HOW TO CARE FOR HORSES

By JOSEPH WILLIAMS

Treep 109.
The origin of horses is unknown; but they were used in Empt more than 1500 years before Christ, and they have ever been the great helper of mankind, both in Every scout should treat this animal ght. Suppose a scout were walking long the street on a rainy day and saw a horse standing without a blanket. A scout should cover him with a blanket. If all you scouts would do this the horses would be very glad, because they are worked very hard and sometimes don't set anything to eat. Now, just think, boys, if you had to draw a wagon around all day and then did not get any supper, how would you feel? I would feel like fighting. But the poor-horse cannot talk. so therefore he can't do anything.

Now, as you're all studying first aid, or have studied it, it would be a good thing to know something about a horse. I will tell you all how to treat the different parts of a horse in case of injury. I'm no horse doctor, but just a plain scout. I have noticed some very well-kept horses. One morning as I was passing a table. One morning as I was passing a stable which is owned by Thomas Martindale I noticed how the horses are kept. The first thing in the morning I saw the men cleaning the horses. At noon I passed again and saw the same horses coming in for the day. Now, if all the men would treat their horses like that, the would be willing to work. Don't (Scout Williams will describe how to treat injuries of the various parts of the horse in next Friday's Evening Lepoer. The article will be illustrated with a diagram drawn by him.)

Parents' Society for Troop 33

A parents' society was formed at a meeting of Troop 33 (Scoutmaster George Senn) Monday night, at which many fathers and mothers promised to help the troop. Scoutmaster Bolston, of Troop 12, was the speaker for the evening. The scouts staged a scene showing activities of camp life, such as inspection, signaling and first aid. Mr. Jacobus, principal of the Athlette Borresties Control of the Athlette Control of the Athlette Borresties of the Athletic Recreation Centre, began a series of first aid lectures on last meeting night, his subject being muscles, bones, blood and wounds. Rosen won a clean-liness contest, a penknife being the prize. Scout Kalowsky gave an expert exhibition Women's Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, declared that the statute books of the State would be incomplete until there was a law on them prohibiting the sale of these pets, whose youthful owners love them not wisely but too well.

"If mothers must give their babies rabbits, ducks and chickens to play with at Eastertime," she continued, "it would mals humanely killed and then stuffed. Pets are given to children so that they man fondle and caress them. The result is that they are often loved to death be-fere the day is over."
