"POP" CONCERT MUSIC HAD TO COAX CROWD TO TRY SMOKES AND DRINKS

"Classical" Tradition Hung Heavy Over the Audience in the Academy Until Stokowski Got the Peer Gynt Elves and Gnomes Jumping Off the End of His Magical Baton.

Something of what popular concerts will be when the people get trained in the way of them, with one every night for the next two weeks, could be fairly well guessed at the Academy of music last night, when Leopold Stokowski, waving his arms on high, brought "The Star Spangled Banner" out of the Philadelphia Orchestra in a way that made memories of Sousa seem academic and spineless.

The people just jumped up and cheered and upped the lemonade tumbler and ginger ale bottles on the tables with which the band-leaved parrot was filled, because they'd never heard "The Star Spangled Banner" played that way, and then the men lit up their cigars and sat back to dream through the ravishing "Blue Danube" of youth and first love again.

All that was "popular" enough, but it would be much more popular if everybody could smoke and drink, themselves, instead of watching those at the 75-cent-a-seat parquets do it for them. But it was a great start in the right direction.

The audience was a long time waking up in the fact that it was supposed to have a good time instead of just listen to good music. There were the tables and the waters ready for orders, yet nobody ordered anything for upward of an hour, and only a very few men seemed to have any remedy to spruce up their looks.

Even the waiters felt awed by the terrible tradition of "classical music" hovering over like home of the muses. They crouched like gnomes on the floor and only dared to speak in a hushed, hushed, hushed tone.

There were some people that simply refused to believe the advice the music was constantly giving; namely, that tonight the main point was sandwiches and lemonade and cigarettes and small talk, and that music came second as a mere accompaniment to these more fundamental needs.

HOVERTER TO BARE SECRETS OF SCHAEFFERSTOWN BANK

Will Tell Grand Jury Story of Misapplication of Funds.

LEBANON, Pa., May 4.—Arthur J. Hovertor, the young life insurance agent who is charged with having aided the late Alvin Binzer, as cashier of the First National Bank of Schaefferstown, in the misapplication of more than $100,000 of the bank's funds, was taken to Sunbury today to appear before the Grand Jury for the United States Court of the Middle District.

Hovertor has already pleaded guilty to the offense of which he is charged, and it is expected here that he will lay bare before the Grand Jury all of his transactions with Cashier Binzer, whose suicide on February 4 last led to the discovery that the bank had been looted of upwards of $100,000 of cash.

Hovertor has steadfastly maintained that prominent persons other than he figured largely in the transactions, receiving considerable sums of the money, and his statement under oath before the Grand Jury, if supported by the findings of the Department of Justice, it is believed will result in indictments being found against certain of the men accused by Hovertor.

The Government has long been in possession of Hovertor's complete statement, but has carefully guarded the identity of the men accused, meanwhile conducting an exhaustive examination into every phase of the statement.

There was "little to be desired" in the arrangement of things, except the lack of lemonade in the balconies during the music. And one other thing that ought to be done is to give the waiters small portable camp stools to save them that painful long wait.

UNION MEN ALLEGED P. R. R. SPY SYSTEM

Telegraphers' Head Tells Commission Company's Attitude Menace to Country.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The attitude of the Pennsylvania Railroad toward labor "constitutes a menace to the peace of this country," declared H. B. Perham, president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, before the United States Commission on Industrial Relations, here today. Mr. Perham also read a report by J. F. Riley, third vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, written in 1914, which declared that a system of espionage, "more perfect than the Russian secret service," employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, enabled it to organize efforts of railroad employees to subvert into unions.

One paragraph in Riley's report aroused the interest of the commission particularly. It was that in which he stated that he had been approached on one occasion by a man, presumably a Pennsylvania Railroad detective, who called his attention to the fact that certain labor organizers had mysteriously disappeared.

Riley's report declares that organizers of the Brotherhoods are shadowed in hotels, railroad trains, steamships and everywhere else they go by the secret service operatives of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Reports of their activities toward labor organizations are made to the Pennsylvania Railroad officials. Interruptions of social and business gatherings of railroad employees effected by the railroad detectives constitute an infringement of the constitutional guarantee of the rights of the people peaceably to assemble, the report alleges.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad furnished money and the Pennsylvania Railroad furnished talent to defeat an eight-hour-day bill for railway telegraphers in the Maryland Legislature recently, Perham testified. An affidavit relating to an alleged bribe of $750 offered a legislator to kill the bill at Annapolis was read by Perham.

Chairman Walter announced that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., had accepted service of a subpoena to appear May 18 and that Ivy Lee, Rockefeller's publicity agent; W. L. Mackenzie King, head of the Rockefeller Industrial Relations Investigation Board, and L. H. Bowers, chairman of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company's board during the Colorado strike, would appear May 19.

In connection with the commission's inquiries relative to free speech, free assembly, conspiracy cases, the use of injunctions, the blacklist and the boycott, which have existed for the next three weeks included ex-President William Howard Taft, Eugene V. Debs, Clarence Darrow, "Mother" Jones, Judge Alton B. Parker and Walter Drew, attorney for the National Erectors' Association.

Officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad in this city had no comment to make today on the statement made by Mr. Perham but asserted that the Industrial Relations Commission would take up the matters in connection with the Pennsylvania Railroad tomorrow, and evidence would be produced at that time which would more than offset that presented today.

Pennsylvania State Head Will Drop Tallisman Into "Melting Pot."
