

FIRE RAZES TURN HALL AFTER EMMA GOLDMAN ATTACK ON SUNDAY

Blaze Sweeps Structure Following Anarchist Leader's Harangue Against Evangelist and Supporters of Campaign.

From a Staff Correspondent. PATERSON, N. J., April 20.—"It is God's judgment,"

So say the ministers of this city today as they look over the ruins of Turn Hall, where Emma Goldman, high priestess of anarchy, last night ridiculed "Billy" Sunday and blasphemed God.

Not more than an hour after the hall had been emptied of its 100 anarchists, who listened to Miss Goldman's sacrilegious utterances. Turn Hall was destroyed by fire. This morning nothing remains to mark its place in the history of restless Paterson except charred timbers and blackened brick.

Turn Hall, temple of I. W. W. and anarchist propaganda, was razed to the ground shortly after midnight. Not a stone of the great building in which "Fat" Quinlan, William Sumner Boyd (both now in prison for leading to riot), Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Carlo Tresca and Emma Goldman have stirred the mill people of the city on many memorable occasions, remains.

The loss in the destruction of the building is estimated at from $40,000 to $50,000. The police are investigating the fire. The anarchists openly declare it was supporters of the Sunday campaign who were responsible for the conflagration, one of their number having purposely dropped a lit cigarette upon the stage while Emma Goldman was venting her blasphemous.

On the other hand, ministers and prominent laymen are of the opinion that the fire was the result of a judgment from God that the hall should have been destroyed. Not since the famous Paterson fire a few years ago has this city known such a conflagration.

Emma Goldman finished her address on "The Failure of Christianity," and her vehement attacks upon Sunday shortly before 11 o'clock. It was after 12 o'clock that Turn Hall, which had been packed with anarchists from everywhere within 50 miles of New York, was emptied of them, and hundreds of mid-workers had applied Emma Goldman's sacrilegious speech.

At midnight there was no hope of saving the building. Flames were pouring from the roof and spreading in and the countryside for miles around, was bright as day with the reflection of the fire. There were no injuries, although the firemen had to fight hard to prevent the spread of the fire to the wooden tenements and business houses.

"It is God's judgment," say the Christians of the city, and they point for confirmation to the fact that Turn Hall, the heart of labor unrest and anarchy for years, the hall from which Bresci went forth to assassinate King Humbert, has been burned down for the fourth time. The first fire was in 1870, the second in 1880, the third in 1890.

Later it was used as a place for I. W. W. meetings during the famous silk strike of two years ago. It was then that such inflammatory speeches were made against the State and the capitalists that Mayor McErlane ordered Chief of Police Blinson to close it.

The inside story of "Ma's" disappointment at Sunday's New York trip leaked out today. It is the sad tale of a chauffeur who did not know Gotham. Although Mrs. Brady will not admit it, she was taking "Billy" out to see the city. Her father and was side-tracked at Mrs. Finlay Shepard's (former Helen Gould's) place. The evangelist did not see the oil king, and what was worse, he did not get back to the Polo Grounds in time to toss out the first ball in the Philadelphia-Giants' battle, and all because of the chauffeur who did not know New York. That chauffeur was the exclusive property of Mrs. Garrett A. Hobart, widow of the Vice President of the United States under McKinley.

"Ma" was really mad and angry and peevish at the Polo Grounds yesterday because her plans had gone awry. The fact that she wanted to meet John D. Rockefeller had been buzzing in her ear for a long time.

Girl Locked Out on Roof. Wounded by the exertions of job-hunting in New York, and almost overcome by the heat, Miss Sally Manners went up to the roof of her rooming house for a breath of air. She fell asleep and a two-careful caretaker locked the trap door. Miss Manners was awakened by a storm which had come on, and, seeking refuge, entered the house of Richard Stanton, 1200 Locust avenue. Her adventures there, and later, are told in masterly fashion by Louis Joseph Vance in his great novel, "An Outlander," which begins in the EVENING LEADER next Saturday.

CRACKSMEN, TRAPPED, FIGHT POLICE IN VAIN

Two Young Men, Caught in Building, Confess to Many Robberies in Bell Stores.

Two youths, who put up a fight when the police surrounded them after they had cracked a safe in a store of the James Bell Company, 239 Germantown avenue, early today, confessed, according to the police, to be members of a band which has been confining its efforts solely to stores of this company for some time. The prisoners, who were taken to city hall for a hearing this morning, described themselves as Henry Miller, 21 years old, 231 Haverly avenue, and Harry Rawson, 23 years old, of 251 Wendley street.

They were held without bail for court by Magistrate Benton at Central station. The young burglars had climbed over the back of a safe on the first floor of the store, and made so much noise tinkering with it that neighbors summoned Police-men Griley, of the Germantown avenue and Locomotion street police station. When the bluecoat arrived at the store he found the back door forced and waited for reinforcements. A pair of policemen arrived in response to his summons, and, after forcing open the building, they found the ransacked safe.

The safe had been rifled of $52 in cash and $15 in stamps, but there was no sign of the robbers on the first floor. The police then searched the upper story, where they found the two youths, who were taken to city hall for a hearing this morning. The youths were taken to city hall for a hearing this morning. CONFESSES ROBBERIES ON WHOLESALE SCALE

Arrest to Stop Raids that Terrorized Logan All Winter, Say Police.

In the arrest of Preston Yates, who roomed in a house at 290 North Park avenue, Special Police-men Miller and Richardson believe they have ended the epidemic of robberies that has terrorized residents of Logan during the winter. More than $500 worth of jewelry and other valuables were stolen from householders in that section, and the prisoner volunteered to take the police through the district today in an automobile and point out the homes he robbed. Yates, a carpenter, who turned housebreaker when he escaped arrest for his first theft and subsequently ransacked more than a score of houses.

Yates is in jail at City Hall. He was arrested last week and the police found about a half-dozen pawn tickets in his room at the Park avenue address. When he was confronted with this evidence, he confessed, but said he was responsible only for the entries made with a cold chisel. Yates' method, according to the police, was to force his way into an unoccupied house and climb to nearby residences by way of porch roofs. The other robberies in the section are believed to have been the work of "Calvary," who escaped from the Eastern Penitentiary a short time ago and is still at large. Fabry was serving a seven-year sentence.

POLICE CHRONICLES

When Adam Sheering saw five healthy-looking shad lying in the wagon of a huckster today he happened to remember that the fishing season had opened. He was also aware of the fact that he had no fish or line nor the fare to the fishing banks. The shad-looking shad was great glistening in the sunlight, and he carried all five away on his shoulders, the police say. Shortly after the fish had disappeared from Royal, their owner, of 201 North 13th street, told Sergeant Shad, of the Front and Master streets station. Now Sergeant Shad has five little shad of his own at home and they are all live wires, so he readily assigned a circuitous trail. Shad found that the five shad stolen by Sheering had been left in a stable. Shad, the practical fisher, that the shad hypnotized him with their beautiful scales, the Judge said that was entirely too fishy, and added:

"The intentions of Bill Bluffins are good, but they often bring him sad results. Bill concluded that the patients in St. Mary's Hospital were very down-hearted and he sought to cheer them up. There's nothing like music. Bill concluded, to make you happy, so he sang for several hours; pausing only very rarely to get a breath. Francis Scully, who looks after the needs of the hospital patients, hurried for the noise for a long time. Finally he found Bill wedged in a doorway singing everything from the scotch from "Lucia" to the "Annie" at times he acts as a horn orchestra and imagined he was a cornet fute, violin and trombone. This combination did not make a favor-

GIRL ARTIST FOUND IN BURGLAR SEARCH

Crowd of Mistaken Policemen, All Bury and Accompanied by Revolvers, Visit Studio.

Miss Leah Ramsey, a youthful and attractive artist, who has a studio on the top floor of the Play and Players' Club building, 43 South 13th street, has had the "thrill of her life."

"How would you like to be busily engaged in painting and touching a fine new 'Colombus' costume, in which you have to appear shortly before the footlights. And be started by a noise at your studio window, then turn around and stare into the muzzle of a revolver? That was the experience of this young woman last night and, to make matters worse, behind the revolver was a burly policeman and behind him were two more fully armed, also with their revolvers.

"Where is he?" the first bluecoat whispered, peering into the room. "Where is who?" the young woman demanded. "And what are you staring at? Get out of here into my studio for."

"Where is he?" the second policeman asked. "Yes, where is he?" echoed the third. "I don't know what you are talking about," Miss Ramsey replied, "but if you are crazy, please go away."

"There is a burglar in here and we have to search for him," the policeman said. "He was heard walking over the roof of this building next door and seen climbing into this window."

Miss Leah Ramsey remembered something and she laughed and laughed, much to the mortification of the policeman. Finally she explained that earlier in the evening a friend, Samuel McCoy, of 224 Chestnut street, had dropped in to see her, and during the course of his visit unconsciously had clambered out of her studio window to get a breath of fresh air.

The policeman looked sheepish, begged the young woman's pardon for the intrusion and withdrew, taking with them and leaving other policemen, who had surrounded the building and were anxiously waiting for the "burglar" to make a break for liberty.

When they had departed Miss Ramsey switched on the lights, locked the studio for the night and adjourned to her home at 15 South 13th street, where she resumed her work on the costume in peace and quiet.

"La Pomme," in which the costume will be seen, is an English pantomime, written by Mitchell C. Buck, of this city, and will be presented by a group of young artists recently graduated from the Academy of the Fine Arts. The performance will be under the direction of Miss Ella Neely, Miss Ramsey's studio partner, who has been acting as the director of Stanley Muschamp. It will be followed by the presentation of Gilbert and Sullivan's comic opera, "Pat-a-Cake," which will be directed by Mrs. Helen Palanski Innes.

ROBERT A. BALFOUR'S ESTATE TO FAMILY

Financier's Will Indicates Property Worth $122,000, But Aggregate Will Be Greater.

Robert A. Balfour, prominent Philadelphia financier, who died February 11, left an estate designated in the petition accompanying his will as $100,000 and upwards in personal property and realty. "£2,000," although appraisal of the estate will be far in excess of the aggregate amount given.

His will has been admitted to probate and letters testamentary granted to the widow, Louisa Balfour, and a son, Alexander Balfour.

The decedent was regarded as the wealthiest stockholder in the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company. He was a member of the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern Penitentiary at the time of his death.

The will was executed October 11, 1914, and provides for the erection of a modest mausoleum in the Calvary Protestant Episcopal Cemetery, Roxbury, Lancaster County, Pa. All household effects, silverware, horses, carriages and automobiles are left to the widow.

The residue of the estate is to be held in trust and from the income $500 a year is to be paid to a sister-in-law, Isabella Topley, during her life. The son is to receive $200 a year during his life or until the death of his mother. The remainder of the income is to go to the widow and at her death the principal reverts to the son.

Ellen Mansfield, late of 212 North Franklin street, left her entire $250,000 estate to St. Joseph's College. Others which probated today include those of Joseph Taggart, who left $14,000; Catherine Hearty, $4,000; Millard F. Hardman, $2,000.

FOREST FIRES MENACE MAIN LINE HOMES

Valuable Residences in Peril, and Saved Only by Zealous Work of Volunteers.

Clouds of smoke hung over many parts of the Chester Valley, today, proving the assertion of forest fire fighters that all the fires were out was exaggerated, but there is no immediate danger of great country houses in that section being wiped out, which was a real menace last night.

The condition is general in many parts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and is caused not only by the lack of rain, but by the exceptional spring, the absence of the usual floods having aggravated the excessive dryness of all wooded districts.

Fires in Montgomery County were contained by the flames. The fire, which extended from Mt. Pleasant, back of Stratford, along Chester Valley to North Wayne, was fought by many scores of volunteer fire fighters, who declared this morning that the flames were well under control.

The flames came within 50 feet of the residence of Mrs. Frank Shoemaker before they were stopped. Mr. Shoemaker is on a trip to the Pacific coast, and Mrs. Shoemaker was home with her two young children, Mabel, 3 years old, and John, 2. She helped her servants in the fight against the flames, but the volunteer firemen turned the tide.

At the home of William Wood Supple the horses were taken from the stables and hitched to plows late last night with the hope that the furrows would prevent the flames from reaching the house, and this work was successful.

The home of T. Truxton Hare, former University of Pennsylvania football star, at Radnor, was in danger for a time.

John saved the buildings of Juniata College at Huntingdon, Pa. Eleven fires swept the woods between Williamsport and State College.

WILL OF SARAH E. KERR WILL BE ADMITTED TO PROBATE

Register Sheehan Refuses to Sustain Kin's Objections. The will made by Sarah E. Kerr six days before her death, at 455 Parrish street, last December 11, is to be admitted to probate, as a result of an opinion given by Register of Wills Sheehan, Caveat proceedings to prevent probating of the testamentary instrument were dismissed.

Mrs. Kerr, who was advanced in years, left her entire estate of several thousand dollars to a friend, Clara E. Detwiler. A number of second cousins instituted a caveat alleging that the testatrix did not possess sufficient mental capacity to execute a will and that undue influence had been exerted upon her.

The Register of Wills, in his opinion, contended that unless some natural responsibility for testamentary consideration, such as dependent kindred, be ignored the testatrix's sense of values must be respected in the absence of clear affirmative proof of mental impairment.

THE REV. L. D. RHODES RETURNED TO CHARGE

Yardley Church Head Reinstated on Probation Following Protests.

Friends of the Rev. Lloyd Dexter Rhodes, a young clergyman who was recently removed from his position as minister-in-charge of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Yardley, by Bishop Rhinelander, are overjoyed because he has been returned to his charge. Mr. Rhodes was notified in March that he would be free from duty on April 1, and would be given two months' holiday, with pay, during which time he was to look for other employment. The action by the bishop in dismissing him, it is said, grew out of a controversy which was said to be the upshot of the dissent between Bishop Rhinelander's friends and the Rev. George Chalmers Richmond, rector of St. John's Church, this city.

Members of the parish at Yardley regretted exceedingly the loss of the Rev. Mr. Rhodes, as he had worked hard in the small church and had become popular with the Yardley residents as well as with his parish. However, since a portion of the minister's salary was paid by the Diocese of Pennsylvania, there was nothing to do at that time but abide by the bishop's orders.

When protestations and petitions proved of no avail, the members who favored the young minister finally obtained a sufficient number of resignations to insure the amount of his salary without the aid of the diocese. This placed the parish in a more independent position, and within two weeks after the Rev. Mr. Rhodes' departure with the parish was severed by Bishop Rhinelander's decree, he received a call from the vestry to return as minister-in-charge.

Upon notification of this action by the church, the bishop placed the Rev. Mr. Rhodes back in his position on 30 days' probation, and it is expected that he will be given every means possible to retain the position. If he fails to do this, many of the members of the vestry intend to use every means possible to retain the Rev. Mr. Rhodes as the head of the flock.

The Rev. Mr. Rhodes and the Rev. Dr. W. C. Emhardt, rector of St. Luke's Church at Scottown, who was his ecclesiastical superior and acted as the bishop's emissary in the controversy, are in the city today attending an Episcopal convocation, and it is expected that a cordial understanding will be reached between the parties concerned and the matter brought to a head before they return to their charges.

The salary of the minister of St. Andrew's Church has been fixed at $1000. Of this amount $500 had been paid in the past by the congregation, the remainder being supplied by the Diocese of Pennsylvania, which at the recent meeting of the vestry, in which the matter was discussed, the additional $500 was over-subscribed.

The controversy which resulted in Bishop Rhinelander dismissing Mr. Rhodes several weeks ago arose with the vestry of an acolyte of the Church of the Annunciation, 12th and Diamond streets. Following the interception of this letter, which later fell into the hands of the bishop, the notice was given Mr. Rhodes that his services would not be required at Yardley after April 1.

CATLIN BILL RESISTS ATTACK

Effort to Debar Miners From Compensation Act Defeated. HARRISBURG, Pa., April 20.—By a vote of 21 to 10, the amendments made by the Mines and Mining Committee in the Catlin bill were defeated by the Senate today, which considered the measure in Committee of the Whole. The amendments drafted by Senator From the committee would have denied the thousands of anthracite coal workers the benefits of the workmen's compensation bill, expected to be passed by the present Legislature.

"PROVE YOUR CHARGE" BARNES' CHALLENGE

Continued from Page One. this statement," was the ringing and dramatic challenge of Barnes' counsel. Roosevelt accepted the issue. "This is a fight for decent government," related the colonel's lawyer. "The attack was not made against an individual, but against the system," he said. Roosevelt listened intently to his critic. When his alleged libelous statement was read by William M. Ivins, Barnes' counsel, in his opening speech, Roosevelt bobbed his head continuously in emphatic approval.

"A money verdict on one side or the other is inconsequential as compared with the vital proposition which comes before every man woman and child in the state as to whether good government shall exist," said Roosevelt's attorney, John W. McGrath.

In his address to the jury instilled into the minds of the jurors the fact that the case was simply one of libel, and said the personality of the litigants must be disregarded in the making up of the verdict.

Roosevelt's private secretary was the first witness called by Barnes to prove the distribution of Roosevelt's statement to newspaper reporters at Oyster Bay. McGrath freely told of the distribution of statements.

Roosevelt nodded his head affirmatively when Justice Andrews asked if the facts were all conceded.

The defense also consented to admission of the scores of newspaper quotations containing the alleged libelous statement. The defense also agreed that the statement was circulated among nearly 80,000 persons.

Plaintiff then rested. William H. Van Benschoten, of New York, opened for Colonel Roosevelt. "It is not a political suit," he said. "It is a case of man to man." He asserted that the plaintiff denied the right of Roosevelt to fight for decent government. The real heart of the case is the issue of clean and decent government against partisan boss and machine rule, he declared.
