IN SPITE of the warm weather, the last opera of the season brought one of the most brilliant houses of the whole year. And as usual the grand tier was a kaleidoscope of color.

One of the most striking gowns worn was that of Mrs. George Willing. It was fashioned of bright green damask chiton velvet and was relieved at the neck with white lace and tulle, while the tiny sleeves were made of tulle also. The skirt was quite full and was finished with a semi-train.

Mrs. George Quintard Horwitz selected a stunning gown of black sequins and tulle. The skirt was rather short and made very full and the sleeves and upper part of the bodice were formed of bands of the jet.

A dainty frock of palest blue tulle was worn by Miss Hope Truxton Beale. It was short waisted and the full skirt was edged with double pinked ruffles. Tiny roses were used on the corsage.

Mrs. Thomas Ridgway, who was in the Stotesbury box, also was gowned in white. The lines were rather plain, which style so well suits Mrs. Ridgway's great beauty.

At the Army and Navy Relief dance at Marlborough on Tuesday evening some particularly beautiful spring dance frocks were worn, among them a white satin gown worn by Mrs. Harry K. Cortright, of Chestnut Hill. The skirt was made full and the bodice, almost entirely of white chiffon, was sleeveless and had a girle of black velvet. Black diamonds completed this effective costume and a diamond necklace and hair comb added a touch of elegance.

Mrs. Churchill Williams wore a charming creation of two-toned tulle in gold and green. The skirt was made very full and scalloped around the edge. Chiffon, the same shade as used on the bodice and formed the flowing sleeves.

Another dainty frock worn by Mrs. J. Nelson Curran. It consisted of pale peach pink tulle made with the conventional full skirt, which style is particularly becoming to the wearer. The bodice, which was made of soft lace, was sleeveless.

Mrs. Alexander W. Winter, Jr., also wore pink tulle, which was made in a girlish fashion. Perhaps the handsomest gown was worn by Miss Julia Lawrie, which was entirely of silk velvet stamped with a doll blue figure. Doll blue net was used over the shoulders and wide silver lace formed a girle. Exquisite pink ribbons caught up the skirt at one side.
