

LOOK FOR THREE BIG "C'S" IN MEN'S NEW FASHIONS

Comfort, Convenience and Common Sense to Be Guiding Stars in Shaping My Lord's Attire During Hot Summer Season.

By W. HANCOCK PAYNE
The season of country and woodland strolls, of motoring tours, of fishing expeditions, of golf, of tennis, yachting and camping (not forgetting the stern demand of business in town during the heat of summer), is now at our threshold, bringing to men as well as to the fairest of the species the age-old question of what to wear and how to wear it.

Comfort, convenience and common sense is the keynote that will govern correct dress, both for the business man and the man seeking out of door recreation during the spring and summer now at hand. There is no doubt that the present tendency for men of all ages is towards youthful lines, and the hot season will find precisely the same style of suit on almost every man who is above 40 as will be seen upon men under 30. The time is past, and this season emphasizes it with more sharpness than ever before, when men beyond 50 sets, figuratively speaking, in the chimney corner with a crutch in one hand and a patent medicine brochure in the other.

CLOTHES AS EMANCIPATOR.
Nothing emphasizes this more decisively or sharply than the clothes business men are wearing. This is because American styles for American men have become a fact. Our designers, during the past year, have attained pre-eminence over the fashion authorities of Europe.

In the smartness of the garments they have created and in the artistic ideas of grace and harmony in the lines of men's clothing they have won conspicuous success. Since the beginning of the European war the prestige of the American designer and tailor, not only in New York and in Philadelphia but in Chicago as well, has gained an ascendancy which is freely predicted will never again be taken from them.

Summer clothing will be absolutely without padding of any kind. The fronts and the shoulders are entirely without stiffening and lining is often altogether omitted and when used the coat is either quarter or half lined. Trousers also are snug fitting and the legs are narrower than usual, being 1 1/2 to 2 inches at the knee and 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 inches at the ankle.

GODS OF HABERDASHERYDOM DEFY PARCHING RAYS OF SUN

It's going to be a glorious, cool summer for men this year, thanks to the generosity of the gods of haberdasherydom. Comfort, ease and common sense are the characteristic traits of the hot-weather line in hats, collars, shirts, socks and shoes. No more grunting under the weight of a six-ply straw hat that towers to heaven and beyond. No more day-after-day laundry bills that show a wide lapel. On the one-button sack coat the lapels roll softly to the button, from which the skirt of the coat curves in a most graceful cutaway, making an effect that is the letter X. Pockets have more significance than usual. Patch pockets will be in high light texture, light color and sensible lines have been decreed for the summer. Beau Brummel. And from the descriptions given by leading haberdashers, picture-queerness will not be found wanting in this summer arrangement of things. In fact, the samples seen in the first shipments of apparel to reach this city are decidedly attractive.

Undoubtedly the feature that will appeal most to men of all ages and classes is that low, soft collars will be in vogue. It is predicted that the low, English-round, unstarched collars will be worn even more than the stiff collars this year. This is the first time that the soft collar has given promise of superseding the uncomfortable but more dressy starched article. Beside the rounded front, which meets close at the top and then separates in graceful curves into a fairly large tie-space at the bottom, the long, pointed tip collars will also be popular. These too will be worn in the soft style.

BOW TIES "COME BACK."
After a lapse of years bow-ties have finally come into their own. "Bow-ties" will flap under nearly every chin. These ties will be seen in light silk colors, generally with diagonal of "De Joinville" cross stripes. Although of lighter texture, the scarfs will not be cut on the bias, thus making a larger knot. Four-inches will also be "en regle." They will be in more modest colors in patterns,

RIGGS BANK FIGHT TO BE BITTER ONE

Question of Veracity Involved in Suit Against Treasury Officials.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The issue of veracity today was clearly drawn between the Riggs National Bank and Comptroller of the Currency Williams as a result of the suit to restrain the Treasury officials from interfering with the affairs of the bank.

In their statement, replying to the Comptroller's allegations of irregularities charged against the bank officials, the latter declare the Comptroller did not state "the whole truth" with regard to certain brokerage transactions.

"Another example of the Comptroller's effort to mislead the public," the statement reads, "can be found in his statement that the stock brokerage business which certain of the officers of the bank formerly conducted in their individual capacities has been terminated and women to ruin in speculation."

"The Comptroller knows, or at least ought to know, that such a charge is utterly unfounded."

The bank also points to Mr. Williams' intimation that the Department of Justice had had the affairs of the bank under consideration for some time, and then cites the statement, issued by the department, asserting that the matter had not been before it for official consideration until the beginning of the suit.

Louis D. Brandeis, of Boston, who has been retained as special counsel for the defense in the injunction suit, and officials of the Department of Justice and Treasury were busy preparing their reply to the bank which, under the order of the court, must be answered on Friday.

Punished for Annoying Children

George Eriemair, 32 years old, 203 North Front street, was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction today on the accusation of John Campbell, of 103 New Market street, and Police Officer Scott, of the Front and Market streets, that he was annoying children. Scott testified that he had arrested the man about two years ago on the same charge.

KITTY'S BROWN EYES COST ADMIRER $200

Hungarian Drink Also Inspired Him to Part With Coin.

Meggyelki caused it—meggyelki and a pair of sparkling brown eyes. Meggyelki is a Hungarian drink and the eyes belong to Kitty Martin, who, they say, was born near Belgrade, Servia, in spite of her name.

That is why Gabor Kish, 32 years old, was held in jail for further hearing by Magistrate Emely in the Front and Master streets police station today, and Joseph Burnos, of 807 North Randolph street, is bemoaning the loss of his dead wife's insurance money. Kitty has it, he says, and Kitty—she is gone, she and her pretty brown eyes.

Burnos met Kitty, the story runs, at a Hungarian war relief ball at the Mercantile Hall, Franklin and Poplar streets, March 24. Their eyes met, she smiled and Burnos surrendered. They danced. Between dances, as they slipped the sweet meggyelki, Burnos told Kitty of the $1000 he had, his dead wife's insurance money. Kitty's bright eyes grew brighter and on the way home she suggested that he buy the "International Servian" restaurant, at 807 North 3d street, which she and Gabor Kish were conducting. Gabor, she said, would sell it. She would help Burnos run it.

Burnos called on a day arranged and found the little cafe crowded to the doors. Gabor and Kitty and Burnos, drinking meggyelki at a corner table, arranged the sale and Burnos paid $200 for the place. Then he drank more meggyelki and became sleepy. Kitty offered to hold his pocketbook while he slept and he gave it to her, he said, with $700 in it—his wife's insurance money.

When Burnos awoke the place was dark, the shades drawn. He called for Kitty, but she was gone. So was Gabor. He opened the restaurant for the large crowds he expected, but no one came. The next day his receipts were $3.15. He waited for Kitty to return. He grew excited and smoked 15 packages of Hungarian cigarettes a day. Monday afternoon he gave up in despair and swore out warrants for Gabor Kish and Kitty. Gabor was arrested by Detectives Dautman and Bender yesterday, but Kitty—she is gone, with her pretty brown eyes.

Farm Boy Causes Panic

Joseph Boucher, a 19-year-old farm boy from Abington, will be turned over to Police Surgeon John Wanamaker, 3d, today for observation. The youth caused a panic at 8th and Market streets last night when he suddenly drew a revolver and began firing. Two of the bullets ruined a $50 plate glass window in a department store. When he was arraigned in the Night Court, Boucher said the only explanation he could make for trying to shoot up the city was that he had been drinking.

Facts Versus Fallacies. FACT is a real state of things. FALLACY is an apparently genuine but really illogical statement or argument. THAT Prohibition is a FALLACY, inasmuch as it does not prohibit, is found in the FACTS given by the United States Internal Revenue Department. IN 1907 there were 35,000,000 people living under "dry" laws, and in the year ending June 30, 1907, there were produced 58,622,002 barrels of fermented liquors (31 gallons to the barrel), and 174,712,218 gallons of distilled spirits. IN 1914 there were 48,000,000 people living under "dry" laws, yet there was an increase in production of alcoholic drinks. For the year ending June 30, 1914, there were produced 66,187,473 barrels of fermented liquors (31 gallons to the barrel) and 185,353,383 gallons of distilled spirits. FROM the above FACTS one conclusion is manifest: The greater the growth of prohibition legislation the greater the increase, per capita, in the consumption of alcoholic beverages. PUT in terser form: The more Prohibition, the more liquor consumed. The United States Government, by its figures, vouches for the above statement. And with 48,000,000 persons living under prohibition legislation, a greater quantity of alcoholic beverages was consumed last year per person than ever before in this country's history. IT is a FALLACY to suppose that Prohibition keeps men from indulging in alcoholic stimulants. It is a FACT—vouched for by the United States Government—that Prohibition prevents only the legalized and regulated sale of liquor!
