

BOOKWORM, LOOSE IN FREE LIBRARY, TELLS WHY IT'S A GRAVEYARD

Gone Are the Days of Sir George Tressady, of Marie Corelli's Works, but "Elektra," Written B. C., Still Wanted.

Fussy-looking around the shelves of the Free Library among the lost souls looking for "something nice to read," a pleasant old man expressed himself today with a sarcasm that was all the more cutting because it was calm.

"This is a graveyard of elevations," he said. "Look at that shelf. Eleven copies of 'Sir George Tressady,' by Mrs. Humphrey Ward. Nobody's taken one of 'em out for six weeks. I know, because I've counted 'em. Humph! Once there was such a rush they had to get 11 copies and you had to get here early and grab to get one at that."

"I never can get what I want—the real books—because they're always out and there's only one copy of 'em. I've been trying to get Murray's translation of the 'Elektra' of Euripides. Always out, and there's a rush for it. Ha, ha. And Mrs. Hump Ward's 11 Tressadys are rotting there in a row."

"Look at those Marie Corellis. Everything in stock from 'Master Christian' to 'Murder of Delicieux.' Taking up good space now. I remember when the girls stood on the front doorstep waiting for the library to open so they could snatch for 'em."

"A man can stand here and watch the people and the books and find out what folks are thinking about in the world. Look at this man Bernard Shaw. I'm against him. Know why? Well, look, here's the shelf for his plays. Every volume of 'em stands out like a soldier. And what is that one that is always in 'Pleasant Plays.' Nobody ever takes that out. See? They don't want anything pleasant from Shaw. They only want his unpleasant stuff. That is, they want everything he written except one book."

"There's only one man that's been writing more than 10 years who is still being read. You hardly ever can get a book of his out. That's Joseph Conrad. See? On this shelf there's a straight jump from Connelly to Cooper. Not one in. Great, big, cut reputation, and he never writes on sex. That's good news to me. 'Sir George Tressady.' Hardly a word on sex, hardly any advertisement, and yet the people keep on snatching up his books. Good sign, isn't it?"

"And—oh, here's a joke! Look at Henry James. A whole shelf and a half of him. Going to rot there. Great, isn't it? Wait! I want to run across and see if that 'Euripides' has come in by any chance while I've been talking."

Church Marks 25th Anniversary The 25th anniversary of the founding of the Catholic Church of St. Bonaventura, 9th and Cambria streets, and the 25th anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. Hubert Himmelsok, attracted a large audience to the church yesterday morning. Archbishop Prendergast presided at the Pontifical Mass, which was celebrated by Bishop McCort. The Rev. Henry Stommel preached the sermon.
