRAINED FEMININE ATHLETES
Who teach the school children of the city how to play, engaging in their own tug-of-war at Athletic Centre, 26th and Jefferson streets.

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD GIRL PRODIGY
Winifred Buckville Stoner, of Pittsburgh, is shown here with her mother, who taught her to read, write, and play the piano. She is a wonder of attention and memory.

FIRST RIVER PLUNGE OF THE SEASON
John Ingham and Robert J. Davis, of the Crescent Boat Club, could not be restrained even by a sudden descent of the mercury. They declared the chilly water was "getting right."

HAVE YOU TRIED THE SKELETON TANGO?
Miss Anna Mellinger, instructor in the Sherwood School, is shown here performing it at the athletic meet of the physical culture teachers employed to preside over the playgrounds supervised by the Board of Recreation.