With this she had left him dashed and

It was just this which rendered her position in Gosnoid House positively un-

And that, she declared in her solitude,

By the time she had succeeded in com-posing a note which seemed sufficiently grateful in tone to excuse the pitiful inadequacy of her excuse for absconding-that she was "out of her element" on the island, an outsider, and didn't "be-

She read the note over with hypercritical sensitiveness to its defects, but de-cided that it must do. Besides, she had used the last sheet of note paper in the rack on her desk; more was not ob-tainable without a trip to the living room.

Then in desperation she appended, under the sign of the venerable P. S., a prayer that this might prove acceptable in lieu of more gracious leave-taking, addressed the envelope to Mrs. Gosnold, and left it sticking conspicuously in the frame of her dressing mirror.

Studiously she reduced her traveling gear to the simplest requisites; the handbag she took because she had a use for or the return of everything she wore. She was determined to go out of this island world, whose ether was too rare for her vulgar lungs, with no more than she had brought into it. At length the laggard hands of the clock were close together on the figure 6.

She rose, let hurself out of the room, and by way of that memorable side door issued forth into a morning as rarely beautiful as ever that blessed island knew. It made renunciation doubly difficult. Yet Sally did not faiter nor once look back nor once look back.

Her way to the village wharf was short-of the cliff by way of its long, nigzag stairway. Few noticed her as she de-bouched from the beach into the village streets; her dress was inconspicuous, her demeanor even more than retiring.

Her hope was favored in that on this earlier trip of the boat there were a few passengers other than natives of the island.

On the mainland she caught an accommodation train which wound a halting way through the morning and set her down in Providence late in the fore-noon. Then ignorance of railroad travel made her choose another accommodation instead of an express which would have cost no more and landed her in New York an hour earlier.

Her flight was financed by a few dollars left over from her bridge winnings of the first day at Gosnoid House after subsequent losses had been paid. Their sum no more than sufficed; when she had purchased a meager lunch at the station counter in New Haven she was reempliess again; but for the clother.
