RITZ-CARLTON GARDENS OPENED YESTERDAY

Society Patronizes the Roof Gardens During the First Day of Opening.

The new Ritz-Carlton roof gardens opened yesterday with great success at lunch time, music and dancing continuing throughout the afternoon and evening-

The gardens are unusually lovely and quite transport the visitor from the sordid earth in both senses of the word. The side of the building toward 13th street has been so arranged as to make it possible to inclose the entire space should the weather prove too cool, as was the ease last night.

The large double doors used for the incleaure are separated by wide columns, which are covered with trailing English ivy. The upper part of the room, which is celled over, is arranged with a wide ledge, which is filled in with rose begonias. The arches of the foof are outlined with tiny red electric lights, and in the west garden a beautiful fountain plays. The entire railing of the garden is covered with trailing vines and geraniums. The inclosed room and furniture was carried out in the Adam period which prevails throughout the Ritz-Cariton. Among those noted lunching were Mrs.

Barelay Warburton and her attractive daughter, Miss Mary Brown Warburton: Mrs. William H. Donner, Mr. and Mrs. J. Marechal Brown, Jr., Mrs. Samuel Me-Miss Mae Con-Hannah Wright and Miss Margaret Wright A party who lunched together included

"Walter, notified of this arrangement by letter to New York, fell in with it heart and soul. More stupidity, you see. Worse yet, he put it into effect. The arrangement was actually carried out last night. And again their luck turned against them. It so happened that both Miss Manwaring and Mr. Trego were sleepless last night and observed certain details of the conspiracy; and, to make matters worse, it was the very night chosen by the thief to steal my jewels.

At the door, he stood aside to give prec-edence to his stater, no longer Colum-bine, but a profoundly distressed and apprehensive blond person in a particuhen that came out they were all in panic-Walter, Adele and Mr. Lyttleton. They put their empty heads together to larly fetching negligee.

Among them they evolved another brilliant scheme; normally grave.

This last, bringing up the rear of the procession, closed the hall door at a sign from Mrs. Gosnold. The company found seats conspicuously apart, with the exception of Mrs. Standish and Savage, likewise Mercedes, who stuck to her dear Abigail as per invariable custom. Sally, Missh Manwaring must be kidnapped and hidden away in a safe place until the trouble had blown over. Miss Manwaring having ostensibly confessed her guilt by flight, suspicion of complicity in the theft would be diverted from Walter, on her part, found an aloof corner where she could observe without being readily Adele and Lyttleton; though they had positively no hand in the thing, they lacked the courage of their innocence, and said Mrs. Gosnold, taking her they argued that, when in their own good time they set the girl at liberty, she would be wanted by the police and "So," said Mrs. Goshold, raking the place heside the desk and raking the gathering with forbidden eye. Not nouncements to make, some news to imstupid, you see, but cold-bloodedly selfish part, and perhaps a question or two to ask. It's late, and I'm tired and short as well.

"Walter undertook to manage the business. He engaged a rascally chauffeur of his acquaintance and commandeered a closed car from my own garage, figuring that the kidnapping would be an accomplished fact long before the ma-chine could be wanted, while its absence would never arouse comment on a fete night. He then induced Miss Manwaring to consent to meet him in a conveniently secluded spot near the gate.

She smiled grimly.
"Kidnapped," she iterated with a sort of ferocious relish. "At my age, too. I don't wonder you're surprised. I was "I overheard something, enough to lead me to suspect there was something wrong afoot, and therefore persuaded wrong afoot, and therefore persuaded Miss Manwaring to lend me this costume So were my kidnappers, when they found out who I was. For, of course, it was a mistake. They were conventional kidnappers, with not an ounce of originality to bless themselves with, so naturally they had meant to kidnap a good-looking they had me youngster-Miss Manwaring in fact."
She nobbed vigorous affirmation of the statement. "So I'm told, at least; so away at such speed that Walter, who found out his mistake almost immediately, was unable to overtake me be fore I arrived at the spot chosen for Walter tells me; and he ought to know; Miss Manwaring's prison—a deserted shooting-lodge on the south shore. And Mr. Lyttleton (who, by the by, is leaving with Adele and Walter in the morning) on his own behalf arranged to direct suspicion of the robbery to Miss Man-waring, induced Mr. Mason to exceed my instructions and open the envelopes in my absence, and led Mr. Mason to Miss Manwaring's room, where, to his own stupendous surprise, there was found hidden one of the rings that had been stolen after she divorced Standish and had only her private means to support her insane passion for clothes and ostentation in general. She went to money-lenders—surers, in fact. And, of course, that only made it worse. Then Walter, who "But somebody must have made the plant," Trego argued. "There's no ques-tion, I take it, of Miss Manwaring's inhas never been overscrupulous, conceived the brilliant notion of squaring every-thing up for a new start by swindling None whatever!" Mrs. Gosnold affirmed. "Then why not Lyttleton as well as the burgiar-insurance people. Adele has always carried heavy insurance on her jewelry-almost the only sensible habit she ever contracted. And so they con-spired, like the two near-sighted idiots "That," Mrs. Gosnold said slowly, indeed reluctantly, "brings me to the fact that no confession has been made, as I had hoped it might be. That is to say, the jewels have not been restored. I am sorry. I have done all I could to protect the thief."

"You know—" Trego inquired.

Then they went to the Biltmore for dincer, and when it was dark Walter eneaked back home to burglarize the safe. I understand he made a very amateurish job of it. Into the bargain, he was observed. It seems that the servants had carelessly left the scottle open to the roof, and Miss Manwaring, caught there in a thunder storm, had taken shel-"I saw the theft committed," said Mrs. Gosnold. "It was done not for gain, but for the sole purpose of securing Miss Manwaring's discharge..."

A short, sharp cry interrupted her, and the momentary allence of astonishment that followed Mercedes Pride shut her eyes, sighed gently, slipped from the chair, and subsided to the floor in a
