They say in Monte Carlo that it is the terrific cannonading in the north which accounts for the storms that have recently shaken the "asure coast." Instead of wearing thin muslins, visitors go about wrapped in fura and last season's velvets. Yesterday I saw the Grand Duchess Anastasia in the Casino walking swiftly from table to table, and winning miraculously at each one; every time that she threw a coin upon the green cloth she picked up a handful of five-franc pieces. It is odd to see only five-franc pieces on the roulette tables, where in other years gold pieces and notes were stacked in glowing, alluring heaps. For any sum

AMUSING OURSELVES

T WAS Ruskin who said that recreation is only change of occupation, but the definition needs broadening today to include the host of pursuits, too frivolous or too whimsical to be called occupations, which at the same time constitute the recreation of multitudes-the fox-trot, for example.

Amusements monopolize a good share of space in the magazines, especially as spring advances, and the outdoors spreads out before us with alluring invitation. One of the earliest spring amusements is golf. It is described by Jerome Travers, the golf expert, in the American Magazine (1), not from a technical point of view, but from a very practical dollars-andcents basis.

cents basis. What does it cost to play goif? In the way of extremes, anything you want. You can enter, only you probably can't, the most exclusive club in the country for an initiation fee of $500. Or you can take up the game on a public course, where the fee is nothing, or perhaps $1, and where no dues are required. The average citizen and solfer, playing in the average town, can figure up his expenses. erane town, can figure up his expenses

Inconspicuously gowned, and as to the others—c'est la guerre, and great sums are not spent this year for clothes. Second-season gowns are many. At Ciro's there are many luncheon parties, and the Cafe de Paris is very well filled at the tea hour; but there seems to be an incurable shortage of little cakes, and the guests almost come to blows over a plate of brioche. Just before midnight a furtive figure or so each season runs up to $42,000,000, and this exclusive of the $17,500,000 paid for hefore midnight a furtive figure or so could be seen to creep from the exits of a great hotel. A little later wan creatures, shadows of their former selves, also limped forth. As if by signal, an army of sardonic chauffeurs drew up at the curb, and at about 1 o'clock a stream of hollow-eyed men, their clothes flap-ping on their shrunken frames, dumbly helped their haggard women folk across the sidewalk to irresistible taxis. Inside the hotel weaker brethren fell in con-cave exnaustion into chairs, while burlier, ronger males supported each other to

It was the end of a joyous public tribute to a beloved writer, a tribute under which, in spite of his most winning response, he seemed visibly to sink. Bad air, wine and tobacco had contributed to the result; but the real cause of havon was four mortal hours of unbridied oratory. It was testimony of this sort that was dear to students of fatigue. It proved the theory that our experience in fatigue and in some mild cases of gen-eral poisoning are similar; there is the same disinclination to exert one's self. the sleepiness, the slight fever, the head-
